

Riverside County Supervisor Kevin Jeffries Says So-Long After 12 Years

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - The most senior member of the Riverside County Board of Supervisors closed out his political career Tuesday, attending his final board meeting, where he was lauded by colleagues who recognized him as “very principled” and a “mentor.”

Supervisor Kevin Jeffries, 64, of Lakeland Village will officially retire you were available to share with us,” Spiegel added. “Thank you for the opportunities. I’m really going to miss you.”

Jeffries, well-known for his preference to expedite the pace of meetings, was “tortured” by his colleagues’ presentation “that he didn’t ask for and didn’t want,” Chairman Chuck Washington joked. The farewell lasted for roughly a half-hour and included on Jan. 1, but Tuesday was the last board meeting of 2024, providing a final opportunity for official farewells.

“You’ve been a mentor to me, and when I needed your help or guidance, you were always open,” Supervisor Karen Spiegel said during a presentation in which Jeffries received a nearly three-foot-long commemorative gavel and a plaque with a resolution highlighting his service -- which included never missing one board meeting from his first day in January 2013 to now.

“I’m going to sorely miss ... the knowledge and your experience that video highlights from the early days of “Kevin’s Corner,” the supervisor’s log of activities in his First District.

“You always knew where Kevin was coming from,” Supervisor Manuel Perez said, referring back to the 2000s, when the two men were in the state Assembly. “He’s very principled. He never played gotcha. There are flip-floppers, but he wasn’t like that. Here, I’ve gotten to know him even more. More than anything, he’s wanted to make sure Riverside County could be better. He really picked up that mantle. Muchas gracias, compadre.”

STAY SOBER AND HAVE A JOLLY HOLIDAY SEASON WITH THESE EXPERT TIPS

By MELISSA RAYWORTH
Associated Press

Last year, when Lauren Haydel began her first sober holiday season, she wondered how difficult it would be to avoid alcohol at family parties and celebrations with friends. She owns a boutique, Fleurty Girl, in New Orleans’ French Quarter, a neighborhood synonymous with drinking.

But few people questioned her choice. “Instead of them asking me why,” Haydel says, “they ask me, ‘Oh, do you feel better?’”

Many friends told her they’re considering avoiding alcohol themselves.

Sobriety has been having a moment, says Jessica Jeboult, founder of the website and online community A Sober Girl’s Guide.

“This is the ultimate time to rediscover or change your relationship with alcohol,” she says. With so many alcohol-free products available and growing awareness about the benefits of staying sober,

“there is maximum support.”

If you are planning to stay sober this holiday season, here are tips from sober coaches, sober bar managers and happily sober people:

EPA Awards $135 Million to California to Phase Out Big Diesel Trucks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is awarding $135 million in grants to fund 13 projects in California to help the state wean off fossil fuels and phase out big rigs that run on diesel.

The money will go to the state transportation department, cities and school districts, among others, to purchase 455 zero-emission vehicles to replace diesel-powered trucks, school buses and other large vehicles. It is part of an EPA program that provides a total of $735 million to 70 projects across the country, officials announced Wednesday.

The grants are paid for by the 2022 climate law approved by congressional Democrats. The law, officially known as the Inflation Reduction Act, includes nearly $400 billion in spending and tax credits to accelerate the expansion of clean energy such as wind and solar power, speeding the nation's transition away from the oil, coal and natural gas that largely cause climate change.

The funds, to be delivered in early 2025, "will reduce air pollution, improve health outcomes in nearby communities, and advance the campaign to tackle climate change," EPA Pacific Southwest Regional Administrator Martha Guzman said in a statement.

California and local agencies will have the next two to three years to implement the grants for zero-emission trucks.

Nationwide, the transportation sector contributes the largest share of greenhouse gas emissions annually, according to the EPA, with medium- and heavy-duty trucks contributing nearly a quarter of those emissions.

Heavy-duty vehicles make up about 3% of vehicles on the road in California, but they generate more than half of nitrogen oxides and fine-particle diesel pollution, according to the California Air Resources Board. That's because these trucks have diesel engines that, while more powerful, produce more pollution than gasoline engines. They also travel many more miles than passenger vehicles.

California is trying to rid itself of fossil fuels, passing new rules in recent years to phase out fossil fuel-powered cars, trucks, trains and lawn equipment in the nation's most populous state. But those rules still require waivers from the EPA, which typically sets standards for emissions from passenger cars, trucks and other vehicles.

Gov. Gavin Newsom last month, in anticipation of the incoming presidency of Donald Trump, traveled to Washington urge the Biden administration to grant waivers to eight climate rules, including those on zero-emission vehicles and emission standards for pollutants. The issues have been targeted in the past by President-elect Trump.

Polluted Communities Hold Their Breath as Companies Struggle With California's Diesel Truck Ban

By ALEJANDRA REYES-VELARDE/CalMatters CalMatters

Standing in his front yard in Wilmington, Jose Ulloa can't get a sentence out without coughing. Heavy-duty trucks, headed to and from the Port of Los Angeles, pass in front of his home all day, their engines roaring and their exhaust spewing into the air.

Ulloa, who was diagnosed with asthma a few years ago, suffers frequent breathing problems and was hospitalized after one attack. The truck traffic is likely a trigger, since health officials say diesel exhaust is known to cause asthma attacks and other respiratory problems, including lung cancer.

The parade of big rigs in his neighborhood started four years ago, after a series of traffic pattern changes altered their route.

Imelda, his wife, sweeps the yard and cleans the home nonstop, but black dust still collects on every surface of their home within hours.

"If you blow your nose, black dust will come out," she said. "It's a terrible life living here."

In Oakland, Mashhoor Alammari, who runs a small fleet of drayage trucks that haul cargo to and from the port, wants to do his part to help clean the air of dangerous diesel exhaust.

His company, The Crew Transportation, Inc., bought two new zero-emission big rigs at a cost of more than $900,000. But the trucks, powered by hydrogen fuel cells, are expensive to operate and there are few if any fueling stations along their routes. The new trucks have been sitting in the parking lot most of the time since he bought them.

"I don't want to put myself into a financial hole," he said.

The experiences of the Wilmington family and the Oakland truck company illustrate the frustrations and obstacles that Californians face as state officials pursue an aggressive and controversial mandate to clean the air by phasing out diesel-powered big rigs and other trucks.

California's mandate, approved by the Air Resources Board last year, is the first in the world to ban new diesel trucks and require a switch to zero-emission vehicles, which are powered by electricity or hydrogen.

Companies face varying deadlines for ending their use of diesel, which for decades has been an efficient powerhouse fueling the economy and transport of goods. Starting in 2036, no new fossil-fueled medium-duty and heavy-duty trucks can be sold in California, and by 2042, large companies must convert their trucks to zero-emission models.

The trucking industry says the regulation is unreasonable and will wreak havoc on the economy, making it difficult to make long-haul shipments. The California Trucking Association and a collective of 17 states, including Nebraska, Alabama and New Mexico, have sued the state, alleging the rule oversteps state power.

From big rigs to garbage trucks and delivery vans, the rules will dramatically change the 1.8 million commercial trucks driven on California's roads over the next two decades. Sales already are accelerating even though no deadlines have kicked in yet. Last year, one out of every six trucks sold in the state — more than 18,000 — were zero emissions.

California's mandate is in flux because the state still needs a waiver from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency before it can start enforcing them. President-elect Donald Trump has criticized California's electric car mandates and in the past tried to revoke the state's authority to set its own vehicle standards.

One deadline already has passed: All new drayage trucks, which are used to haul containers from ports, were supposed to be zero emissions by last October. But that deadline is not yet being enforced.

Federal Reserve Cuts Its Key Rate By a Quarter-Point but Envisions Fewer Reductions Next Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve cut its key interest rate Wednesday by a quarter-point — its third cut this year — but also signaled that it expects to reduce rates more slowly next year than it previously envisioned, mostly because of still-elevated inflation.

The Fed's 19 policymakers projected that they will cut their benchmark rate by a quarter-point just twice in 2025, down from their estimate in September of four rate cuts. Their new projections suggest that consumers may not enjoy much lower rates next year for mortgages, auto loans, credit cards and other forms of borrowing.

The central bank's expectation of just two rate cuts in 2025 rattled Wall Street, sending stock prices plummeting in the worst day for the market in four months. The Dow Jones Industrial Average closed down more than 1,100 points, roughly 2.5%. The Nasdaq composite was hit worse: It sank about 3.5% Wednesday. Higher interest rates can slow business expansion.

"I think that a slower pace of (rate) cuts really reflects both the higher inflation readings we've had this year and the expectations that inflation will be higher" in 2025, Powell said. "We're closer to the neutral rate, which is another reason to be cautious about further moves."

Blerina Uruci, chief economist at T. Rowe Price, said the tone of Powell's news conference was surprisingly "hawkish," meaning that it seemed to favor maintaining relatively high rates.

"The committee might be quite divided at this point," Uruci said. "And we have a growing hawkish contingent."

At his news conference, Powell acknowledged that at least some Fed officials have begun to assess the potential effects of President-elect Donald Trump's policies on the economy and inflation. The Fed chair noted that some policymakers think that since the election, the future path of inflation has become harder to gauge. Trump's threats to impose tariffs on all imports and to engage in mass deportations of migrants could worsen inflation next year.

"It's kind of common-sense thinking that when the path is uncertain, you go a little bit slower," Powell said. "It's not unlike driving on a foggy night or walking into a dark room with furniture. Just slow down."

Amazon Teamsters Authorize Strike at Four SoCal Warehouses

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - Nearly a week before Christmas, workers at four Amazon warehouses located in Southern California may go on strike on claims the corporate giant refuses to recognize their union and negotiate fair contracts, officials announced Tuesday.

The International Brotherhood of Teamsters, representing 1.3 million workers across the U.S., Canada and Puerto Rico, announced their members in Palmdale, Victorville, Industry and San Bernardino voted to authorize strikes -- a move that came after Amazon ignored a Sunday deadline to come to the bargaining table, according to the union.

"The corporate elitists who run Amazon are leaving workers with no choice," Teamsters General President Sean M. O'Brien said in a statement.

"Greedy executives are pushing thousands of hardworking Americans to the brink," he continued. "Amazon rakes in more money than anybody, they subject workers to injury and abuse at every turn, and they illegally claim not to be the rightful employer of nearly half their workforce."

Eileen Hards of Amazon said in a statement that for more than a year, Teamsters have continued to intentionally mislead the public -- claiming they represent "thousands of Amazon employees and drivers" when they don't.

"The truth is that the Teamsters have actively threatened, intimidated, and attempted to coerce Amazon employees and third-party drivers to join them, which is illegal and is the subject of multiple pending unfair labor practice charges against the union," Hards said.

The SoCal workers are joining employees at sites located in Illinois and New York City, who also recently authorized similar strikes.

Boeing to Lay Off Hundreds of Workers in SoCal

LONG BEACH (CNS) - Troubled aerospace giant Boeing has announced more than 500 layoffs across California, including 115 workers in Long Beach and 144 in El Segundo, who are learning Wednesday they will be out of work.

According to Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification, or WARN, notices filed with the state Employment Development Department last month, the company also plans to lay off nearly 180 people from a pair of Seal Beach facilities, and 57 more in Huntington Beach. Additional cuts are planned from facilities in San Diego.

"As we announced in early October, we are adjusting our workforce levels to align with our financial reality and a more focused set of priorities," according to a company statement released Tuesday and reported by Long Beach Watchdog.

The Watchdog reported that most of the affected workers will leave within two months of being notified, and eligible workers will receive severance pay, job-search assistance and three months of subsidized health care.

Operations at the following Amazon facilities in California would be affected:

-- DFX4 located at 15272 Bear Valley Road, Victorville;
-- DAX5 located at 15930 Valley Blvd., Industry;
-- DAX8 located at 600 W. Technology Drive, Palmdale; and
-- KSBD air hub located at the San Bernardino International Airport

Workers represented

The Seattle Times reported that about 3,500 workers nationally were being impacted by layoffs at the Arlington, Virginia-based company.

The company has been reeling since a panel fell off of a Boeing-manufactured Alaska Airlines plane mid-flight in January. It was further hampered by nearly two-month machinists strike, although the company has denied that the work stoppage contributed to the layoffs.

The list of layoffs by location includes:

-- Seal Beach, 179;
-- El Segundo, 144;
-- Long Beach, 115;
-- Huntington Beach, 57; and
-- San Diego, 21.

Smaller or even single layoffs were also taking place in Fullerton, Mission Viejo, Murrieta, Victorville, El Monte, Van Nuys, Palmdale, Ventura, Vandenberg Space Force Base, Edwards Air Force Base (3), Sacramento, San Jose, Pleasanton, Lemoore and Mountain View (4).

by Teamsters are aiming to secure an increase in wages, improved benefits and working conditions, according to the union.

"It's past time that we fight for the pay and benefits we deserve," Raymond Scarborough, a driver who operates for the Amazon warehouse located in Victorville, said in a statement. "Amazon isn't going to bully us out of demanding our rights."

Jeffries

Supervisor Yxstian Gutierrez praised Jeffries for his "out-of-the-box thinking."

"Your different perspective has really helped me see things a different way," he said. "I'm going to miss you."

During the presentation, Jeffries received two standing ovations. Obviously humbled by the experience, he said little, remarking, "Thank you all. It's been an honor."

The supervisor, the sole Republican on the board, was first elected to it in November 2012 and won each of his successive races, for a total of three four-year terms. He previously served three terms in the Assembly.

He served as chair twice -- in 2019 and 2023. The position is rotated among the five supervisory districts, with a new appointment each year.

Jeffries has been a fiscal hawk and critic of converting the Inland Empire into a giant warehousing district, often standing as the lone vote in opposition to mega projects, which he has complained are a growing blight and crowd out opportunities for other developments.

He has consistently warned that county government's financial position is tenuous, at best, because of excessive pension costs and other hefty outlays for collective-bargaining units and payments to settle lawsuits. He declined all pay increases for himself, making him the lowest paid board member.

Jeffries challenged some of the sheriff's department's spending priorities and expressed concern about the continued disuse of two-thirds of the Benoit Detention Center in Indio. He additionally advocated for dual use of sheriff's helicopters to help fight wildfires, though Sheriff Chad Bianco balked at the proposition.

The deployment of law enforcement aircraft for firefighting is not uncommon, including in neighboring Arizona.

Throughout the COVID lockdowns, Jeffries joined then-Supervisor Jeff Hewitt in attempting to push back against some of the restrictions that he felt undermined residents' civil liberties and threatened the existence of small businesses.

Jeffries was also at the center of efforts to ensure election integrity, backing the formation of committees to identify problems and come up with solutions.

The supervisor in 2022 took the lead in pressing departments to pull back processing applications for cannabis storefront operations, noting how the board was regularly approving conditional use permits, but operators were often years delayed in actually opening marijuana sales outlets. Jeffries was at the forefront of establishing criteria for the county's marijuana licensing framework, even though he was initially opposed to cannabis sales in general after the First District became overwhelmed by illegal grows and sales sites.

Improving efficiencies and resources within the county fire department was among his foremost concerns.

Jeffries was a volunteer county fireman from 1977 to 2006, working as a full-time seasonal firefighter in 1981 and later becoming an emergency medical technician as part of his volunteer service.

In addition to the political scene, he has been a real estate investor for decades, running a business at the same time as serving in government.

He announced his decision to retire in October 2021, saying that although he had roots in Riverside County going back to 1971, "my children and grandchildren are part of the growing numbers of Californians who have moved out of state for affordable housing, lower crime rates and a better quality of life elsewhere," and he and his wife wanted to remain involved in their lives.

They'll be relocating to a mountain community near Boise, Idaho.

In the November election, former Assemblyman Jose Medina, D-Riverside, won the race for the First Supervisorial District seat. He will be sworn in on or around New Year's Day.

Diesel Health

Truck companies like Alammari's that took a risk to be early adopters of clean trucks are now in limbo, swallowing high operating costs and competing with cheaper diesel-only companies in an already struggling industry.

In the meantime, California's most vulnerable residents who live near roads with heavy diesel truck traffic may have to wait longer for a solution.

The dangers of diesel

Diesel trucks are among the state's biggest sources of microscopic particles of soot, which can damage lungs and trigger asthma attacks and heart attacks. They also play an outsized role in California's smog: While they make up just 6% of all vehicles on California's roads, they are responsible for 72% of nitrogen oxides, a key ingredient of smog, emitted by on-road vehicles, according to the air board.

In addition, health officials declared diesel exhaust, which contains dozens of toxic gases, a human carcinogen several decades ago because of studies linking it to lung cancer.

In the Los Angeles basin, diesel exhaust is responsible for more than two-thirds of the cancer risk posed by air pollution, according to a risk analysis by the South Coast Air Quality Management District.

The biggest dangers from diesels are in communities near high-traffic corridors. People near the ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach, downtown Los Angeles and parts of the Inland Empire are at risk of 350 to 500 cancer cases per million people because of diesel fumes, according to the analysis. That risk has dropped substantially in recent years as trucks get cleaner.

California's clean truck rule is expected through 2050 to save $26.5 billion in statewide health costs and save fleet owners $48 billion through reduced fuel and maintenance costs, according to the air board.

"The health benefits from eliminating the pollution (from diesel trucks) far exceed any cost the industry will bear," said Adrian Martinez, an attorney for environmental group Earthjustice. "Trucking lobbyists and other folks are super loud and they're going to focus on the difficulties of the transition. But millions of Californians affected by pollution from the freight industry is not acceptable."

Lots of obstacles for emissions-free trucking

But a lack of fast, reliable charging stations and the vehicles' limited ranges makes it difficult, even impossible, for trucks to transport goods long distances.

Electric heavy-duty trucks have ranges up to 250 miles, while hydrogen-powered ones can drive about 500 miles on a full tank. They can use the same public fast chargers as cars, but that's impractical because they take up too much space and charging can take up to six hours. For hydrogen, only 22 fueling stations for large trucks are operating or in development statewide, according to the California Energy Commission.

Battery-powered trucks also are heavy, which means they can carry less cargo. As a result, companies have to charge more, which shippers aren't usually willing to pay.

The industry also points to the substantial investment that is needed to expand the electric grid's capacity to eventually charge thousands of battery-powered trucks.

"No one's opposed" to cleaner air, said Matt Schrap head of the Harbor Trucking Association, which represents drayage truck companies. "It is about practical application and implementation of these rules. We have nowhere near enough infrastructure."

The air board's mandate "is the epitome of ready, fire, aim," he said.

Air board officials stress that truck companies have time and flexible options to comply, and the state is working to help them understand and comply with the complex rules.

"People are worried, I get it. But (the deadline) is not tomorrow," said Bruce Tuter, who oversees compliance and outreach at the air board. "Charging times, charging speeds, all of that needs to start building up where it gets quicker to charge a truck and where it's more accessible to charge when you're traveling long distances."

Alammari, the truck company owner from Oakland, said he bought his two hydrogen trucks because he had interest from a shipping company that wanted to work with zero-emission vehicles. The profits Alammari would have made working with that company would have justified the added costs of operating a hydrogen fuel cell truck, he said.

At the last minute, however, the company chose to work with someone else. Without any customers willing to pay more to ship with his hydrogen trucks, he can't use them. He's doing his best to transition his entire fleet to zero-emission vehicles. He had even ordered three more.

But even with help from state grants, Alammari said it's not enough to help him operate the zero-emission vehicles or buy more of them. He pays substantially more for insuring them, and it costs twice as much to fully fuel them with hydrogen compared to a diesel, he said.

Without companies willing to ship goods with zero-emission vehicles, early adopters of the technology, like his company, The Crew Transportation, Inc., are at a disadvantage until the mandate makes everyone comply.

"If I don't get customers to use these trucks, The Crew Transportation is not going to move forward to get the three remaining hydrogen trucks we ordered," he said.

Air board officials created the most stringent deadlines for drayage trucks partly because they travel near the most vulnerable communities — the low-income communities of color around the ports. They also tend to make shorter trips compared to other heavy-duty trucks, and ports are equipped with some fueling and charging stations, air board officials said.

Some companies that operate drayage trucks near disadvantaged communities may qualify for state grants of up to $336,000 toward the cost of a new hydrogen or electric truck. Under the regulation, they are able to keep their diesel trucks until they reach 800,000 miles or 18 years, whichever is earlier.

But, based on how many miles are already on his trucks, Alammari expects them to be unusable by 2028 under the mandate. As he sees it, the future of the company he's worked so hard to build is at risk.

In the Los Angeles area, Sandra Espinoza, a truck driver for IMC Logistics, drives seven miles between Lomita and Torrance several times a day before powering up at the WattEV charging station in Long Beach. It's a short and easy work route that makes it easy for a battery-powered truck.

"They're really quiet, and a really smooth drive," she said. "You don't smell the fumes. When it's (charged) 100%, you're gonna be able to go through your day."

Most of the state's truck fleets are considered "high priority" — federal fleets, such as the post office, and companies with at least one vehicle in California and $50 million or more in gross annual revenue or 50 or more vehicles.

These large operators have two ways to comply. Most are choosing a phase-in option. Under that option, smaller vehicles, such as UPS or Amazon delivery vans and box trucks, must be 100% zero emissions by 2035. But long-distance, heavy-duty trucks get more time to comply: 10% must be zero emissions by 2030 and 100% by 2042.

Jim Gillis, president of Compton-based IMC Logistics' Pacific region, said the air board's deadlines are so aggressive that it poses challenges to even large companies like his. His company has 319 diesel trucks, 50 hydrogen fuel cell trucks and six electric trucks in California. Installing a handful of charging stations at its headquarters was an investment of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Gillis said trucking companies essentially are conducting research and development with these zero-emission technologies. The new trucks have frequent recalls and can make hauls more expensive. Battery powered trucks have to be used for shorter trips because of their limited range.

Gillis said the federal government's delay in approving a waiver for California's truck rule doesn't help his company, since it already bought the clean trucks and has to compete with other companies. But he said IMC is large enough that it can absorb the costs without much consequence.

Electric and hydrogen trucks are the future, Gillis said, adding that large companies like his have a responsibility to show the way.

"We have to do it now," Gillis said. "The more we try to delay this, it's just going to be more painful down the road. Every mile that I put on a hydrogen truck today is going to benefit somebody down the road."

'A literal case of life and death' in communities

As fleet owners struggle with the transition to clean fuels, families near freeways and basketballs into a hoop set up on the street, without any fear.

Now, at 31, Antonio sees no kids outside. Families keep their children indoors and shut all the windows to keep the pollution and noise out.

When Antonio's nephew visits the family home, just a few hours playing in the front yard will give him nosebleeds. "It's depressing,"

California has an aggressive mandate for zero-emission trucks, which are powered by electricity or hydrogen. But trucking companies face big obstacles — and people are still breathing dangerous diesel exhaust.

ports throughout California suffer the consequences of inhaling toxic fumes.

Ulloa looks out of his bedroom window toward Drumm Avenue in Wilmington and sees diesel trucks hauling cargo from the Port of Los Angeles lined up on his street. To feel any relief, he confines himself in this room.

When he's at work in Costa Mesa, his asthma symptoms don't bother him. But he said his coughing starts as soon as he's home. Last year, during Thanksgiving dinner, he was hospitalized for three days before his asthma could be stabilized.

"As soon as I get home from work the smell of diesel fumes and the dirt makes me cough," Jose said. "I have to lock myself in my room with my air purifier and humidifier on. As soon as I go outside, I start coughing."

The family has lived there for almost 30 years, long before the trucks serving the port started coming through their neighborhood. Antonio Ulloa, Jose and Imelda's son, remembers being a child and playing with other kids in the street. They'd play tag, skateboard and shoot he said.

Wilmington has long been known as one of the areas most affected by the air pollution. Community members report allergies, nosebleeds and the need for supplemental oxygen. About 12% of children in Wilmington have been diagnosed with asthma as of 2023, according to data from the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health.

People living near the ports of LA and Long Beach breathe the highest concentrations of diesel exhaust in the Los Angeles basin, which raises their risk of lung cancer. Out of every million people chronically exposed to diesel fumes in West Long Beach, more than 350 people could contract cancer, according to South Coast Air Quality Management District analysis.

"It's a literal case of life and death for a lot of our community members and our loved ones," said Paola Vargas, a Carson resident and organizer with nonprofit East Yard Communities for Environmental Justice.

"Every day matters. Every day we don't have those (truck emissions) rules and they aren't passed is a day wasted and a day of harmful impacts for us."

UC Irvine researchers reported last year that even considering new vehicle technology and the state mandate, heavy-duty drayage trucks will still cause an estimated 2,142 asthma attacks and 106 premature deaths and $1.31 billion in health costs in 2035. That is a dramatic improvement, though, as trucks have gotten cleaner under air board rules: In 2012, they caused an estimated 15,468 asthma attacks, 483 premature deaths and $5.59 billion in health costs.

Most of the asthma cases and deaths will be in disadvantaged communities along highway routes between the ports and Inland Empire warehouses, according to the study. The researchers concluded that it is worth paying truck companies more than a billion dollars to replace diesels expected to be on the road in 2035 because of the health effects.

"The problem is not going to solve itself," said Jean-Daniel Saphores, chair of UC Irvine's department of Civil and Environmental Engineering and an author of the study. "These trucks are still doing a lot of harm and they're disproportionately harming disadvantaged groups, even with all the regulation."

The harm to disadvantaged communities extends to the Inland Empire, where an abundance of land is spurring warehouse development that draws more truck traffic.

San Bernardino County's nearly 2,500 warehouses, for instance, generate 362,000 truck trips a day, according to data by Warehouse CITY, a tool created in collaboration with Pitzer College and research agency Radical Research. In Los Angeles County, 16,600 warehouses generate 267,000 daily truck trips.

MaCarmen Gonzalez, a San Bernardino resident, said she noticed that many young children in her community carry inhalers. After learning about the impacts of diesel pollution, she became an activist for clean air, including the state's zero-emissions truck rule.

"You can't see (the exhaust), but it's killing you," she said.

Parents struggle to find places for their children to play outdoors in neighborhoods near the Port of LA. On a recent sunny afternoon, Brittany Guevarra played with her three-year-old son at the Wilmington Waterfront Park playground.

In the background, on Harry Bridges Boulevard, a long line of diesel trucks passed by. The strong smell of diesel exhaust occasionally wafted through the park as children played to the rumble of traffic.

Guevarra used to live in San Pedro, but the cost of housing was too high. She was drawn to Wilmington by cheaper rent. At the time, the trucks and port pollution didn't cross her mind. Now, it's inescapable.

"Afterward I thought about it and I was like, 'dang,'" Guevarra said. "I do worry. That's why I keep (my son) inside. I know it's bad."

As the seemingly endless stream of trucks kept coming, Guevarra walked her son home after playing in the park. She doesn't think she'll ever return.

POLLO ASADO

By CONNOR FORBES

Chicken is what is for dinner many nights. And it can get redundant if you have it the same way over and over and over. It may even become a drag. Not chicken AGAIN!

But chicken is so popular because it can be molded into so many different dishes. It can be fried, it can be baked, it can be griddled.

On Tuesday, we did a taco night, as we do often. So, I whipped up some pollo asado for the tacos and it was loved by the kids as well as the adults. Always the challenge around here. So let's make some Pollo Asado.

Ingredients

- 1.5 lbs chicken breast, diced
- ½ cup orange juice
- 1 lime squeezed
- 1 tbsp cumin
- ½ tsp oregano

- 1 tsp salt
- 3 cloved garlic finely diced
- 1 tbsp olive oil

To Make

Mix all the ingredients in a bowl and marinate for at least 30 minutes. Overnight would be ideal. Heat a sauté pan over medium heat and add the pollo asado. Cook until browned and juice has cooked off. Serve and EAT!

Here's a crowd-pleasing recipe to try that pairs cheesy cornbread with flavorful chili:

CHILI TOPPED CHEESY CORNBREAD

Ingredients:

- 2 corn on the cobs
- 1 cup self-rising flour
- 1/2 tsp baking powder
- 1/2 tsp cayenne pepper
- 3/4 cup natural yogurt
- 4.6 fluid ounces olive oil
- 1 cup instant polenta
- 2 tablespoons maple syrup
- 1 tablespoon cider vinegar
- 1 bunch green onions, finely sliced
- 3 ounces feta, crumbled
- 1/2 can Amy's Organic 3 Bean Vegetable Chili
- 1 1/2 ounce mature cheddar, grated
- 1 teaspoon nigella seeds

Directions:

1. Place a large frying pan over high heat and char the whole corn on all sides for 10 minutes, turning regularly until slightly blackened. Remove to a board and cut off all the kernels into a bowl.

2. Preheat the oven to 325 degrees F. Grease and line a 10-inch ovenproof skillet pan.

3. Tip the flour, baking powder, cayenne pepper and 1 teaspoon salt into a bowl and whisk together.

4. In another bowl, mix together the yogurt, oil, polenta, maple syrup and vinegar; whisk until combined.

5. Pour the wet mix into the dry ingredients and fold to combine. Add the green onions, feta and charred corn and stir again.

6. Pour the cornbread mix into the prepared skillet. Add small spoonfuls of Amy's Organic Spicy Chili on top. Top with grated cheddar and nigella seeds. Bake in the oven for 40-45 minutes until risen and a skewer comes out clean.

7. Enjoy while warm or serve at room temperature. Best eaten that day.

Pro tip: Serve alongside smashed avocado or fresh tomato salsa. Slice the cornbread up, pop into the freezer and when you fancy a slice, simply defrost and reheat in the toaster. (StatePoint)

“KRAVEN THE HUNTER”

In between the blockbusters of the Thanksgiving season and the blockbusters of the Christmas season comes “Kraven the Hunter,” a movie that was never going to be a blockbuster in any season. Sergei “Kraven” Kravinoff (Aaron Taylor-Johnson) is another one of those Spider-Man villains that’s getting his own movie because Sony still has a piece of the “Spider-Man” franchise and they think fans will mistake it for the Marvel Cinematic Universe, which is owned by Disney. “Venom,” “Morbius,” and “Madame Web” are all part of the same branch. Supposedly there are (or at least “were”) plans for a big Avengers-style crossover down the line, but these movies keep bombing so badly that fans don’t care if they continue.

Kraven’s origin is that he and his brother Dmitri (Fred Hechinger) were brought up by their imposing Russian gangster father Nikolai (Russell Crowe), who was big on hunting metaphors. After their mother died under mysterious circumstances, Nikolai took the boys on a hunting trip, where Sergei was mauled by a lion. He nearly died, but aspiring voodoo priestess Calypso (eventually played by Ariana DeBose) gave him a magical potion that not only restored his health, but gave him the ability to communicate with animals. Now Kraven is a hunter like his father, but instead of animals, he hunts people. Sometimes this just means tracking people down to talk to them (like Calypso, who’s now a lawyer), but usually it means killing bad guys.

Kraven spends most of the movie trying to protect Dmitri, whether it’s from their father’s control or from a rival gangster known as The Rhino (Alessandro Nivola). The Rhino employs an assassin called The Foreigner (Christopher Abbott), whose gimmick is that he can disappear while he counts to three, then pop out somewhere unexpected, usually to kill someone. The moment I met this character, I knew his downfall was going to come in a scene where he disappears for a two-count, then something “surprising” keeps him from reaching three. The movie could have done without the dull Foreigner, since it already has a pretty good surefire villain in The Rhino and a complicated villain in Nikolai.

For that matter, the protagonists aren’t bad either. I can actually see Taylor-Johnson, Hechinger, DeBose, Nivola, and Crowe making an effort here. I can see Taylor-Johnson turning Kraven into a cool character under different circumstances. I got a few chuckles out of Nivola’s scenery-chewing. But this isn’t a movie that knows how to capitalize on the talent in its ranks. This is a movie that is here to slap together a few smoldering shots for publicity stills, a few action scenes for trailers, and call it a day. Taylor-Johnson is fine when he’s giving a performance, but not when “Kraven” is unconvincingly hopping around a supposed maximum-security prison. Nivola gives his character some engaging personality, but it’s hard to notice when he’s become an ugly (not terrifying, just ugly) CGI Rhino.

“Kraven the Hunter” is just another in a long line of Spider-Man-adjacent bombs. There’s only one way I see these Sony also-rans having any kind of future: Disney needs to buy them for a song and bring them over for the crossover with the one character that can make them interesting. I’m not talking about Spider-Man, I’m talking about Deadpool! Don’t laugh (or do, I don’t care), he’s helped the public regain interest in the likes of Elektra, Chris Evans’ Human Torch, even himself after his awful 2009 debut. ‘Moana 2,’ ‘Wicked’ Still Lead the Way at Box Office

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - “Moana 2” is the most popular movie at North American theaters for the third straight weekend, grossing another $26.6 million, according to industry estimates released Sunday.

Disney’s animated sequel to its 2016 hit about the daughter of a Polynesian village chief once again topped Universal Pictures’ “Wicked,” which made $22.5 million in its fourth weekend, Comscore reported.

Third place went to “Kraven the Hunter,” a spinoff movie for a character from the Spider-Man series, which opened with $11 million.

“Gladiator II” took fourth place with $7.8 million Friday through Sunday in its fourth week.

The animated “Lord of the Rings: The War of the Rohirrim” opened with $4.6 million for fifth place.

Rounding out the top 10 domestic releases were “Red One” ($4.4 million), a re-release of Christopher Nolan’s 2014 film “Interstellar” ($3.3 million), “Pushpa: The Rule Part 2” ($1.6 million), “The Best Christmas Pageant Ever” ($1.3 million) and “Queer” ($790,954).

This weekend’s overall three-day box office haul was estimated at $88 million. The year-to-date total is $8.12 billion -- down 4.8% from the figure at this time last year, according to Comscore.

Sober Holidays

Plan drink options in advance of social events

"Having something in your hand just ups your comfort level, because you feel like you're socializing with this thing in your hand, instead of standing there with your hands at your side," says on the market (they're not all equally tasty) and check which are on the menu at a bar or restaurant you'll be visiting.

If you'll be hosting a party or attending one at someone's home, you also can mix up your own mocktail recipes in advance.

"Treat these drinks like they're really special,"

Lauren Minichiello, 11, holding a Rose Martini mocktail.

Erin Minichiello via AP

Abby Ehmann, who owns Hekate Cafe and Elixir Lounge, a sober bar on New York City's Lower East Side.

It can help to choose your alcohol-free options in advance. If you prefer something that reminds you of alcohol, sample some of the many non-alcoholic wines and beers says Vermont-based chef Suzanne Podhaizer, who makes an assortment of mocktails when she entertains.

Don't forget the garnish, she says: "Consider putting a sugar rim on your glasses or using luster dust on top. The more you make the non-alcoholic drinks feel celebratory, the better people are going to feel."

Mocktails also make great hostess gifts. Mix up a batch of your favorite recipe, pour it into a large Mason jar and tie it with a ribbon to bring with you.

Make social plans that don't focus on drinking

This year, plan to gather somewhere other than a bar. It's the perfect season "to have some lovely hot chocolates, take them outdoors and go ice skating," says Kate Baily, a women's health coach in the U.K. and host of the podcast Love Sober.

If you're invited to an event that is all about drinking, give yourself permission to skip it, says Adam Cannon, a real estate agent in Pittsburgh who has been sober for 18 years.

In his industry, "at this time of year, there's a different networking event every night of the week," Cannon says. He opts not to go if "ostensibly, it's about networking, but it's at a bar. People are getting hammered."

Know your sober social window

Even if it's your habit to stay out late, "you don't have to do what you've always done at this particular Christmas party," Haydel says. Drop in for the first hour, then allow yourself to leave when you wish.

You won't miss much. "There's a witching hour when you're out at a bar or drinking with friends," Jeboult says. "When people get past two drinks, three drinks, the stories are the same."

If need be, slip out without explanation. Whether you call it a "French exit" or an "Irish goodbye," it's totally an option.

Take breaks and connect with sober support

If you're feeling stressed during a holiday gathering, "take a time out," Jeboult says. Escape to the bathroom, step outside for a minute or go for a walk.

Snack breaks help, too. Jay Bridwell, a recovery counselor at Red Rock Behavioral Health in Oklahoma City, often uses the acronym HALT with patients in addiction recovery. If you are "Hungry, Angry, Lonely or Tired," he says, you may be more likely to reach for alcohol. So build in time for rest and meals.

And have a plan if things get tough. Whether it's an Alcoholics Anonymous sponsor, a sober relative or a group text with healthy friends, stay connected with people who will support you, Bridwell says. You can also join an online sober group and follow sobriety-related social media accounts.

Plan your transportation

Map out multiple transportation options, rather than relying on one person for a ride home from a party. You'll have less stress, and feel less motivated to temper stress with alcohol, if you have the freedom to leave when you wish.

View being sober as a holiday gift to yourself

During her first sober holiday season last year, Haydel reveled in meaningful conversations and the joy of waking up feeling good each morning with clear memories of the night before.

"Sobriety is the gift that you keep on giving to your future self over and over and over again," says Elliott Edge, who manages Hekate, the sober bar.

Focus on enjoying this very real gift, Baily says. Take your time getting dressed, visualizing yourself having a great time, and imagine how you'll feel as your head hits the pillow when you get home.

As a finishing touch, plan a reward for the next day. Maybe a breakfast date with a friend or a morning walk in the park that will feel especially good because you won't be hung over.

"You've got the best bits of the evening," Baily says, "and there are no costs."

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. Notice to Potential Bidders If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a Trustee auction. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same Lender may hold more than one mortgage or Deed of Trust on the property. Notice to Property Owner The sale date shown on this Notice of Sale may be postponed one or more times by the Mortgagee, Beneficiary, Trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about Trustee Sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. Sixth Street, Corona, CA 92882 2 File No.:24-08289CA The street address and other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 12232 Brianwood Drive, Riverside (Unincorporated Area, CA 92503. The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. Said sale will be made in an "AS IS" condition, but without covenant or warranty, expressed or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note(s) secured by said Deed of Trust, with interest thereon, as provided in said note(s), advances, if any, under the terms of the Deed of Trust, estimated fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust, towit: $265,423.80 (Estimated) as of . Accrued interest and additional advances, if any, will increase this figure prior to sale. It is possible that at the time of sale the opening bid may be less than the total indebtedness due. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call, (916) 939-0772 for information regarding the trustee's sale or visit this internet website, www.nationwideposting.com, for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case, T.S.# 24-08289CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (916) 939-0772, or visit this internet website www.nationwideposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case 24-08289CA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. 3 File No.:24-08289CA If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. If you continue to have difficulty, call City of Corona Purchasing Department at 951-736-2274. All bonds are to be secured from a surety that meets all of the State of California bonding requirements, as defined in Code of Civil Procedure Section 995.120, and is admitted by the State of California.

Pursuant to Public Contract Code Section 22300, the successful bidder may substitute certain securities for funds withheld by City to ensure performance under the Contract.

The Work is subject to the payment of not less than prevailing wages pursuant to Chapter 1 (beginning at Section 1720 et seq.) of Part 7 of Division 2 of the California Labor Code, as well as Title 8, Section 16000 et seq. of the California Code of Regulations ("Prevailing Wage Laws"). The Director of the Department of Industrial Relations ("DIR") has determined the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which this work is to be performed for each craft or type of worker needed to execute the Contract which will be awarded to the successful bidder, copies of which are on file and will be made available to any interested party upon request at Owners office or online at <http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlsr>. A copy of these rates shall be posted by the successful bidder at the Project site.

Pursuant to SB 854, which amended the Prevailing Wage Laws, this Contract is subject to compliance monitoring and enforcement by the DIR. Beginning March 1, 2015, with very limited exceptions no contractor or subcontractor may be listed on a bid proposal for this Contract unless registered with the DIR pursuant to Labor Code section 1725.5. Beginning April 1, 2015, no contractor or subcontractor may be awarded this Contract unless registered with the DIR pursuant to Labor Code section 1725.5. The DIR registration number for each contractor and subcontractor must be identified on the bid proposal - failure to identify this number could result in the bid being rejected as nonresponsive. It is each bidder's responsibility to ensure that they have fully complied with SB 854. The City will report all necessary contracts to the DIR as required by the Prevailing Wage Laws.

The successful bidder and their subcontractor(s) shall comply with all applicable Prevailing Wage Laws, which include, but are not limited to the payment of not less than the required prevailing rates to all workers employed by them in the execution of the Contract, the employment of apprentices, the hours of labor, the payment of overtime, and the debarment of contractors and subcontractors. The successful bidder and all subcontractor(s) under him shall also be responsible for any and all violations and fines imposed on them pursuant to the Prevailing Wage Laws. Before the Contract is awarded, the successful bidder shall be a licensed contractor pursuant to the Business and Professions Code and shall be licensed in the following appropriate classification(s) of contractor's license(s), for the work bid upon, and must maintain the license(s) throughout the duration of the Contract: a valid Class A General Engineering license(s) sufficient to cover all of the work to be performed.

The successful bidder must fully comply with all applicable laws, rules and regulations in furnishing or using equipment and/or providing services, including, but not limited to, emissions limits and permitting requirements imposed by the South Coast Air Quality Management District (SCAQMD) and/or California Air Resources Board (CARB). Although the SCAQMD and CARB limits and requirements are broader, the successful bidder shall specifically be aware of their application to "portable equipment", which definition is considered by SCAQMD and CARB to include any item of equipment with a fuelpowered engine. The successful bidder will be required to indemnify City against any fines or penalties imposed by SCAQMD, CARB, or any other governmental or regulatory agency for violations of applicable laws, rules and/or regulations by the successful bidder, its subcontractors, or others for whom the successful bidder is responsible under its indemnity obligations.

CARB implemented amendments to the InUse OffRoad DieselFueled Fleets Regulations ("Regulation") which are effective on January 1, 2024 and apply broadly to all selfpropelled off road diesel vehicles 25 horsepower or greater and other forms of equipment used in California. A copy of the Regulation is available at: <https://ww2.arb.ca.gov/sites/default/files/barcu/regact/2022/offroaddiesel/appa-1.pdf>.

Bidders are required to comply with all CARB and Regulation requirements, including, without limitation, all applicable sections of the Regulation, as codified in Title 13 of the California Code of Regulations section 2449 et seq. throughout the duration of the Project. Bidders must provide, with their Bid, copies of Bidder's and all listed subcontractors' most recent, valid Certificate of Reported Compliance ("CRC") issued by CARB. Failure to provide valid CRCs as required herein may render the Bid nonresponsive.

Award of Contract: The City shall award the Contract for the Project to the lowest responsive, responsible bidder as determined from the lowest total for the summation of the base bid Schedule A alone. The City reserves the right to reject any or all bids or to waive any irregularities or informalities in any bids or in the bidding process.

From Star Quarterback to Respected Official, Norco's Charlie Chastain Still in the Game

Former Norco High quarterback Charlie Chastain has become one of California's leading high school football officials. Chastain, a 1981 graduate of Norco, was the umpire for the CIF Div. 1A state championship bowl game between Fresno Central and Huntington Beach Edison at Saddleback College in Mission Viejo on Saturday.

Edison won, 21-14, when quarterback Sam Thomson connected with Sam Minter on a 52-yard pass and run that put the winning points on the board in the final minute.

Chastain carpooled with the six other officials in the crew. On the way, Chastain received a call that his father-in-law, Lawson Latham had died. Chastain said he was committed to officiating the game and pressed on.

In 1980, Chastain led Norco to a share of the Mountain View League title and the first round of the playoffs where it lost to eventual division champion Covina.
