CORONA TAX PREPARER ADMITS CREATING FRAUDULENT RETURNS

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - A Corona tax preparer who filed fraudulent returns over a five-year period could face up to nine years in federal prison when he's sentenced in October.

SALVADOR Gonzalez pleaded guilty Monday to three counts of aiding and assisting in the preparation of false tax returns.

The plea agreement with the U.S. Attorney's Office was announced during a hearing before U.S. District Judge Jesus Bernal at the federal courthouse in downtown Riverside. Bernal scheduled a sentencing hearing for Oct. 7.

Each count carries a maximum three-year prison term.

Gonzalez remains free on bond.

He was arrested in March 2023 after a federal grand jury handed down a 47-count indictment.

According to the U.S. Attorney's Office, the defendant operated Grace's Lighthouse Resource Center Inc., and from 2016 to 2021, he "prepared income tax returns for individuals and corporate clients to submit to the IRS that claimed tens of thousands of dollars in bogus business losses."

"Gonzalez directed his clients to create a phony corporation and to title their homes, cars and other assets in the name of the corporation," the agency stated. "Gonzalez then referred those clients to an associate to prepare these sham corporations' tax returns."

Prosecutors said the defendant arranged for customers to submit business and personal expenses, including mortgage and car payments, as well as utility bills, indicating a "loss" at the end of every tax cycle.

CHINO — Two pilots from the Yanks Air Museum in Chino were killed aboard a vintage plane that crashed and burst into flames soon after takeoff from the city airport during a weekend Father's Day event hosted by the museum, authorities said Sunday.

The Federal Aviation Administration said the twin-engine

Lockheed 12A crashed shortly after 12:30 p.m. Saturday, just west of Chino Airport in San Bernardino County.

Firefighters doused the flames within 10 minutes before finding the two people dead inside, said Chino Valley Fire District Battalion Chief Bryan Turner.

Port of Long Beach Approves Plan to Shift More Cargo to Rail From Trucks

LONG BEACH (CNS) - A Long Beach commission approved a $760 million budget for fiscal year 2024-25, representing a 19.5% increase from last year's adopted spending plan, officials announced today.

THE increase in spending plan is largely due to infrastructure projects like the Pier B On-Dock Rail Support Facility, which is expected to break ground this summer, as well as the proposed Pier Wind.

Pier B will shift more cargo to "on-dock rail," where containers are taken to and from marine terminals by trains. Moving cargo by on-dock rail is cleaner and more efficient, as it reduces truck traffic. No cargo trucks would visit the facility.

If approved, Pier Wind would be the nation's largest facility designed to assemble offshore wind turbines.

Also included in the budget is approximately $25 million in Clean Truck Fund subsidies to support the transition of the heavy-duty truck fleet to zero emissions. The Port of Long Beach has twin goals of a zero-emissions cargo-handling fleet by 2030 and zero-emissions trucking by 2035.

"Because trade, construction and tourism support 51,000 jobs in Long Beach -- or one in five jobs -- it's important we stay focused on attracting business, building for the future and moving cargo sustainably," Harbor Commission President Bobby Olvera Jr. said in a statement. "This budget advances these goals by leveraging our stable financial strength as a top gateway for global commerce."

Officials noted that the port does not use tax revenue to support its operations.

Highest Mortgage Rates Since Late 2023 Dampen SoCal Home Sales

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - Mortgage rates that surged to their highest levels since late last year hampered home sales in Southern California last month, while the median home price across the state exceeded $900,000 for the second straight month to set another record high, the California Association of Realtors said Tuesday.

THE median home price in Riverside County remained steady in May since the previous month at $650,000, a 3.3% increase from last year at this time.

May's sales pace in California dipped 1.1% from the revised 275,540 homes sold in April and were down 6.0% from a year ago, when a revised 289,860 homes were sold on an annualized basis. The sales pace remained below the 300,000-threshold for the 20th consecutive month, and year-to-date home sales were flat, according to CAR.

Stronger sales of higher-priced properties continued to contribute to solid median price growth, especially since million-dollar home sales in California have been rising more rapidly than their more affordable counterparts in the state. Sales in the million-dollar-and-higher market segment rose 15.5% year-over-year in May, while sales in the sub-$500,000 segment declined by 12.2%. Sales of homes priced above a $1 million now make up 36.6% of all sales -- the biggest share in at least the last five years, figures showed.

"A persistent shortage of homes for sale, particularly in the more affordable market segments, continued to push up California's median home price to new record highs over the past couple of months," CAR Senior Vice President and Chief Economist Jordan Levine said. "With mortgage rates coming back down from their recent peaks and market competition heating up, the statewide median price may have more room to grow before the summer ends."

All major regions experienced an increase in their median price from a year ago. The San Francisco Bay Area posted the biggest price jump on a year-over-year basis, increasing 11.9% from last May. Along with Southern California at 10.0%, they were the only two regions recording a double-digit gain from a year ago, CAR found.

The median price in the Los Angeles metro area remained steady in May since the previous month at $840,000, a 9.8% increase from last year at this time. The median price in Los Angeles County decreased by 1.7%, from $825,970 in April to $811,610 last month.

Orange County saw its median home price decrease 1.2% from April to $1.42 million, 13.2% higher than last year at this time.

In Southern California, the lowest median price was Imperial County's $405,000, a 7.3% increase from April.

The statewide median price in May was $908,040, up 0.4% from April and up 8.7% from $835,280 in May 2023.

The median number of days it took to sell a single-family home in Riverside County was 30 days in May, one day more than in May of last year.

College of the Desert Launches Program for Currently, Formerly Incarcerated

PALM DESERT (CNS) - College of the Desert is rolling out an educational initiative Tuesday for formerly and currently incarcerated people.

Through an approximately $1.5 million grant from the California Community Colleges' Rising Scholars Network, the program will fund on-site classes for young adults in carceral systems and resources for students who have been incarcerated in the past.

"By investing in these students, we are empowering a society where everyone has access to learning opportunities for personal and professional growth," Dean of Counseling Amanda Phillips said in a statement. "The Rising Scholars program will inspire those who have experienced the criminal justice system by providing them with the tools they need to succeed."

The $1,545,454 grant, which covers an initial five-year period, will apply toward an inaugural program on campus this fall.

The Rising Scholars Network, a byproduct of Corrections to College

California, seeks to "increase public awareness of the benefits of career and education options for students who are and were formerly incarcerated," according to COD spokesperson Nicholas Robles.

"We're pleased to announce that nearly 25% of youth enrolled or detained at Indio Juvenile Hall are eligible for college, while 80% of Indio's Pathways to Success program participants are eligible to attend this year," Christopher H. Wright, chief probation officer of the Riverside County Probation Department, said in a statement.

Additional information about the program can be found at <https://risingscholarsnetwork.org/>.

Chino Air Crash

The museum has acknowledged the identities on its website.

"We can now confirm the names of those involved in the crash of our Lockheed 12A Electra Junior: Yanks Chief Operating Officer Frank Wright, and Pilot-in-Command Michael "Mike" Gilles. Mike was from Aliso Viejo, CA, and had been the Pilot-in-Command of the Lockheed 12A for Yanks during the last several years. He held an Airline Transport Certificate, Multi-Engine Instructor Certificate, and a current and valid medical certificate. Mike flew as captain on the Lockheed 12 in the left seat on the day of the incident. The airplane was not required to have two rated pilots on board, but Frank assisted in flying procedures and operations from the right seat."

The crash occurred during the Yanks Air Pops & Props event.

"At this time we are working with local authorities and the FAA. Yanks Air Museum will be closed until further notice as our family deals with this tragedy, and we appreciate your patience and respect for our privacy as we navigate through this difficult time," the air museum said on Facebook.

The museum has hundreds of restored airplanes.

In its statement, the museum went on to disclose, "Yanks is still cooperating with authorities in their investigation of the incident. Several people close to Yanks have been invaluable in their assistance to the families during this tragedy, and we would like to thank them as well as everyone who has expressed their condolences and support over the last few days. The museum remains closed as we navigate through this difficult time."

California's Democratic Leaders Clash with Businesses Over Curbing Retail Theft. Here's What to Know

By TRÂN NGUYỄN
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — With retail theft increasing, California Democratic leadership is clashing with a coalition of law enforcement and business groups in a fierce political fight over how to crack down on the problem. State lawmakers are trying to preserve progressive policies and stay away from putting more people behind bars.

THE two most likely paths under consideration this year are a ballot initiative to create harsher penalties for repeat offenders, and a legislative package aimed at making it easier to go after professional crime rings.

Leaders behind the two efforts have accused one another of misleading voters and being unwilling to work toward a compromise.

How did we get here?

Both sides agree on the need to crack down, especially on large-scale thefts in which groups of people brazenly rush into stores and take goods in plain sight.

At the center of the escalating political fight is Proposition 47, a progressive ballot measure passed by voters in 2014 that reduced certain theft and drug possession offenses from felonies to misdemeanors — in part to mitigate overcrowding in jails and prisons. That includes nonviolent property crimes such as thefts under $950.

It has made it harder to arrest and punish people who shoplift, law enforcement said. Researchers told lawmakers there's no evidence linking the proposition to increased violent crime rates.

How are the two solutions different?

A coalition of district attorneys and businesses, mostly funded by big box retailers, is pushing for an initiative to bring harsh penalties for shoplifting and drug offenses. It would make theft of any amount a felony if the person already has two theft convictions.

Possession of fentanyl would also become a felony, and those with multiple drug charges would be ordered to get treatment.

The ballot measure would still need to be certified by the Secretary of State before it could be placed on the ballot later this month.

California's Democratic leadership, backed by Gov. Gavin Newsom, wants to keep the tough-on-crime measure off the November ballot. They worry the ballot measure's proposal would disproportionately criminalize low-income people and those with substance use issues rather than target ringleaders who hire large groups of people to steal goods for them to resell online.

Instead, lawmakers are fast-tracking a legislative package of 14 bills that would go after organized online reseller schemes and auto thieves, and provide funding for drug addiction counselors. These proposals could become laws as early as this month.

Do the efforts conflict?

If voters approve the tough-on-crime ballot initiative, Democratic leaders plan to void most measures in their own legislative package, citing potential conflicts.

Lawmakers were short on details about how the two paths conflict earlier this week. Later, they said they fear if both efforts succeed, law enforcement would be able to stack penalties and send more people to jails, leading to mass incarceration and overcrowded jails.

About a third of the measures in the package pose possible legal conflicts with the proposals in the ballot initiative, according to lawmakers.

The ballot initiative campaign accused lawmakers of holding the proposals hostage to break up the coalition. Local district attorneys who backed the ballot campaign said both efforts could work together, with the ballot measure overriding the legislative package in case of legal conflicts.

What happens next?

Backers of the ballot initiative said they're still open to working with Democratic leadership but will only consider any solutions that involve rolling back Proposition 47.

"We still stand ready to sit down with anybody in leadership to talk about the measure, but I don't want to compromise," Greg Totten, a retired district attorney and a leader of the ballot initiative campaign, said during a news conference this week.

Newsom and Democratic leaders have until June 27 to negotiate to get the initiative off the ballot. Meanwhile, lawmakers have plans to deliver the legislative package to Newsom's desk by next week for signing, despite growing concerns from moderate Democrats.

"When you look at the package that we put together, it's very comprehensive and it addresses a number of details in the existing framework of the law," Assemblymember Rick Zbur, author of a retail theft bill, told reporters. "It was never intended to be something that was stacked on to a ballot measure that removed the underpinnings of the basic law that we were trying to reform."

California Hits Amazon with Fines Under Warehouse Worker Law

California workplace regulators are fining Amazon $6 million over alleged violations of a recent warehouse labor law at two of the company's Inland Empire warehouses.

Labor Commissioner Lilia García-Brower's office said today that the e-commerce giant failed to notify employees at the ONT8 warehouse in Moreno Valley and ONT9 in Redlands of any productivity quotas they were required to meet, leading workers to be disciplined without knowing why.

"If you don't work a certain number of items per day and make sure you meet your rate you'll get a write-up, or a verbal coaching," Carrie Stone, an ONT8 worker, said at a press conference today. "My manager said I missed it by 1%, and I got the write-up. I didn't even know what the target was for the day. I could lose my job if I get a certain number of write-ups."

The company has contested the citations; the appeals are likely to take years.

Maureen Lynch Vogel, a spokesperson for Amazon, said the company does not use fixed quotas, that "individual performance is evaluated over a long period of time, in relation to how the entire site's team is performing," and that workers can always see how they're performing.

"Gonzalez then prepared the clients' individual income tax returns, which incorporated the fraudulent business losses

Say Hey Kid

He passed only two days shy of last night's celebration at his childhood home park, the 114-year-old Rickwood Field in Birmingham, AL. That was where he played as a 16-year-old high schooler, with professionals, grown men, including his dad, for the Birmingham Black Barons in the Negro Baseball League. It was 1948, the year after Jackie Robinson began the integration of the all-white Major League Baseball.

With the color barrier broken, the Giants drafted Mays in 1950 when he graduated high school. He was called up to the major leagues in early '51, starting his big league career, 0 for 12. That is, no hits in 12 at-bats. The disconsolate Mays was ready to go back to the minor leagues, but his colorful manager, Leo "The Lip" Durocher would hear none of it, instilling confidence in the youngster.

On May 28, 1951, 22 days after his 20th birthday, he dug in at the plate in the first inning, facing one of the most dominant pitchers of the era, future Hall of Famer, Warren Spahn. Mays promptly deposited a Spahn offering over the left field roof and he went on to be named the National League Rookie-of-the-Year.

From early 1952 and through 1953, Mays served in the Army. Leaving baseball after one year and just 34 games in his second season before joining Uncle Sam's military, he had already established a deep respect from teammates and opponents alike.

Veteran San Francisco sportswriter and Mays biographer John Shea, recalled in a broadcast interview on Wednesday, that after his last at-bat in the Brooklyn Dodgers Ebbets Field before heading off to boot camp in '52, the archrival Dodger fans gave him a send-off with a standing ovation.

When he returned to the league for the 1954 season, he led the Giants to a World Series sweep of the heavily favored then-Cleveland Indians. Mays was league MVP and made a legendary over-the-shoulder catch in Game 1 in the cavernous centerfield. He always professed to be just as proud of the ensuing throw, preventing a runner from scoring, as the play that is simply known in baseball lore as, "The Catch."

Beloved in New York, San Francisco fans were slow to adopt Mays as fully when the team joined the Dodgers in moving west in 1958, throwing a bit more love toward San Francisco debuting rookies Willie McCovey and Orlando Cepeda.

But the infectious, hustling, kid-like Mays was the leader-of-the-pack by 1962, when the Giants beat the Dodgers in a 3-game playoff for the pennant before losing to their old neighbors across the Harlem River, the Yankees in a seven-

In the cavernous horseshoe-shaped Polo Grounds in Manhattan, home of the Giants through 1957, the centerfield wall was a ridiculous 483 feet from home plate. Willie Mays's athleticism was unique in his ability to cover that ground. This phenomenal over-the-shoulder catch in the deepest part of the field in the 1954 World Series, is recognized even 70 years later as, "The Catch."

game World Series.

Among the many greats of the era, Mays stood out for the depth and breadth of skill unlike, any other. And that infectious personality.

Mays biographer Shea, remembered a conversation with Dodgers great, shortstop Maury Wills about the level of respect the Dodgers had for their most prolific opponent.

Wills referenced the brutal 1965 incident when Giants pitcher Juan Marichal was batting, and he believed Dodgers catcher John Roseboro purposely whizzed a ball by Marichal's head in a return throw to the pitcher. Marichal turned around and began hitting Roseboro in the head with his bat, one of the ugliest incidents in baseball history.

In Wills recollection of the mayhem to Shea, in the ensuing brawl, Mays saw how badly injured the bleeding Roseboro was, and he ushered the badly wounded player from the pack and brought him to the Dodgers bench.

Wills told Shea that Mays was the only opponent his teammates respected so deeply, that they allowed that to occur.

After Mays' peer, the great Roberto Clemente was killed in a 1972 plane crash while providing aid to earthquake victims in Nicaragua, Major League Baseball created an award in Clemente's name, honoring the player "who best represents the game of baseball through extraordinary character, community involvement, philanthropy and positive contributions, both on and off the field."

Willie was the first winner.

"I'd rather always be good than sometimes great," former players recall him saying. "Practice like a pro, play like a kid." Did he ever!

From the creation of the NY Mets in 1962 through 1972, there wasn't a year I missed the Giants' four visits to NY. And then even more games, in '73, when he finished his career in the city where it all started.

As a former baseball writer and Hall of Fame voter, my dad let me fill in the circle voting for Willie's first ballot entry into the Hall.

Twenty-two-time all-star, 24 years my senior, in '24 #24 takes his legacy north from the spring training of life.

Heaven is about to be far more exciting. Not so much, here. Skip across the clouds with that youthful joy, your unique generational athleticism, and your innate enthusiasm, no longer constrained by mortal age.

Thank you Mr. Mays for all the joyful memories! And for the Giant, inspirational man, you will always be.

Amazon Warehouses

Lynch Vogel said performance evaluations are also based on the number of orders at a facility, and its staffing levels, calling it "a very intricate process."

"Critics make it sound very black-and-white, but it really isn't at all," she said.

But García-Brower said that evaluation system leads to "undisclosed quotas" that pressure employees to work faster. At the press conference, Stone's coworkers described intense stress from working toward moving targets, trying not to be the slowest within their departments.

"It's maddening," said Nannette Plascencia, an ONT8 worker. "We are humans. Our safety is important to us, but they treat us like one of their robots."

The citations against

Amazon, the leading employer of warehouse workers and the nation's second-largest private employer, are the state's most prominent use of a 2021 law that aimed to curb the pace of work required in warehouses, then booming in California from the rise of online shopping.

California Labor Federation leader Lorena

Gonzalez authored the law as an Assemblymember after several news investigations and advocacy reports highlighted how demands for speed and production drove a higher-than-average injury rate at some Amazon warehouses.

In 2023, the two warehouses, ONT8 and ONT9, reported 6.3 serious injuries per 100 workers and 8.9 serious injuries per 100 workers, respectively, according to federal workplace safety data analyzed by CalMatters. The average across California warehouses that year was 4.8 serious injuries, defined by the U.S. Department of Labor as workplace injuries that require employees to take time off work or receive restricted job duties.

Why Men Should Talk About Their Health

American men may be neglecting their health and wellness, particularly when it comes to their urological health. But an open line of communication between men and their healthcare providers, and among family members, can lead to better care.

A Cleveland Clinic survey found that only 3 out of 5 men get annual physicals and 55% do not get regular health screenings. What's more, many men shy away from the subject of their health, with 77% reporting that they don't know their complete family history when it comes to urological issues.

"There is a clear need to fill care gaps and destigmatize men's health issues," says Shaun Noorian, CEO and founder of Empower Health, a compounding pharmacy that supports patients with men's health concerns such as testosterone, sexual wellness, prostate health and gynecomastia.

Fortunately, innovations in the health care industry that are expanding access to tailored care are helping fill these gaps and helping health care providers support their patients' needs more effectively.

Noorian's own story shows how a compounding pharmacy helped him optimize his health. His doctor recommended compounded medications after a health and wellness check of his hormones. The compounded medications provided the exact dosage and strength prescription he needed, which can't always be found through traditional medicines. But compounding goes beyond hormones. Noorian discovered it could also address various men's health concerns like testosterone, sexual wellness, urology and dermatology.

Noorian says that men can use these tips for a happy, healthier life:

- Don't wait until you have a serious medical condition to see your doctor. Schedule annual physicals and all recommended health care screenings.

- Destigmatize men's health issues by talking to male family members about prostate cancer. Prostate cancer is the second leading cause of cancer deaths for men in the United States and a man is two to three times more likely to get prostate cancer if his father, brother or son had it. You should also talk to your primary care doctor or urologist about having a blood test and examination, particularly if you have a family history of the disease.

- Erectile dysfunction affects nearly 30 million men of all ages across the United States, according to the Indiana University School of Medicine, which notes that it could be the sign of another underlying health issue. Your urologist can help rule out causes, like heart disease and high blood pressure.

- When dealing with men's health issues, talk to your healthcare provider about all available treatment options, including the potential benefits of using a compounding pharmacy. Compounded medicine enables healthcare providers to prescribe treatments that are specifically tailored to individual biomarkers (biological molecules found in body fluids or tissues that are a sign of a condition or disease) by dosage and formulation. By analyzing biomarker data, compounded medications can be formulated with precise dosages and combinations of more than one active pharmaceutical ingredient, optimizing therapeutic outcomes for a wide range of health conditions.

To learn more about how compounding pharmacies can support men's health, visit empowerpharmacy.com.

"For the best care possible, men should be proactive about their health, and providers should explore with their patients all available treatment options, including personalized solutions," says Noorian. (StatePoint)

Running a Local Race? How to Keep Your Feet Healthy

Whether you're a novice jogger embarking on a couch-to-5K program or a marathoner serious about racking up finishers' medals, it's critical you take great care of your feet.

"Running is an amazing form of cardiovascular exercise, but because it's a high-impact sport that involves repeated trauma to the feet, everyone from long-distance runners to casual joggers is at risk for developing painful and debilitating foot conditions," says Bryce A. Paschold, DPM, FACFAS, a board-certified foot and ankle surgeon and a Fellow Member of the American College of Foot and Ankle Surgeons (ACFAS).

To help you identify signs of some of the more common foot issues associated with running so you can get proper treatment before the condition keeps you from the activity you love, the foot and ankle surgeon members of ACFAS are offering the following insights:

- Plantar Fasciitis: Plantar fasciitis is perhaps the most common complaint from runners. Presenting as heel pain, it's caused by inflammation of the ligament that holds up the arch. At the first sign of heel pain, Dr. Paschold advises runners to stretch the calf, wear sturdier shoes and use arch supports. In some cases, icing and anti-inflammatory medications, such as ibuprofen, are helpful. Should pain continue, visit a foot and ankle surgeon, who might recommend custom orthotics, injections and physical therapy.

- Neuromas: A neuroma is a pinched nerve between the toes that can cause pain, numbness and a burning sensation in the ball of the foot. Overly flexible shoes are often the cause, and padding, orthotics or injections are usually effective treatments.

- Tendonitis: Runners can be sidelined with tendonitis if they ignore the warning signs of this overuse condition.

There are several forms of tendonitis that affect the Achilles and other areas, and all are treated with rest, icing, strengthening, stretching and anti-inflammatory medications, and sometimes with orthotics and physical therapy. Because overzealous training is usually the cause, especially among beginners, it's important to ramp up mileage and speed gradually. A running coach can tailor your training plan to your current fitness level.

- Broken bones: Don't assume that because you're able to run, your foot is not fractured. Signs of a stress fracture can include pain, swelling, redness and possibly bruising. If a fracture is suspected, remember to practice RICE (Rest, Ice, Compression and Elevation). You should also see a foot and ankle surgeon for an X-ray and proper diagnosis. Remember that like with other overuse injuries, stress fractures are often brought on by trying to do too much too soon. A general rule of thumb is to increase mileage by no more than 10 percent week to week.

avocado ROLL

By Connor Forbes

- Avocado, sliced
- Nori seaweed sheet

To Make

Cook the rice to the directions stated on the packet. OPTIONAL - For a little extra flavor, mix in a tsp per cup of rice of rice seasoning vinegar into the cooked rice.

Lay a nori sheet flat on a cutting board, rougher side face up. Spread a layer of rice across the entirety of the nori sheet. Add avocado in a narrow strip about 1/3 of the way into the nori sheet crossing the entire sheet of nori. Grab the bottom of the nori and carefully lift and fold over the avocado in the direction away from you. Then roll the rest of the sheet of nori away from you until the roll is completed. Using a sharp knife that has been dipped or covered in water cut through the middle of the roll. Then cut through the middle of the 2 halves you made. And cut in the middle of the quarters. This will yield 8 pieces. Serve with soy sauce and enjoy!

My family is somewhat sushi obsessed. In college I was a double major in Geology and Japanese. My wife worked at a sushi restaurant. And my kids are avocado aficionados. With all those powers combined we have a deep love for sushi. And for my kids in particular, avocado rolls.

THEY haven't quite braved into the world of raw fish, but for our family finances sake, we are totally cool with that.

An avocado roll is very easy to make at home. It may take some practice to get it to stay together just right. But even if it is falling apart you will get the flavor every single time.

Let's roll!

Ingredients

- Sushi Rice or other white rice
- Rice Seasoning vinegar (optional)

"INSIDE OUT 2"

By Bob Garver

Back in 2015, Disney and Pixar introduced us to 11-year-old Riley and the squabbling emotions inside her prepubescent head. To make a long story short, Joy (Amy Poehler) tried to retain dominance over the girl, but Sadness (Phyllis Smith) kept creeping her way in.

THE struggle led to both emotions getting kicked out of Riley's conscience. Following an adventure through the girl's psyche, both emotions made their way back and Joy realized that she had to share Riley with other emotions, even unpleasant ones, in order for her to get the most out of life. In this new movie, Riley's five core emotions want to retain dominance over the girl, but new emotions creep their way in. This leads to a struggle where the old emotions get kicked out of Riley's conscience. They'll have to go on an adventure through the girl's psyche to make their way back and hopefully obliterate the new emotions. Or maybe they'll learn to share and the message will be exactly the same as in the first movie.

For the record, I wasn't a big fan of the first movie. Don't get me wrong, I thought it was okay, and it kept the streak of at-least-passable Pixar alive until "Lightyear" two years ago. But setting up this elaborate world of personified emotions led to countless questions that the movie wasn't prepared to answer, and without answering those questions, it didn't make sense. Sometimes the nonsense played to its advantage, like a deus ex machina toward the end involving stackable crushes. Other times it hurt the movie, like leaving me wondering if these characters even had lives that were at stake, and what might happen to Riley if those lives were lost. The new movie raises more new questions than it answers, but this time I'm a little more comfortable knowing that the movie is prepared to answer

'INSIDE OUT 2' HAS BIGGEST OPENING WEEKEND OF 2024 WITH $155M

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - "Inside Out 2" breathed some life into a downbeat year at the box office, debuting with $155 million for the best opening weekend of any film this year, according to industry estimates released Sunday.

Pixar's sequel to its 2015 hit deals with the inner thoughts and emotions of a teenage girl, and features the voices of Kensington Tallman, Amy Poehler, Phyllis Smith, Lewis Black, Diane Lane, Kyle MacLachlan, Tony Hale and Maya Hawke among others.

Its $155 million total is the second-best North American opening for an animated film, trailing only "Incredibles 2," another Pixar film, which grossed $182.6 million in its opening weekend in 2018.

"Bad Boys: Ride or Die" took in $33 million, one week after opening in first place, Comscore reported.

"Kingdom of the Planet of the Apes" was third with $5.2 million Friday through Sunday in its sixth weekend in theaters.

"The Garfield Movie" was fourth with $5 million in its fourth week, followed by "The Watchers" with $3.6 million in its second week.

Rounding out the top 10 domestic releases, as estimated by Comscore, were "IF" ($3.4 million), "Furiosa: A Mad Max Saga" ($2.4 million), "The Fall Guy" ($1.5 million), "The Strangers: Chapter 1" ($760,000) and "Lord of the Rings: The Fellowship of the Ring" ($632,910).

This weekend's overall three-day box office haul was estimated at $213.3 million. The year-to-date total is $3.086 billion -- down 24% from the figure at this time last year, according to Comscore.

tions and not others. The new movie, Riley (Dawson Todd) is going to camp with her best friend (Grace Lu) and Bree (Nuriddin-Green). Joy is forward to guiding her, and the core emotions Sadness, Disgust (Liza Soan), Fear (Tony Hale). But on the night before she is shivering in new emotions (Maya Hawke), Envy (Ayo Edebiri), Embarrassment (Paul Walter), and Ennui (Adele). Anxiety proves a few social situations, with Joy when the latter is to stay loyal to her old self opposed to endearing the more popular Val. The new emotions add old emotions to the back of her mind until she can be reworked. A problem with the movie, that the story progression is much the same as the first movie once again at the literal level, understand a kid with emotions, but what happens when a kid is missing, as is the case here? If she is controlled by the four emotions, what's making her do that hockey? And why do the filmmakers think that Anxiety doesn't manifest until puberty? What are young kids famous for saying on car trips? "Arewethereyet? Arewethereyet?" That's Anxiety, guys.

Of course, just as the "Inside Out" movies teach audiences to take the bad with the good, I must remember to take the good with the bad. And there is a lot of good here. The animation is as colorful and delightful as ever, the emotional moments had me feeling for the characters, and the humor consistently hits. My favorite gags involve cartoon characters stuck in the back of Riley's mind. Video game character Lance (Yong Yea) is another helpful crush of Riley's, Pouchy (James Austin Johnson) is a little too happy to provide explosives, and Bloofy (Ron Funches) is a fourth-wall breaker with no fourth wall to break (you can practically hear the Disney writers saying, "Take that, Nickelodeon!"). These characters, more than the emotions, were the highlight of this passable Pixar affair.

Grade: B-

"Inside Out 2" is rated PG for some thematic elements. Its running time is 96 minutes.

NO LIE: PERFECTLY PRESERVED CENTURIES-OLD CHERRIES UNEARTHED AT GEORGE WASHINGTON'S MOUNT VERNON

By MATTHEW BARAKAT
Associated Press

MOUNT VERNON, Va. (AP) — George Washington never did cut down the cherry tree, despite the famous story to the contrary, but he did pack away quite a few bottles of the fruit at his Mount Vernon home.

DOZENS of bottles of cherries and berries — impossibly preserved in storage pits uncovered from the cellar of his mansion on the banks of the Potomac River — were discovered during an archaeological dig connected to a restoration project.

Jason Boroughs, Mount Vernon's principal archaeologist, said the discovery of so much perfectly preserved food from more than 250 years ago is essentially unprecedented.

"Finding what is essentially fresh fruit, 250 years later, is pretty spectacular," Boroughs said in an interview. "All the stars sort of have to align in the right manner for that to happen."

Whole pieces of fruit, recognizable as cherries, were found in some of the bottles. Other bottles held what appear to be gooseberries or currants, though testing is underway to confirm that.

Mount Vernon is partnering with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which is conducting DNA testing on the fruit. They are also examining more than 50 cherry pits recovered from the bottles to see if any of them can be planted.

"It's kind of a longshot," said Benjamin Gutierrez, a USDA plant geneticist, of the chances of using a cherry pit to grow a tree. Seeds preserve best when they are dry, and most of the samples found at Mount Vernon were waterlogged. A couple of pits tested initially were not viable as seeds.

Still, he said the bottles are a remarkable find. In addition to DNA testing, he said chemical testing may be able to show if particular spices were used to preserve the fruits.

Records at Mount Vernon show that George and Martha Washington were fond of cherries, at least when mixed with brandy. Martha Washington's recipe for a "cherry bounce" cocktail survives, and Washington wrote that he took a canteen of cherry bounce with him on a trip across the Alleghenies in 1784.

These cherries, though, were most likely bottled to be eaten simply as cherries, Boroughs said.

The quality of the preservation reflect a high caliber of work. Slaves ran the plantation's kitchen. The kitchen was overseen by an enslaved woman named Doll, who came to Mount Vernon in 1758 with Martha Washington, according to the estate.

"The enslaved folks who were taking care of the trees, picking the fruit, working in the kitchen, those would have been the folks that probably would have overseen and done this process," Boroughs said. "It's a highly skilled process. Otherwise they just wouldn't have survived this way."

Foot Health

• Lisfranc injuries: One misstep can lead to a sprain, fracture or dislocation of the Lisfranc joint. Consider wearing a headlamp in low lighting for surer footing. It is also a good idea to incorporate exercises into your regimen that will keep ankles and feet mobile and strong.

“While completing a marathon or even longer distance race may seem like the ultimate goal, it’s wise for new runners to start with shorter races first. This conservative approach will keep your feet in good shape so you’re able to run pain-free for years to come,” says Dr. Paschold. “And of course, it’s vital to listen to your body and seek care from a foot and ankle surgeon whenever a foot problem is suspected.”

foot care or to find a foot and ankle surgeon near you, visit FootHealthFacts.org, the patient education website of the American College of Foot and Ankle Surgeons. (StatePoint)

If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same Lender may hold more than one mortgage or Deed of Trust on the property. Notice to Property Owner The sale date shown on this Notice of Sale may be postponed one or more times by the Mortgagee, Beneficiary, Trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call, (916) 939-0772 for information regarding the trustee's sale or visit this internet website, www.nationwideposting.com, for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case, T.S.# 22-04395CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (916) 939-0772, or visit this internet website www.nationwideposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case 22-04395CA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. # Welcome to the Age of Fire: California Wildfires Explained

BY JULIE CART,
CaMatters

After two mild fire seasons, California is bracing for whatever 2024 brings.

FAVORABLE weather marked 2023 and 2022, when the total acreage burned — less than 400,000 acres each year — was considerably lower than the state's 5-year average of more than 2.3 million acres.

But 2024 has already started in a worrisome way, particularly in northern Los Angeles County, where two heavy rainy seasons fueled thick grasses and brush. The Post Fire in the Gorman area already had burned almost 16,000 acres in its first three days. The fire is raging in steep, hard-to-reach areas, and Cal Fire notes that “fire weather conditions” — gusty winds and warm temperatures — are making it even more difficult to control.

As climate change warms the planet, the state's fires have become so unpredictable and extreme that new words were invented: firenado, gigafire, fire siege — even fire pandemic.

The landscape is getting hotter, and sooner, in more places. And it's drier, for longer, all over the state. California now has 78 more annual “fire days” — when conditions are ripe for fires to spark — than 50 years ago. When is California's wildfire season? It is now almost year-round.

Nothing is as it was. Where are the worst California wildfires? All over. Whatever NIMBYism that gave comfort to some Californians — never having a fire in their community before — no longer applies.

For instance, Southern California's coastal fires typically had to be driven by desert winds. But no longer. Vegetation along the usually moist coast is so parched that it doesn't need Santa Ana winds to fan wildfires.

The summer of 2022 got off to a deadly start. The McKinney Fire killed four people, and more than 181,000 acres had been torched by the start of August. And lightning strikes touched off a complex of 12 fires in a densely forested region of northern California. A large wildfire, the Route Fire, ignited in northern Los Angeles County and has closed I-5, and another fire, the Border 32 fire, is burning in rural eastern San Diego County near the border with Mexico.

Recent years have been particularly severe: 2020 was an extreme year. And in 2021, the state's oldest park, Big Basin Redwoods State Park, was nearly erased by a fire that destroyed roads, bridges, campsites, trails, the visitor center, restrooms and electrical and water systems.

California's so-called ‘asbestos forests’ have lost their immunity. Massive fires tore through dense, moist rainforests where climate change chased away the region's protective layer of fog and mist.

What causes California's wildfires? Arson and power lines are the major triggers. An audit showed that utilities aren't doing enough to prevent fires. But lightning-sparked fires, like the one that burned Big Basin park, are a fairly recent trend.

Unpredictable and hugely powerful lightning storms — tens of thousands of strikes in a span of days — bombard already dry and vulnerable trees. Scientists say to expect more lightning as the planet warms. Aided and abetted by drought, more than 163 million trees have been killed by drought or insects.

Jaw-dropping “fire tornadoes” spin out from the intense heat thrown off by monster fires, bedeviling crews who can only flee from a 300-foot wall of flames.

The job of battling these larger, more stubborn California wildfires has become more complicated, fearsome and deadly, straining the state's already overworked firefighters.

And much, much more costly. The Legislative Analyst's Office provided this sobering calculation: CalFire's total funding for fire protection, resource management and fire prevention has grown from $800 million in 2005-06 to an estimated $3.7 billion in 2021-22.

As the impacts and costs surge, homeowners are still finding that insurance companies are canceling their policies — even if they fire-harden their property.

More attention is being paid to the unhealthy smoke lingering in communities. Even California's crops are harmed, with concerns about a smoke-tainted grape harvest and impacting the state's $58 billion wine industry.

Scientists and fire bosses are moving away from all-out suppression of every fire to understanding that fire can be harnessed as a tool. The benefits of fire, long part of the culture of native Californians, are now part of the state's planning.

After all, California's landscape evolved with fire. What remains is for its inhabitants to adapt to the new reality.

And that requires yet another new term: Welcome to the ‘Pyrocene,’ coined by fire scientist Stephen J. Pyne. The age of fire.
