CREWS TO PREP FOR ARRIVAL OF WILDFIRE SEASON WITH DAYLONG EXERCISE

NORCO (CNS) - Cal Fire crews throughout the Inland Empire will join municipal fire agencies next week for a preparedness drill in Norco intended to gauge the firefighters' readiness for Southern California's wildfire season.

"This annual drill offers the Riverside County Fire Department's leadership the opportunity to evaluate operational readiness, identify areas for improvement and ensure equipment meets safety compliance standards," according to a Cal Fire statement. "The state fleet from across the region and the Riverside Unit will also conduct equipment inspections to certify that all apparatus is functioning at full capacity."

Along with regular Cal Fire personnel, California Conservation Corps crews from the Bautista, Los Pinos, Norco and Oak Glen camps will be on hand for the exercise, joined by engine and truck companies from the Corona and Riverside fire departments.

The April 29 agenda is slated to include "tool-out inspections," hikes emphasizing safety and speed, fire shelter deployments, hand-line construction assessments and hose lays, according to officials.

Most of the daylong activity will be confined to the Ingalls Event Center on Crestview Drive.

There was no indication that smoke would be visible from the complex over the duration of the drill.

Wildfire season generally spans May to November, depending on the arrival of autumn or winter rains.

Son Accused in Machete Attack of Father, Charged with Attempted Murder

LAKE HILLS - A 21-year-old man accused of slashing his father with a machete during a confrontation at the victim's home was charged Tuesday with attempted murder and other offenses.

Collin Adam Stewart of Riverside was arrested Thursday during a Riverside County Sheriff's Department investigation.

Along with attempted murder, Stewart is charged with mayhem and a sentence-enhancing allegation of inflicting great bodily injury with a deadly weapon.

According to Riverside Sheriff's Sgt. Patrick Montalvo, at approximately 2:30 am last Thursday, deputies responded to a report of an assault with a deadly weapon in the unincorporated area of Lake Hills. The victim reported that his son, since identified as Stewart, fled after attacking the father with a machete.

Responding deputies spotted Stewart at the intersection of La Sierra Avenue and McAllister Parkway and took him into custody without resistance.

The victim was taken to the hospital and is recovering from non-life-threatening injuries, according to the sheriff.

No information has been disclosed concerning the nature of the dispute that led to the attack. Anyone with information on the matter is encouraged to call Corporal Delgado at the Lake Mathews Sheriff's Station at 951-272-5600.

Wanna Bug Out? Buzz Over to Downtown Riverside Saturday

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - Downtown Riverside will be bug-ging out Saturday for the 11th annual "Insect Fair," featuring an assortment of creepy crawlers for people to see, touch and possibly taste.

The UC Riverside Department of Entomology, in partnership with the city, is staging the event outside the Main Library, 3900 Mission Inn Ave. The exhibition runs from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Insects considered parasites and pests, as well as others consumed as delicacies in some parts of the world, will be available for visitors to check out.

"Guests will experience the world of insects, as they play pollinator games, enter a butterfly tent and meet exotic bugs," according to a city statement. "With more than 40 booths and countless scientists, guests are encouraged to bring their inquisitive minds and questions."

Chef Dana Roa will provide demonstrations of how some insects end up on dinner tables, considered culinary delights.

Organizers said there will be Hercules beetles, bird-eating tarantulas, praying mantises and other critters -- including some of the more common ones that area residents might find hanging out in their yards.

UCR entomology students and professors will be available to answer questions -- and put visitors at ease.

More information about the fair is available at www.riversideca.gov, or by calling 951-313-7541.

Jobless Rate Edges Down in Riverside County

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - Riverside County's unemployment rate fell slightly last month amid a blend of gains and losses throughout the regional economy, according to figures released Friday by the California Employment Development Department.

The countywide jobless rate in March, based on preliminary EDD estimates, was 5.1%, compared to 5.2% in February.

According to figures, the March rate was one-tenth of a percentage point below the year-ago level, when countywide unemployment then stood at 5.2%.

Cherry Valley had the highest unemployment rate within the county in March at 10.6%, followed by Rancho Mirage at 8.2%, Coachella at 7.7%, Hemet at 6.8% and Nuevo at 6.5%.

The combined unemployment rate for Riverside and San Bernardino counties -- the Inland Empire -- was 5%, down from 5.1% in February, the EDD said.

Bi-county data indicated that payrolls increased by the widest margin last month in the public sector, which added 2,000 positions, mostly in education.

Additional gains were recorded in the health services and hospitality sectors, which expanded by a total 2,700 jobs, while miscellaneous unclassified industries added another 400, according to figures.

The largest drop in March was in the trade, transportation and utilities sector, which shed an estimated 5,000 jobs, mainly in warehousing. Further losses were documented in the agricultural, construction, financial services, information technology, manufacturing and professional business services sectors, which shrank by an aggregate 1,800 jobs, according to the EDD.

Only the mining sector was unchanged.

The statewide non-seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate in March was 5.3%.

Corona Native and Former OneRepublic Bassist Myers to Challenge Calvert in Midterms

By MICHAEL R. BLOOD
AP Political Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the fight for the U.S. House, Democrats are hoping pop rock star power will help oust a long-serving Republican east of Los Angeles as the party looks to regain control of the chamber and slow President Donald Trump's agenda.

Tim Myers, a Grammy-nominated former bassist for international hitmakers OneRepublic, announced Thursday he will challenge Rep. Ken Calvert in the battleground 41st District in Riverside County that stretches from the L.A. suburbs to the resort haven of Palm Springs.

"Ken Calvert has been in Washington for 30 years," Myers says in a video announcing his campaign.

The "status quo isn't working."

Christian Martinez, a spokesperson for the campaign arm of House Republicans, said in a statement that "Democrat Tim Myers is everything wrong with today's radical left: a Hollywood liberal trying to fake his way into Riverside County."

Myers grew up in Corona, most of which is in the district, but now lives in neighboring Los Angeles County.

At a time when competitive House contests are becoming scarcer nationwide, Democrats consider Calvert's closely divided California district one of the party's best opportunities to gain ground in the chamber, where Republicans hold a fragile 220-213 majority.

With Congress and the White House under Republican control — and Democrats facing an uphill fight to take the Senate in 2026 — the California contest will carry added importance as Democrats maneuver to retake the House to provide a counterweight to the Trump administration on issues from immigration to the environment.

Myers, a prolific producer, songwriter and solo artist, is positioning himself as a change agent in a race against one of the most senior members of the House. The 40-year-old Myers said he was in second grade when Calvert, the longest-serving Republican in the state's congressional delegation, was first elected in 1992.

He recounts the ups-and-downs of the notoriously cutthroat music business that eventually led him to found his own record label. He now lives in the tony enclave of Hidden Hills in neighboring Los Angeles County, a popular redoubt for musicians and actors.

5 FACTS PET PARENTS NEED TO KNOW About Protecting Them From Heartworms

Hearthworms are one of the most common and serious health threats faced by pets. According to the American Heartworm Society, more than a million U.S. pets are infected with heartworms, and incidence numbers are rising—even though heartworms are easily prevented. To equip pet parents to provide the protection their four-legged family members need this summer and year-round, the American Heartworm Society is sharing five vital facts about this deadly threat.

1. A single infected mosquito can spread heartworms to multiple pets. Heartworms aren't spread from one pet to another. Instead, they are transmitted when a mosquito feeds on an infected animal, such as a dog, coyote, fox or wolf, then later feeds on other susceptible animals and pets. Within months, heartworms grow from tiny larvae into foot-long adult worms that live in pets' hearts, lungs and blood vessels.

2. Heartworms are found throughout the United States. Warm, humid locales such as the Gulf States and Southeastern U.S. are widely known as hotbeds of heartworm infection, thanks to the presence of mosquitoes that thrive in these conditions. However, heartworms have become increasingly common in regions such as the Southwest, Pacific Northwest, Upper Midwest and New England. One factor supporting broader transmission is the practice of transporting homeless dogs for adoption from areas of the country where heartworms are extremely common to locales that formerly had few cases. Studies also suggest that mosquitoes prefer feeding on pets with heartworms over pets that don't harbor them. Finally, mosquitoes are opportunistic pests that require only small amounts of standing water—including puddles or half-full watering cans—to breed.

3. Heartworms aren't just going to the dogs. While dogs are highly susceptible to heartworm infection, cats and ferrets get heartworms, too. One thing all three species have in common is that they can become very ill, and even die, if infected with heartworms. That's why the American Heartworm Society recommends heartworm screening and year-round prevention for all pets.

4. There's no "season" for heartworms. While the risk of heartworm spread is greatest for pets from spring through fall, experts advise that pets be maintained on heartworm prevention year-round. Estimating when the first and last mosquito of the so-called season will appear is a dangerous guessing game, given the volatility of weather conditions in even the coldest parts of the country. Furthermore, buildings, parking lots and other structures in city and suburban communities can create sheltered "heat islands" with significantly warmer conditions than surrounding open areas. Mosquitoes also survive and thrive by relocating indoors or taking refuge in garages and crawl spaces when temperatures drop.

5. Prevention beats treatment every time. While heartworms in dogs can be treated, treatment can be expensive and requires multiple veterinary visits and months of activity restriction. Cats and ferrets, meanwhile, have no medications to cure their heartworms, because the treatment used in dogs is not safe for them. Fortunately, heartworms can be prevented with veterinary-prescribed medications that are safe, effective and affordable.

A 6-Hour Morning Routine? First, Try a Few Simple Habits to Start Your Day

By ALBERT STUMM
Associated Press

Starting with brushing his teeth before 4 a.m., influencer Ashton Hall says he also swims, meditates, journals, rubs his face with banana peel, lifts weights, submerges his face in ice water and accomplishes much more every day before breakfast around 9:30.

A video of his morning routine has racked up millions of views on social media, while sparking reactions that range from disbelief to awe. It also jumpstarted the conversation online about how best to start the day, even if a six-hour regimen is ambitious to say the least.

Don't worry, said Kamalyn Kaur, a psychotherapist in Cheshire, England. You don't need to start your day with dozens of activities to improve it. But she said it is a good idea to reevaluate how you get going because setting up a relaxed, structured morning will pay dividends for your energy and mood.

"It just sets the tone for the rest of your day," said Kaur, an anxiety expert who advises new clients to start by reevaluating how they spend the morning. "If you set yourself up and you start your day properly, you start off feeling good, you feel organized."

The case for establishing a morning routine

As a professor of workplace psychology at The University of Oklahoma, Shawn McClean has spent years studying how work life is influenced by the rest of your life.

He said accomplishing tasks in the same order every morning is helpful because people have limited mental bandwidth before they have to recharge. The brain subconsciously reserves resources for tasks that require higher-level thinking, so routines are a type of mental shortcut.

"We're cognitive misers," McClean said. "We don't like to use our mental energy on things that aren't important."

His research has found that employees perform better and are more calm throughout the day when they complete their morning regimen uninterrupted. Conversely, employees with disruptive mornings report higher levels of mental depletion late in the day.

"When it comes to routine disruptions, it throws off your whole day," he said on a day when he was playing catch-up after having forgotten about his daughter’s show-and-tell. “You get to work and you realize you didn’t brush your teeth.”

What is a “good” morning routine?

Most people already have some kind of routine in place, but few consciously decided on it before it became automatic, McLean said.

It’s hard to define what a good routine is, and there is no formula that is best for everyone.

“It’s going to be idiosyncratic to each person,” McLean said. “It’s what helps them function. Now, can we have destructive routines? Yes.”

Rushing around in the morning to shower, eat and get out the door just on time is an example of a destructive morning routine, Kaur said. The stress of a rushed morning produces extra cortisol, which is a necessary hormone that helps regulate the circadian rhythm, she said. It’s what naturally wakes you up and makes you alert in the morning.

Too much cortisol in the bloodstream, however, creates a feeling of restlessness and anxiety that can be similar to drinking coffee on an empty stomach, Kaur said.

Where should you start?

People who often have hectic mornings should consider setting their alarm 30 minutes earlier — and resist the urge to hit the snooze button, Kaur said. For many people, snoozed sleep is disrupted sleep that might leave you more groggy.

Kaur recommends adding at least two or three quick activities to your morning that have been shown to improve mood — starting with making your bed. Research shows that clutter foments anxiety, and completing a task first thing in the morning promotes the secretion of the feel-good hormone dopamine, she said.

Next, have a glass of water. If you’ve gotten a full night’s sleep, you’ll likely be slightly dehydrated after not consuming liquids for eight hours. And try delaying caffeine until after eating to avoid being jittery.

At some point within the first hour of waking up, expose yourself to natural light, preferably by taking a quick walk, Kaur said. Even if it’s cloudy, daylight is another trigger for the circadian rhythm that promotes alertness first thing in the morning.

“These habits are important,” she said. “It gives you the optimum chance and the optimum conditions to function better throughout the rest of your day.”

Advocates Fear Effects TRUMP POLICIES Could Have on Special Education

BY CAROLYN JONES,
CalMatters

President Donald Trump has promised to keep special education intact, even as he dismantles the federal department that has overseen it for nearly a half century. But some experts and parents in California fear Trump's policies will imperil the program on multiple fronts, undoing decades of progress for disabled students.

"Students in special education are equally as important as students who aren't, but that hasn't always been the case. The disability community has fought hard for where we are now," said Gina Gandolfi, a former special education teacher in San Bernardino County whose 10-year-old son has Down syndrome. "What if those services are taken away? Kids with disabilities will go back to being second-class students."

Last month, Trump said he's moving special education from the Department of Education, which he's described as wasteful and inefficient, to the Department of Health and Human Services, under the direction of Robert F. Kennedy Jr. Enforcement of special education laws would likely move to the Justice Department. Although the laws surrounding special education wouldn't change, there's likely to be disruptions as the program moves to a new department, especially one not focused on education and that's undergoing a 20% reduction in its workforce. More than 40 disability rights groups sent a strongly worded letter to Congress in early April imploring members to preserve special education funding, keep the program in the Department of Education and leave the department intact. The authors said the plan to move special education to Health and Human Services is "short-sighted, insulting and unacceptable."

Trump has not announced cuts to special education funding, and Congress left its funding intact in the most recently passed budget. But at the same time, Trump has threatened to cut school funding to states — including California — that defy his orders to eliminate diversity programs or scrap protections for transgender students. The federal government currently covers about 10% of California's total cost for special education.

Beyond school funding, Republicans in Congress are debating cuts to Medicaid, which would have a deep impact on services for students with disabilities and their families. School districts use Medicaid to help pay for speech and occupational therapy and mental health services for students with disabilities. In addition, parents with disabled children rely on California's regional centers — funded in part by Medicaid — for diagnoses, in-home visits, equipment like wheelchairs and walkers and other services.

Impacts on special education services

Cuts to any of those programs would have a cascading effect that would upend the disability community, said Kristin Wright, former director of special education for California and currently the executive director of prevention, intervention and inclusive practices at the Sacramento County Office of Education.

For example, if families lose services from a Medicaid-funded agency such as a regional center, they may have to quit working to care for their disabled child. That could potentially catapult a family into poverty.

"It's a fragile ecosystem," they tend to do better academically and socially.

"We've come so far, moving away from pathologizing people and using a medical model of disability toward a social model, where disability is seen as a natural part of the human condition," Wright said. "This feels like we're backpedaling. As a society, we're going to have to decide what we care about, and how committed we are to educating every student."

About 14% of K-12 students in California are enrolled in special education, with disabilities ranging from mild learning disorconsortium for 464 California charter schools. Quann said she's not overly worried about the federal changes — yet.

Special education funding has always been in flux, she said, and the state has its own systems for monitoring and enforcing the program. Even if the federal government cuts its enforcement of special education laws, she said, parents will still be able to file complaints with the state.

She's less sure about the transition to the Department of Health and Human Services. Even in a best-case scenario, there's likely to be some disruptions in payments or services, she said. In a worst-case scenario, the program will be overseen by people with little expertise in how to educate students with disabilities.

The best she can do, Quann said, is to "try and cushion schools from changes at the federal level, so ideally there's no impact on students. I see this as our biggest challenge right now."

But even minor disruptions could be damaging for schools that rely on a smooth-running special education system. One of those schools is the Hanna Academy, a small nonprofit boarding school in Sonoma County that contracts with school districts to serve students with acute behavioral challenges. Federal changes to special education could have lasting effects on students, and jeopardize students' and staff safety, said principal Courtney Jackson.

The academy, which opened in 1945, serves

~ Gina Gandolfi

Wright said. "These programs have evolved together. When you pull any one strand away, it affects everything else."

Wright fears that the changes would set special education back decades. Until the 1970s, when the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act passed, many children with disabilities didn't attend school at all. And for many years, they were often in separate classrooms, segregated from their classmates without disabilities. Now, in California, most students with disabilities spend the majority of their time in general education classes, with the assistance of aides and other supports, where ders to severe autism or traumatic brain injuries.

Typically, students receive extra services from therapists, aides and special education teachers, which can be costly. California spent about $13 billion on special education last year, with about 10% coming from the federal government. That doesn't include money that schools get from Medicaid. If Medicaid is cut, schools would have to find the money elsewhere.

about 50 students from around California. The students receive extensive therapy, vocational training and academic and life-skills classes, delivered in small groups with numerous teachers and aides who can intervene when students have meltdowns or violent outbursts.

Budget cuts will likely mean fewer adults in classrooms, which could endanger students as well as staff. It also means students won't get the individual attention they need and their progress will almost certainly drop off, Jackson said.

"We're dealing with the most delicate population in education. When you start removing services in a careless manner, without a backup plan, it just causes chaos," Jackson said. "The damage will be so deep, it could take years to fix and be far more expensive."

Future of special education law

Special education has traditionally had bipartisan support, with champions in both parties. The Trump administration has promised to leave special education unscathed, but that would require continued funding, said Rorie Fitzpatrick, vice president for K-12 systems at the nonprofit research and consulting firm West-Ed.

"The biggest concern is the future of IDEA," Fitzpatrick said, referring to the 1975 legislation that created special education. "Students with disabilities have a right to a free, appropriate public education under the law. But you need well-trained staff and funding to make that happen. If you cut that funding, you're gut-ting IDEA by default."

Gandolfi, whose son has Down syndrome, said special education has made a world of difference for her son, Nathan, a fourth grader in Redlands Unified. He loves his friends in his general education classroom, and gets extra services like speech and occupational therapy, one-to-one classroom support and academic help through special education. Through the local regional center, he attends classes in swimming, drumming and social skills, as well as camps. He loves hip hop dance, movies, singing and his two younger siblings.

"He's living his best life. He's full of joy. He looks forward to school every day," Gandolfi said. "We want him to have a long, purposeful, meaningful life, and having the support of special ed makes that possible."

I have been a total convert to Bachan's Japanese BBQ Sauce. It is the perfect sauce in my opinion. It is great as a marinade, as a dipping sauce, glaze, or stir fry additive. This is in no way endorsed or sponsored by Bachan's, it's just my own opinion. It is a bit pricey in the regular grocery store, but Costco has a good price on the large bottle.

Anyways, I am always on the search for juicy chicken. And this really does it well. It also shares a new technique of cooking chicken I have been using recently and it is a game changer for extra juicy breasts. Feeds 2-4.

Ingredients

2 large Chicken Breasts
2 tbsp Bachan's BBQ Sauce
1 tbsp Dijon Mustard
2 tbsp cooking oil
¼ cup water

To Make

Combine the Bachan's and Mustard in a large bowl. Add in chicken breasts and slather with sauce completely. Let marinade for 30 minutes (if you have the time). In a large sauté pan, heat oil over medium high heat. Add chicken and sear for 3-4 minutes on first side. Flip. Add water to the pan and cover. Finish cooking until the inside of the chicken is at least 165 degrees F.

Pull chicken out of pan and let rest. For a bonus pan sauce, add any extra of the sauce you have from the bowl to the pan which will likely be runny with the added water. Simmer until thickened. Use as a sauce over the chicken.

Bachan and Mustard CHICKEN

This RUSTIC Dish of BAKED BEANS AND SMOKED SAUSAGES Is Packed With DEEP, AROMATIC Flavors

By CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL Christopher Kimball's Milk Street

Tavče gravče, which translates as "beans in a pan," is a Macedonian classic. Traditionally, large dried white beans called tetovac, named for a city in northwestern Macedonia, are the star of the rustic dish, while onions, garlic, peppers and paprika provide deep, rich flavor and color.

In this recipe from our cookbook "Milk Street 365: The All-Purpose Cookbook for Every Day of the Year," we opted for the convenience of canned butter beans, which are plump, creamy and the best widely available alternative to tetovac beans. If butter beans are difficult to find, cannellini beans work, too.

Combined with sautéed aromatics and baked for an hour with smoked sausages, the beans turn silky-soft and deeply flavorful. Both kielbasa and bratwurst work well. Optional dried mint adds sweet, woody notes that balance the richer flavors.

Don't forget to reserve 1½ cups of the bean liquid before draining the cans. The liquid is added to the pot and keeps the beans plump and moist during baking. If the amount of liquid from the cans comes up short, make up the difference with water. To ensure enough liquid evaporates during cooking, use a Dutch oven with a wide diameter, ideally between 11 and 12 inches. Finish with chopped flat leaf parsley and serve with crusty bread on the side.

BAKED WHITE BEANS AND SAUSAGES WITH PAPRIKA, ONIONS AND SWEET PEPPERS

Start to finish: 1 hour 50 minutes (20 minutes active)

Servings: 6

Ingredients:

4 tablespoons grapeseed or other neutral oil, divided

2 medium yellow onions,

chopped

2 medium red bell peppers, stemmed, seeded and chopped

Kosher salt and ground black pepper

6 medium garlic cloves, thinly sliced

4 teaspoons sweet paprika

1½ teaspoons dried mint (optional)

Three 15½-ounce cans butter beans (1½ cups liquid reserved), rinsed and drained

2 dried árbol chilies OR ¼ teaspoon red pepper flakes

1 to 1½ pounds smoked sausage, such as kielbasa or bratwurst

¼ cup lightly packed fresh flat-leaf parsley, chopped

Instructions:

Heat the oven to 400°F with a rack in the lower-middle position. In a large Dutch oven over medium-high, heat 3 tablespoons of the oil until shimmering. Add the onions, bell peppers and 1 teaspoon salt; cook, stirring occasionally, until lightly browned, 8 to 10 minutes.

Add the garlic, paprika, mint (if using) and ½ teaspoon pepper; cook, stirring, until fragrant, about 1 minute. Stir in the beans and reserved liquid, árbol chilies and 1½ cups water. Bring to a simmer, stirring occasionally, then nestle the sausages into the pot and drizzle the surface with the remaining 1 tablespoon oil. Transfer to the oven and bake, without stirring, until the sausages are browned and the beans on the surface are slightly crisped, 1 to 1½ hours.

Remove the pot from the oven and let stand, uncovered, for about 15 minutes; the bean mixture will thicken as it cools. Transfer the sausages to a cutting board. Cut them into pieces, return them to the pot and stir into the beans. Remove and discard the árbol chilies (if used). Taste and season with salt and pepper, then sprinkle with the parsley. Serve from the pot.

"SINNERS"

By BOB GARVER

If "A Minecraft Movie" is the commercial hit that 2025 needed, then "Sinners" is the creative hit it needed. Writer/director Ryan Coogler has delivered a film that starts off as a compelling-enough 1930's period piece before wildly shifting into supernatural territory. But the later developments don't devalue the efforts made in the setup, they simply put the well-established characters on a path they didn't anticipate. Speaking of anticipation, I'm going to be vague with story developments so readers can go into this movie anticipating little more than an unspecified good time.

Frequent Coogler collaborator Michael B. Jordan stars as twins Smoke and Stack, a pair of wannabe gangsters returning to their hometown in Mississippi after limited success in Chicago. They purchase an old sawmill and immediately set about turning it into a nightclub. They get help from old acquaintances, like Smoke's occultist ex-wife Annie (Wunmi Mosaku) to cook and wife-pleasing field worker Cornbread (Omar Benson Miller) to work security. Entertainment in the club is important too, which is why they recruit lushy pianist Delta Slim (Delroy Lindo) and their timid cousin Sammie (Miles Catton) to play guitar. Sammie's preacher father warns him that he'll lose his soul at the club, but promises of music, money, and making moves on a married singer (Jayme Lawson) are too great to resist.

Word of the club spreads quickly, and soon the whole town is excited for the grand opening. Even Stack's tough-talking ex-girlfriend Mary (Hailee Steinfeld) shows up for the occasion, barely let in by Cornbread due to her whiteness, though he relents because she's a community staple. It's even harder to gain entry for Irish stranger Remmick (Jack O'Connell). He's been lured to the club by Sammie's playing, which is so good that it has taken on supernatural powers. Though ostensibly only there to play banjo, Remmick has ulterior motives that will drastically change the course of the movie.

Again, the movie is pretty good even before Remmick shows up. Jordan has engaging chemistry with everyone, including and especially himself. Everything is top-notch technically, from the costumes to the camera work to the seamless effects that allow for two Michael B. Jordans at once. But things really get turned up a notch when Remmick arrives and the other shoe drops. And Remmick's shoe really does drop, in a way, because... the genre shift I've been teasing isn't "musical," but there is a jig.

The rest of the movie closely follows the tropes of the kind of movie it has become. But because there was such an elaborate setup, it seems like all bets are off, even though there are actually very few surprises to those familiar with the genre after a certain point. The characters make some questionable decisions that make me want to rhetorically ask if they've ever seen this kind of movie before. Then I have to remind myself that this is the 1930's and no, they probably haven't.

"Sinners" is above average as a period piece and roughly average as what I can safely call a "thriller." But what really makes it special is the way it combines the two genres, or at least that in combination with Coogler's sharp creative voice. I don't think I'm overselling it to say that this film represents the kickoff of the 2025 Oscars race. It's not like there isn't precedent – "Get Out," another Black-led "thriller" with a "Black Panther" connection, scored a Best Picture nomination for 2017 with a February opening, meaning that the Academy has to remember "Sinners" for two fewer months. I'm not saying that I'm ready to hand this movie the Oscar, but it's hard to picture a race where this movie wouldn't be a worthy contender.

Grade: B

"Sinners" is rated R for strong bloody violence, sexual content and language. Its running time is 137 minutes.

'Sinners' Opens with $45.6 Million to Lead Box Office

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - The horror film "Sinners" opened to $45.6 million this weekend to knock "A Minecraft Movie" from the top of the chart, according to industry estimates released Sunday.

Director Ryan Coogler's film is a period piece set in the Mississippi Delta in 1932, and stars Michael B. Jordan in a dual role as twin brothers. Music also plays a significant role in the film, which includes blues legend Buddy Guy in a dramatic role.

Meanwhile, "A Minecraft Movie" kept chugging along in its third weekend in North American theaters, grossing $41.3 million, Comscore reported.

Third place went to "The King of Kings," an animated, faith-based offering from Angel Studios that took in $17.2 million over Easter weekend. The film is based on a Charles Dickens story about a boy and his father who explore the life of Christ, and boasts an all-star cast of voice actors including Kenneth Branagh, Uma Thurman, Pierce Brosnan, Forest Whitaker, Ben Kingsley and Oscar Isaac, who plays Jesus.

The spy thriller "The Amateur," starring Rami Malek, was fourth with $7.2 million in its second weekend, followed by "Warfare," a drama set in the Iraq war, which made $4.8 million Friday through Sunday in its second week of release.

Rounding out the top 10 domestic releases were "Drop" ($3.3 million), "Colorful Stage! The Movie: A Miku Who Can't Sing" ($2.76 million), a re-release of 2005's "Pride & Prejudice" ($2.7 million), "The Chosen: The Last Supper -- Season 5, Part Three" ($1.8 million) and "Disney's Snow White" ($1.1 million).

This weekend's overall three-day box office haul was estimated at $135 million. The year-to-date total is $2.071 billion -- up 5.3% from the figure at this time last year, according to Comscore.

Pope's Frequent Calls to A Catholic Church Made Him a Revered Figure In War-Battered Gaza

By WAFAA SHURAF and BASSEM MROUE
Associated Press

DEIR AL-BALAH, Gaza Strip (AP) — In the last 18 months of his life, Pope Francis had a frequent evening ritual: He would call the lone Catholic church in the Gaza Strip to see how people huddled inside were coping with a devastating war.

That small act of compassion made a big impression on Gaza's tiny Christian community and was why he was remembered at his death Monday as a beloved father figure in the beleaguered territory.

"I was deeply saddened. He was our biggest supporter after God," said Suheil Abu Dawoud, a 19-year-old Christian in Gaza.

Francis "always healed our wounds and asked us to be strong," he said. "He was always praying for us."

In his last public appearance, Francis called for a ceasefire between Israel and the Hamas militant group. A fervent advocate of interfaith relations, he also urged Hamas to release the dozens of Israeli hostages it is holding and condemned growing global antisemitism.

In his Easter message, Francis expressed his "closeness to the sufferings of Christians in Palestine and Israel and to all the Israeli people and the Palestinian people."

While noting the growing antisemitism, he added: "I think of the people of Gaza and its Christian community in particular, where the terrible conflict continues to cause death and destruction and to create a dramatic and deplorable humanitarian situation."

The war in Gaza began when Hamas-led militants attacked southern Israel on Oct. 7, 2023, killing about 1,200 people, mostly civilians, and abducting 251. Some 59 hostages remain in captivity, 24 of them believed to be alive.

Israel's offensive has reduced much of Gaza to rubble and killed over 51,000 Palestinians, mostly women and children, according to Gaza's Health Ministry, than one meal a day.

"I appeal to the warring parties: Call on a ceasefire, release the hostages and come to the aid of starving people that aspires to a future of peace!" Francis said in his final address.

That appeal also went un-during the war.

Israeli President Isaac Herzog remembered Francis as a man of "deep faith and boundless compassion."

"I truly hope that his prayers for peace in the Middle East and for the safe return of the hostages will soon be answered," Herzog wrote on social media.

In the past year and a half of war, Francis became increasingly outspoken in his criticism of the Israeli military's harsh tactics. A month into the war, he urged an investigation into whether Israel's war amounted to genocide -- a charge Israel vehemently denies.

In December, Francis expressed his pain thinking of Gaza, "of such cruelty, to the machine-gunning of children, to the bombing of schools and hospitals. ... How much cruelty!"

The next month, he called the ongoing humanitarian crisis "very serious and shameful."

Francis was mourned throughout the Arab world and by U.N. officials, including Philippe Lazzarini, head of the agency for Palestinian refugees, UNRWA. He posted on X that the pope's voice "has contributed to draw the attention to significant dehumanization of the war in Gaza & beyond."

Senior Hamas official Basem Naim said Francis was a "steadfast advocate for the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people, particularly in his unwavering stance against the war and acts of genocide perpetrated against our people in Gaza in recent months."

The Holy Land's Christian community has dwindled over the decades through which does not distinguish between civilians and combatants. Most of Gaza's 2.3 million people remain homeless.

Things have worsened over the past month since Israel ended a ceasefire and imposed a closure blocking all humanitarian aid into Gaza. Aid officials say thousands of children have become malnourished and most people have little more heeded. On Monday, Israel's airstrikes killed at least 14 people, according to medical officials.

In Israel, the pope left a more complicated legacy. He was widely appreciated for his outreach to the Jewish people and tough stance against antisemitism. He also was an advocate for freeing the hostages, meeting with their families

Gomez will celebrate the Mass and will be joined by auxiliary bishops, clergy of the Archdiocese of Los Angeles “and many faithful to pray for the soul the Holy Father and bid him a final farewell from our local church in the Archdiocese.”

Francis, the former archbishop of Buenos Aires, Argentina, and the first Latin American pontiff, died Monday -- one day after Easter -- in the Vatican at age 88. He served as pope for 12 years. The Vatican reported the cause of death as a stroke and irreversible cardiocirculatory collapse.

Francis had been diagnosed with chronic lung disease and admitted to a hospital on Feb. 14 for a respiratory episode that developed into double pneumonia. He spent 38 days in the hospital and made his final public appearance on Easter Sunday -- blessing the faithful in St. Peter's Square while sitting in a wheelchair.

The Argentine-born Jorge Mario Bergoglio became pope on March 13, 2013, succeeding Pope Benedict XVI, whose surprise resignation led to Francis' election.

“I join the family of God here in the Archdiocese of Los Angeles, and Catholics all over the world, in grieving the loss of our Holy Father,” Gomez said in a statement.

“In this beautiful Easter season, when we celebrate our hope in the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, we pray that the angels may lead Pope Francis into paradise, that the saints and martyrs welcome him, and that God in his mercy will make his face shine upon his faithful servant and grant him eternal rest in the love that never ends.”

“Over the years, he appointed seven auxiliary bishops to assist me in serving the family of God and he was always quick to show his spiritual closeness to us in our times of need,” Gomez said. “It was just in January that he offered prayers and words of consolation as we faced the destruction caused by the wildfires in the Palisades and Altadena. I will never forget his fraternal comfort as we mourned the sudden taking of our beloved Bishop David O'Connell in 2023,” Gomez said.

“Pope Francis showed us, by his constant example, that we should have a great devotion to the Virgin Mary, who is our Blessed Mother and the Mother of the Church. We turn to Holy Mary now, and we ask for her protection and tender care. May she wrap our Holy Father in the mantle of her love. And may he rest in peace.”

The L.A. archdiocese has created a special webpage -- LACatholics.org/pope-francis -- dedicated to Francis. It includes Gomez's statement, homily, and other writings on Francis, as well as videos, images and other resources.

The archdiocese said the page will be updated with information on Masses and other events during the Novendiales, the nine-day period of mourning for a deceased Pope.

During that period, funeral rites are celebrated daily in Rome by the cardinals, and Masses are offered throughout the world for the repose of the departed pope's soul.

Friday's L.A. Mass will also be livestreamed on @LACatholics and OLACathedral Facebook channels.

emigration and a low birth-rate and makes up just a small percentage of the overall population.

Only 1,000 Christians live in Gaza, an overwhelmingly Muslim territory, according to the U.S. State Department's international religious freedom report for 2024. The report says the majority of Palestinian Christians are Greek Orthodox but they also include other Christians, including Roman Catholics.

Last year, Francis told CBS'

“60 Minutes” that he calls a priest daily at 7 p.m. at the Holy Family Church, the only Catholic church in Gaza, to hear what is happening to the nearly 600 people sheltering at the facility.

“The other day, they were happy because they managed to eat some meat. The rest of the time they eat flour, things made of flour,” Francis told the program. “Sometimes they go hungry and they tell me things. There is a lot of suffering.”

“It's very tough. Very tough. The food arrives, people rush to get it,” he said.

The Rev. Gabriele Romanelli, a church official, said Francis' last call came Saturday.

Suhair Anastas, a Palestinian woman who was part of a group that met Francis in 2023 after she fled Gaza, said she felt “great sadness” over his death.

Anastas, who is Greek Orthodox, had sheltered at the church compound in Gaza before she left.

“He did stand by us, by letting us stay at the church and by taking care of everyone in the church,” she said. “I know he wasn't able to stop the genocide ... but I don't know who can.”

When she met the pope, Anastas had mixed emotions. The experience was “breathtaking,” she said, but she added she also felt traumatized, sad and guilty “that you're meeting him and others are still under bombardment.”

She said she will remember the pope “for standing with us” to a certain extent, but “I wish he could have done more.”

George Antoun, an official at the church, told The Associated Press the pope's interest gave the community hope and inspiration.

Francis was like a father worried for his children and would ask whether there was food, medical care and medicine, he said.

“He was with us step by step and day by day,” Antoun said.

“Don't be afraid. I am with you and praying for you and I will protect you,” Antoun quoted Francis as saying. “He left a big inheritance in Gaza. He is the saint of Gaza.”

policies that he says will hurt veterans and drive up consumer prices.

“Our community is being priced out of homeownership, groceries are more expensive every week and we're constantly under threat from wildfires and rising crime,” Myers said in a statement. “It's time for a change.”

Republicans hold a slim registration advantage in the district — less than 2 points over Democrats — and Calvert has beat back tough challenges in the last two elections. Calvert prevailed by about a 3-point edge in 2024, the same year Trump carried the district by 6 points over Democrat Kamala Harris, the former California U.S. senator and attorney general.

The campaign arm of House Democrats has named Calvert a top target for 2026, as he was in 2024. Calvert's campaign raised over $1.3 million the first quarter of 2025.

California is known as a liberal protectorate. Democrats hold every statewide office, dominate the Legislature and congressional delegation and outnumber registered Republicans by a staggering

2-1 ratio. Still, Republicans retain pockets of political clout in the Southern California suburbs and vast rural stretches, including the Central Valley farm belt.

In 2024, a tough year for Democrats nationally, the party picked up three GOP-held House seats in California.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF Janet Loftus, Janet Louise Loftus, Janet L. Loftus Case No. PRR12501030 To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of Janet Loftus, Janet Louise Loftus, Janet L. Loftus. A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by James Loftus in the Superior Court of California, County of Riverside. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that James Loftus be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on 5/12/2025 at 8:30am in Department 12 located at 4050 Main St, Riverside, CA 92501.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 866-266-7512 or visit this internet website www.elitepostandpub.com using the file number assigned to this case 2023-00034. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale.NOTICE TO TENANTS: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 866-266-7512 or visit this internet website www.elitepostandpub.com using the file number assigned to this case 2023-00034 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase.
