'Like Torture': for Californians with Special Needs, Getting to See a Dentist Can Take Years

By Kristen Hwang, CalMatters

The first time Namirah Jones visited the dentist at age 5, her meltdown brought the office to a halt. Her mother, Mia Costley, her grandmother and a dental assistant held her down while she screamed. The dentist couldn't even get a mirror in her mouth.

"That's when it was determined that no dentist could ever work on her; she would have to be put to sleep," Costley said from their apartment in Corona.

SHERIFF'S DEPUTY CORDERO TO BE EULOGIZED TODAY

By Paul J. Young
City News Service

RIVERSIDE - A fundraising effort on behalf of the family of a Riverside County sheriff's motorcycle patrolman who was slain by a convicted felon during a traffic stop exceeded expectations Wednesday, reaching six figures.

THE "Help A Hero" fundraiser for the loved ones of 32-year-old Deputy Isaiah Cordero topped $100,000 on Wednesday. The original goal was exactly that amount, prompting the page sponsor, the Riverside County Deputy Sheriff Relief Foundation, to establish a new goal of $200,000. The fundraiser will expire in March.

As of Wednesday, 1,264 people had made contributions. The page can be found here: <https://helpahero.com/campaign/deputy-isaiah-cordero>.

Cordero will be laid to rest on Friday following a public memorial service expected to draw hundreds of law enforcement officers from across the state to Riverside.

The service is scheduled at 11 a.m. at Harvest Christian Fellowship, 6115 Arlington Ave. A private burial will follow at an undisclosed location.

According to Harvest, the service will be livestreamed via the church's portal: www.harvest.church. Sheriff's officials also confirmed that the service will be broadcast via the department's social media pages -- Facebook and YouTube -- as well as the agency's main website: www.riversidesheriff.org.

Cordero's is the first line-of-duty death involving a Riverside County sheriff's deputy in 15 years.

He was killed shortly before 2 p.m. on Thursday in the 3900 block of Golden West Avenue, near Rathke Drive, less than a block from Rustic Lane Elementary School, which was not in session. The gunman died two hours

Report Analyzes Racial Profiling in California Traffic Stops

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California law enforcement was more than twice as likely to use force against people they perceived as Black during vehicle and pedestrian stops in 2021, as compared to people believed to be white, according to a state report released Tuesday.

THE annual report by California's Racial and Identity Profiling Advisory Board gathered data on vehicle and pedestrian stops by officers from 58 law enforcement agencies in 2021. The data includes what officers perceived to be the race, ethnicity, gender and disability status of people they stop so that the state can better identify and analyze bias in policing.

The 58 agencies - which includes the 23 largest departments in the state - collectively made more than 3.1 million vehicle and pedestrian stops in 2021. By April, all of California's more than 400 law enforcement agencies must submit their data.

The data includes how officers perceive an individual's race or gender, even if it's different than how the person identifies, because the officer's perception is what drives bias.

In more than 42% of the 3.1 million stops, the individual was perceived to be Hispanic or Latino, according to the report. More than 30% were perceived to be white and 15% were believed to be Black.

But law enforcement searched people who were perceived to be Black at 2.2 times the rate of people thought to be white, the report said. And teenagers 15 to 17 years who were perceived to be Black were searched at nearly six times the rate of teens believed to be white.

Strong Storm Batters Southland

Riverside – Following light to moderate rain falling across most of the Southland Wednesday, the brunt of the "bomb cyclone" moved across the state, with the full force of the storm hitting Riverside County Thursday morning.

THE National Weather Service had predicted "A strong Pacific storm system will affect the area...with strong winds, damaging surf, heavy rain with flooding and high elevation snow."

California Gov. Gavin Newsom declared a state of emergency to allow for a quick response and to aid in cleanup from another powerful storm that hit just days earlier.

"We anticipate that this may be one of the most challenging and impactful series of storms to touch down in California in the last five years," said Nancy Ward, the new director of the California Governor's Office of Emergency Services.

"Though the rain and winds are the main story for Thursday, high elevation

With the low pressure system tapping into warm atmospheric river moisture, snow levels are expected to be quite high ... above 7,000 feet during the heaviest precipitation. After the cold front passes Thursday afternoon, snow levels will drop to around 6,000 feet mountain snow will occur as well," according to the NWS. "With the low pressure system tapping into warm atmospheric river moisture, snow levels are expected to be quite high ... above 7,000 feet during the heaviest precipitation. After the cold front passes Thursday afternoon, snow levels will drop to around 6,000 feet."

Above 7,000 feet, snowfall accumulations could exceed 12 inches, while an inch or less may accumulate at the lower mountain levels, forecasters said.

The storms won't be enough to officially end the state's ongoing drought, now entering its fourth year. The U.S. Drought Monitor showed that most of California is in severe to extreme drought. Since the state's major reservoirs are low, they have plenty of room to fill with more water from the storm, officials said.

Still, trees are already stressed from years of limited rain. Now that the grounds are suddenly saturated and winds are heavy, trees are more likely to fall. That could cause widespread power outages or create flood hazards, said Karla Nemeth, director of the state's Department of Water Resources.

"We are in the middle of a flood emergency and also in the middle of a drought emergency," she said during an emergency briefing.

A series of "weak disturbances" are anticipated over the weekend, but "there will likely be drier and less cloudy intervals in between the clouds and rain," forecasters said.

Temperatures, meanwhile, will remain about six degrees cooler than normal through the weekend.

According to meteorologists, the storm train, which began last month with a dip in the jet stream, shows no signs of letting up, with additional inclement weather anticipated Sunday night through Tuesday.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 6, 2021, supporters of President Donald Trump, fueled by his false claims of a stolen election, assaulted police and smashed their way into the Capitol to interrupt the certification of Democrat Joe Biden's victory, forcing lawmakers into hiding; most of the rioters had come from a nearby rally where Trump urged them to "fight like hell." A Trump supporter, Ashli Babbitt, was shot and killed by a police officer as she tried to breach a barricaded doorway inside the Capitol. Capitol Police Officer Brian Sicknick, injured while confronting the rioters, suffered a stroke the next day and died from natural causes, the Washington, D.C., medical examiner's office said. (In the weeks that followed, four of the officers who responded to the riot took their own lives.) Congress reconvened hours later to finish certifying the election result.

CONNOR COOKS

By Connor Forbes

I am always on a quest for new and easy sides to make for my family. I always try to put a green, a starch, and a protein on their plates. And one of my favorite vegetables growing up and today is zucchini. There is something about the texture of a meaty zucchini with a soft and pull apart inside. The flavor is rich and earthy and will take on flavors that you cook it with. So I will keep this recipe to the simplest of ingredients, but as with all my recipes, experiment with different seasonings to see what you really connect with. Let's make zucchini.

Ingredients

- 2 zucchinis, 1/4" slices
- 1 tbsp olive oil
- Pinch of salt
- Pinch of pepper

To Make

In a bowl combine the zucchini slices, olive oil, salt, and pepper, and mix thoroughly. On a stovetop heat a pan over medium high heat. Let the pan heat for 2-3 minutes. Add in the zucchini to the pan taking care to have as many zucchinis as flat as possible on the pan to get a good sear. If you have a smaller pan, you may want to cook in batches. Cook for 5-7 minutes undisturbed, then flip. Cook for another 5-7 minutes or desired tenderness. And Eat!

I served these with hamburgers.

Achieve New Year's Resolution Success with Helpful Planning Tools

The new year is often a time to set new goals. However, statistics show that very few people are successful in keeping their resolutions. Why?

Likely, because they don't have a realistic, long-term plan. And, as Ben Franklin said, "If you fail to plan, you are planning to fail."

THIS year, create "S M A R T" goals—as in Specific, Measurable, Achievable, Relevant and Timely. Here are a few ideas on how to set yourself up for success with some of the most common New Year's resolutions.

1. FOCUS ON FITNESS

According to a survey of adults who made a New Year's resolution, the most popular goal (48%) was to exercise more. The best way to stick to it is to do something you enjoy. So whether it's running, biking or yoga, find a way to make it fun. That might mean purchasing new workout clothes or equipment or finding a friend to join in to socialize with and to keep you going. Just remember to start slow, track your progress and you'll soon be getting fit in your favorite way.

2. CONNECT WITH FAMILY AND FRIENDS

With busy schedules, staying connected with friends and family can be difficult. Resolving to keep in touch can be easy though, thanks to new digital tools. Luckily, a subscription service like AmericanGreetings.com allows you to send a variety of digital greetings for any holiday or occasion. To ensure you keep in touch, the personalized greeting cards can be pre-scheduled for delivery by email up to one year in advance or can be sent via text or social media.

Plus, you can even include a gift card. Best of all, one subscription unlocks access to the entire American Greetings' online library, including SmashUps video greetings, Creatacard digital cards, and Pics & Wishes multi-media messages. Subscriptions are $6.99 per month or $29.99 per year.

3. IMPROVE FINANCES

If improving your finances is one of your goals, the best place to start is to track your previous year's expenses and categorize them. You might be shocked how those daily lattes or online impulse buys add up! Then, find a financial system that works for you. This could be as simple as a spreadsheet outlining and recording your set expenses and discretionary funds; or syncing your data to your online accounts utilizing a budget-tracking app. Once your system is in place, you'll be able to find areas for improvement and set new financial goals for the future.

4. GET ORGANIZED

Getting organized is always a top resolution for the new year—and managing your schedule is a simple way to relieve stress and improve productivity. Start by outlining your daily, weekly or monthly commitments with a planner or online calendar. Google Calendar, for example, is a free option that allows you to view and color code appointments by category. Plus, by recording and prioritizing your responsibilities, you'll also be able to see your free time, so you can make time for things you enjoy.

5. MAKE TIME FOR MENTAL HEALTH

In addition to improving physical fitness, managing mental wellness should be at the top of the resolution list. According to Mental Health First Aid, Americans cited enhanced self-confidence (64%), increased productivity (67%), and increased happiness (71%) as the top benefits of mental self-care. So, start your year by adding "mental break" moments to your daily and weekly schedule (maybe on your new calendar). Self-care can be anything from meditation and sleep, to cooking or reading, as long as it helps you decompress, unwind and find your mental zen.

New Year's resolutions can feel overwhelming; but by using available tools to plan ahead and keep you on track, you'll have realistic ways to achieve your goals. (StatePoint)

Resolve to Protect Your Finances and Your Family in the New Year

After a holiday season spent racking up credit card bills, many Americans consider making financial resolutions in the New Year. However, now is the perfect time to not only reevaluate your saving and spending, but also commit to creating a more holistic financial plan designed to protect your finances and your family.

Consumers are seeking stability and preparedness in today's uncertain economic environment, according to a recent Consumer Sentiment Tracker study by Lincoln Financial Group. With ongoing inflation and market volatility, 56% of respondents cited protection from risk as being most important to them. When it comes to thinking about their finances, people said they have the greatest interest in protecting their family (39%) followed by their income (26%).

"Our research reinforced the importance of financial solutions that can help consumers navigate through market cycles and protect their loved ones," said David Berkowitz, president, Lincoln Financial Network, Lincoln Financial's wealth management business. "People are not only concerned about having enough to pay their bills, but also saving for retirement and preparing for the unexpected. It's important to have a well-rounded financial plan that can address those risks, protect assets and create positive outcomes for today's families."

To achieve a stronger financial future, don't neglect your finances in 2023 — instead, add a little TLC (Talk, Learn, Commit). Resolve to create a robust financial plan using these three tips from Lincoln Financial:

1. Talk about it. Financial conversations play a crucial role. Be transparent with your loved ones about financial priorities so you can set expectations and work toward your shared financial goals. Initiate ongoing discussions to stay on track with everything from saving for retirement to paying for a long-term healthcare event, which can happen suddenly and be very costly. Also, consider talking to a financial professional who can help identify solutions that best meet your individual needs, as well as drive better

Resolving to Get in Shape in 2023? Don't Forget Your Feet

While you may want to tone your abs, glutes and triceps in the new year, there's one often-overlooked area of the body that deserves your attention too: your feet!

“A lot of people hit the gym or dust off their home exercise equipment in January,” says Danielle Butto, DPM, FACFAS, a board-certified foot and ankle surgeon and a Fellow Member of the American College of Foot and Ankle Surgeons (ACFAS). “But without proper precautions, a new exercise routine can cause foot and ankle injuries that could sideline you just as you're hitting your stride.”

According to ACFAS, here's what to know as you follow through on your resolution to get fit:

Common Injuries

- Don't play through the pain of an ankle sprain. Avoiding treatment can not only cause further damage to the ligaments which may take much longer to heal or possibly require surgery, but you may be overlooking

(c) kazuma seki / iStock via Getty Images Plus a more serious injury -- a stress fracture.

- A stress fracture may feel like an ankle sprain at first, but you'll notice additional warning signs, such as swelling without bruising, and pain even during normal activities or when touching the area. If you have any of these symptoms, have your foot and ankle evaluated by a foot and ankle surgeon as soon as possible.

- Pain or swelling around your Achilles tendon after a workout could be indications of Achilles tendonitis. Untreated, a stretched or strained Achilles tendon may worsen over time, leading to stiffness and fatigue in your injured leg. Worse yet, untreated Achilles tendonitis could result in a ruptured tendon requiring surgery and a rehabilitation of several months.

- Heel pain that lasts for more than a day or two, or worsens when you stand after sitting for an extended amount of time, may be plantar fasciitis. This common condition is a result of inflammation of the tissue extending from your heel to your toes. If caught early, your foot and ankle surgeon can recommend at-home conditioning. In late stages, plantar fasciitis is harder to treat and takes longer to resolve.

Prevention Tips

The good news? Many injuries are preventable. Foot and ankle surgeons offer five tips to help you keep your feet and ankles healthy:

1. Be smart. Consider consulting a personal trainer at first to ensure you're practicing good form, and to increase the duration and intensity of your workouts gradually and safely.

2. Stretch. Incorporate mobility and stretching into your fitness regimen, particularly before and after workouts.

3. Be footwear aware. Wear properly-fitting athletic shoes that support the arch of the foot, provide heel cushioning and are designed for the exercise in which you're engaged. These measures can help you avoid plantar fasciitis and neuromas. Wear cotton or nonslip socks to help prevent painful blisters, which can become infected and cause more serious issues, especially if you have diabetes.

4. Guard against bacteria. Sweaty shoes, public showers, exercise equipment and the pool deck are breeding grounds for fungus, viruses and bacteria. Wear water shoes in public areas, and after workouts, and get your feet clean and dry quickly.

5. Book an appointment. Foot and ankle pain isn't normal. It signals a problem that needs to be evaluated, diagnosed and treated by a specialist who fully understands this part of the body. To find a foot and ankle surgeon near you, use the “Find a Physician” search tool at FootHealthFacts.org.

“When you exercise, your feet and ankles do a ton of work holding you up and absorbing the shock of each step you take,” says Dr. Butto. “So, as you kick off your new fitness routine, don't forget to protect them.” (StatePoint) outcomes. Lincoln's research found those who work with financial professionals are more likely to prioritize retirement savings (26% vs. 10%).

2. Learn more about tax-deferred investments. Life insurance can be more than just a death benefit, with some types of policies offering income replacement for unforeseen events. It can also protect your financial security from the impact of taxes, market volatility and longevity. It's not just for individuals and families either, but businesses too. Also, consider diversifying your portfolio with an annuity, which can provide protected growth and monthly lifetime income to help cover expenses in retirement and ensure you have a stream of income.

3. Commit to maximizing your workplace benefits. Look into supplemental coverages like disability, accident and life insurance that may be available through your employer. Solutions like these protect against unexpected events that can disrupt your ability to provide for your family or drive you into additional debt. If you have an employer-sponsored retirement plan, make sure you are contributing and getting a match, if offered. Tap into any financial wellness tools offered at work to help provide you with an accurate picture of your holistic financial situation and lower stress.

Special Needs Dentists

thousands of patients across the state whose disabilities — ranging from cognitive and physical disabilities like autism and cerebral palsy to complex health conditions like Alzheimer's and Parkinson's — require sedation during dental procedures, making basic dental care largely inaccessible.

A typical dental office cannot perform general anesthesia, nor can it accommodate other disabilities requiring wheelchair lifts or other specialized equipment.

Instead, disabled patients languish on waiting lists for years at the few places that can see them — usually dental schools. When they get an appointment, it's frequently a financial hardship requiring time off from work for caregivers, long drives from remote areas of the state, overnight hotel stays and out-of-pocket surgical fees.

"For more serious procedures people can be waiting for a year, which if you think about it, living with dental pain for a year is like torture," said Tony Anderson, executive director of Valley Mountain Regional Center in Stockton. Regional centers oversee the coordination and delivery of services for Californians with disabilities.

The situation is untenable, said California Dental Association president Ariane Terlet. The association requested that the legislature include $50 million in the 2022 budget to build special needs clinics and surgery centers across the state. And those funds were in fact appropriated.

The expansion of settings for patients with special health care needs is long overdue and will significantly increase access to oral health care," Dr. Terlet said. "We are thrilled the governor and legislature recognize the dire need for this investment to ensure health equity so that patients have timely access to oral health care."

Jones is non-verbal and, like many people with autism spectrum disorder, is hypersensitive to certain sights, sounds and sensations, making the dentist's office a nightmare. In 2019, she began touching her mouth repeatedly. Her mother worried she was in pain and called Loma Linda University School of Dentistry, where she had previously been able to get her teeth cleaned under sedation. This time, they said her weight gain made the procedure too risky.

UC San Diego said Jones, then 16, was too old for their pediatric clinic. The University of Southern California never called back. Only UCLA's dental school would see her, but the next available appointment was 16 months out. It would be another three months from the initial visit before Jones could be scheduled for surgery. She fought the anesthesiologist until she fell asleep — all for a routine teeth cleaning and cavity filling.

"As her parent and caregiver, it's triggering and traumatizing to watch," Costley said.

Not enough providers Without a centralized database, the number of patients that need special dental care is hard to quantify. Approximately 1.3 million children, or 15% of all children, in the state have chronic physical, developmental or behavioral conditions — although of course not all of those require special dentistry. The Department of Developmental Services also serves an estimated 330,000 individuals with disabilities. And California's growing aging population includes 690,000 seniors with Alzheimer's disease.

But, according to the dental association, there are only 14 dental schools and surgery centers that can handle these special needs patients. Some hospitals give dentists admitting privileges to perform surgery, but they say it's often difficult to book operating time.

"When I started, roughly

20% of our adult consumers needed hospital dentistry or surgery center dentistry," said Karissa McGuffin, dental coordinator at Valley Mountain Regional Center, which serves San Joaquin, Stanislaus, Amador, Calaveras and Tuolumne counties

McGuffin was hired in 2019 to address the severe need for dental care among the center's 18,000 consumers. The inability to find a dentist was the No. 1 issue facing their clients, she said, and 20% is likely an undercount

One of the primary reasons it's so difficult to find a dentist is that most don't accept Medi-Cal, the state health plan for its poorest residents, which a majority of people with disabilities rely on. In 2021, about 36% of active licensed dentists in the state accepted Medi-Cal. That number has grown by about 10% since 2017, when the state increased reimbursement rates. However, the number of Medi-Cal enrollees has also grown, reaching 14 million in the past two years.

"In our five counties we don't have a single (hospital) or surgery center for dentistry that takes Medi-Cal," Anderson said

Even private insurance is reluctant to reimburse a dentist for anesthesia, frequently claiming that it's not medically necessary, said Richard Barnes, a dentist in Visalia who runs a private practice and surgery center

Barnes built his surgery center specifically to address the lack of special needs providers in his area. Initially he accepted all insurance, but he said he had to start charging $850 out-of-pocket for anesthesia in order to keep his practice afloat

"We were writing off close to $1 million a year because (insurers) weren't paying," Barnes said.

He subsidizes the loss from the surgery center with the rest of his dental practice. In a normal year, he sees around 2,000 special needs patients from across the state — but he still wishes he could do more

"The phone rings all day long, but we're excluding a lot of patients right now because we have to charge them," Barnes said.

According to a 2018 report from the Legislative Analyst's Office on improving dental access for patients with disabilities, only a third of Medi-Cal enrollees received any dental care between 2014 and 2016 while even fewer regional center clients — 20% — saw a dentist in the same time period.

Nowhere to turn

With few options, special needs patients and their families drive hours to see a dentist, said Eric Sung, chair of special patient care at UCLA's dental school and Jones' dentist. About 36% of Sung's patients drive between one and two hours to the UCLA clinic while an additional 30% drive more than two hours.

"They're coming in from Palm Desert or Lancaster and Bakersfield," Sung said. "I'm getting people from really far away."

Rebecca Creede's son, CJ, is one of those patients. CJ, 9, is autistic and broke a tooth a few months ago.

"The ones that are supposed to accept Medi-Cal can't do the work, and they're dumbfounded. They don't know where to send you," Creede said. In the past two years, Creede, who lives in Redding, has driven CJ to Stockton, San Francisco and most recently Visalia for dental care. It's exasperating, Creede said, because CJ is non-verbal and can't tell her if he's in pain. Every dead end is another day that he might be suffering.

"It's really frustrating that there's not somewhere in local areas or in each region that can take care of your kids with special needs," Creede said.

Eventually, she found Barnes in Visalia. The Creede family saved up money for two months in order to afford the out-of-pocket anesthesia fee. They rented a car and a hotel room and drove seven hours south. It cost them $2,500 altogether. CJ got a root canal and dental restoration on two teeth

"Dr. Barnes, he was absolutely amazing," Creede said, but he shouldn't be the only one who could treat CJ. Frequently she sees messages from parents in local special needs Facebook groups asking where to find a dentist for their kids.

"I comment that we had to go to Visalia, and they're like, 'Are you serious?'" Creede said. "A lot of people don't have the means."

It's even harder for adults with special and complex health needs to find a dentist. Medi-Cal is more likely to reimburse sedation for children than for adults, and while many pediatric dentists have some experience working with special needs patients, most adult dentists do not.

Although use of Medi-Cal dental benefits among all adults has doubled in the past seven years, it still remains far below childhood visits. In 2019, nearly two-thirds of Medi-Cal kids ages 6-9 had an annual dental exam while only 22% of adults ages 21-34 and 27% of seniors ages 65-74 saw a dentist.

"You get told no a lot," said Laura Mulvihill, whose 26-year-old son Troy has severe autism and a seizure disorder. "I just kind of gave up after a while. A lot of parents give up."

Troy hadn't seen a dentist for 16 years before they found Barnes. Like the Creedes, Mulvihill had to get a hotel room and drive four hours to get to the clinic. Troy had three cavities

It's a common story, said Sung, the dentist at UCLA, where the waiting list is more than a year long. "A lot of families, literally when I see them on screening day, meaning one year after they called, say it's been a decade or more since they've seen a dentist," Sung said

By the time adult special needs patients find a dentist that can accommodate them, their dental disease may have become severe.

"Unfortunately, once in a while it's not one or two cavities, it's 20 cavities or we're taking a lot of teeth out," Sung said. Improving access improves outcomes.

For a lot of special needs patients, facilities designed to handle their needs could cut down wait times and reduce the need for sedation, which carries risks.

Desensitization to simple procedures is possible for patients with mild to moderate behavioral difficulties. Patients with physical disabilities, too, generally just need a facility with wheelchair lifts or a space that can accommodate a gurney.

Richard Kunihiro, a dentist in the Inland Empire, has operating room privileges at Kaiser Fontana but tries to reduce patients' need for sedation to once every two years or so. He takes the time to get patients used to the dental office and the sensations in their mouth and teaches parents and caregivers how to gently brush their teeth at home.

At his private practice, he sees one to three special needs patients a day, 80% of whom are on the autism spectrum and a majority of whom are on the moderate to severe end. Some of the patients who previously struggled now allow teeth cleaning and X-rays to be done without sedation. It's hard, however, for most practices to operate this way.

"Most dentists aren't going to find that spending the time is economically feasible," Kunihiro said. "It is unfortunately the nature of the system."

The state Department of Health Care Services now allows dentists to bill Medi-Cal for extra time spent on special needs patients, but the time must be accompanied by a procedure.

"There might not be a procedure (to reimburse)," Sung said. "You need to desensitize them, have them come in, visit you and perhaps not perform work at all. The second time, come a little bit closer. Look in your mouth and maybe touch therapy just so that they get used to the whole experience, the new environment."

But if more dentists were able to accommodate special needs patients, it would help those with more intensive needs.

"The problem is, the number of people able and willing to see special needs patients in the private sector is fairly low," Sung said. "They are referring to university. So, when we see that population plus the extremely sick, we're basically being overwhelmed."

Back in Corona, Jones, 19, hurriedly jams a toothbrush in her mouth for barely 10 seconds before putting it down.

"You're doing good. You're doing awesome," Costley says, taking over. She holds her daughter's hand and gently runs the bristles over Jones' teeth and tongue. "Uh uh, we're almost done," Costley says when Jones tries to push her hand away.

Jones has made a lot of progress in the past three years. She's learning how to brush her teeth, do the laundry and wash the dishes. She's less combative and doesn't exhibit as many signs of frustration. Right now, Costley is teaching her how to use a speaking device to answer yes/no questions and increase her vocabulary. She has her practice the phrase "I want burrito," and when Costley asks if Jones loves her, she giggles and presses the "yes" button.

In a lot of ways Jones is just like any other teenager. She tries to get out of her chores and loves to hide in her room. Her bed sports a Rick and Morty bedspread, and accents of hot pink (her favorite color) adorn the room. She's been listening to a lot of Lizzo and 90s R&B and likes to watch "King of the Hill" on TV. Her favorite body sprays are neatly lined up on a shelf.

Despite the progress she has made, Costley doesn't think Jones will ever be able to see a dentist without sedation.

"She doesn't like brushing her teeth. She has to be prompted. I think it's a sensory issue. She doesn't like the top brushed or the tongue," Costley said.

Although her daughter's teeth seem fine now, Costley is preparing to put in a request for an appointment at UCLA. She knows the year and a half wait means they have to start planning now.

"My daughter is not a burden," she said. "It's everything else that's a burden."

Deputy Murder

later in a freeway gunfight with deputies.

"My heart goes out to the family, friends, and colleagues of Deputy Isaiah Cordero," Attorney General Rob Bonta said on Friday. "Deputy Cordero will forever be remembered for his extraordinary service protecting the people of California."

The Los Angeles Police Department also saluted "our brothers and sisters at the Riverside County Sheriff's Department" amid their suffering, and the Riverside Police Department praised Cordero as "a hero."

"We stand beside our brothers and sisters from the sheriff's department as they mourn their tragic loss. May you rest in peace, good sir."

The Riverside Sheriffs' Association, which represents the nearly 4,000 line deputies countywide, remembered Cordero as "a ray of sunshine ... a person who was dedicated to protecting others."

The most recent funerals at Harvest for law enforcement officers were in 2019, involving California Highway Patrol Officer Andre Moye Jr. and CHP Sgt. Steve Licon. Thousands of people, including peace officers from throughout the state and some from other parts of the country, were in attendance.

Cordero began his career as a correctional deputy, working the county jails from 2014 to 2017. He attended the academy again in 2018 to serve as a patrol deputy and was eventually accepted onto the motor unit, where he worked as a patrolman in Jurupa Valley from September to December 2022.

On Thursday, Sheriff Chad Bianco said the eight-year law enforcement veteran "embodied our motto, 'Service Above Self.'" "All of our deputies considered him to be a little brother," Bianco said during a news briefing outside sheriff's headquarters in downtown Riverside.

Bianco said Cordero stop-

Riverside Sheriff's and California Highway Patrol officers block off the southbound 15 traffic just north of the 6th Street overpass in Norco, about a half-mile from the final shoot-out in which Deputy Cordero's assailant was shot dead.

ped 44-year-old William S. McKay of San Bernardino, a three-strike felon, for reasons still under investigation but possibly related to irregularities with the black pickup he was driving.

According to the sheriff, McKay's criminal history included convictions for kidnapping, assault on a California Highway Patrol canine and armed robbery.

"This tragedy should have been (prevented) by the criminal justice system," Bianco said. "This suspect was on his third strike in 2021. But instead of receiving a sentence of 25 years to life in state prison, a judge lowered his bail. He failed to appear for sentencing ... and the same judge released him again. We would not be here today if this judge had done her job."

San Bernardino County Superior Court documents show that the judge was Cara D. Hutson, out of the Rancho Cucamonga branch. She was re-elected in June and has been a judicial officer since 2007.

"(McKay) should have been immediately sentenced. The judge allowed him out, and here we are today," Bianco said.

The felon led a phalanx of law enforcement personnel on a roughly two-hour pursuit that started in San Bernardino and ended on southbound Interstate 15 in Norco, where his pickup crashed after the rear tires, which had blown after going over a police spike strip, caused the axle to fail.

Bianco alleged that McKay fired at law enforcement officers as they surrounded him. They returned fire and killed him, the sheriff said.

Cordero is survived by his parents, Gilbert and Rebecca Cordero, along with an older stepbrother.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on this property.

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924q of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (866)-960-8299 or visit this Internet Web site <https://www.altisource.com/loginpage.aspx> using the file number assigned to this case 2022-01362-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction, if conducted after January 1, 2021, pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (855)-976-3916, or visit this internet website <https://tracker.auction.com/sb1079>, using the file number assigned to this case 2022-01362-CA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid, by remitting the funds and affidavit described in Section 2924m(c) of the Civil Code, so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase.

The Director of the Department of Industrial Relations ("DIR") has determined the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which this work is to be performed for each craft or type of worker needed to execute the Contract which will be awarded to the successful bidder, copies of which are on file and will be made available to any interested party upon request at Owners office or online at <http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlsr>. A copy of these rates shall be posted by the successful bidder at the Project site.

Pursuant to SB 854, which amended the Prevailing Wage Laws, this Contract is subject to compliance monitoring and enforcement by the DIR. Beginning March 1, 2015, with very limited exceptions no contractor or subcontractor may be listed on a bid proposal for this Contract unless registered with the DIR pursuant to Labor Code section 1725.5. The successful bidder and their subcontractor(s) shall comply with all applicable Prevailing Wage Laws, which include, but are not limited to the payment of not less than the required prevailing rates to all workers employed by them in the execution of the Contract, the employment of apprentices, the hours of labor, the payment of overtime, and the debarmament of contractors and subcontractors.
