Supreme Court Allows Immigration Agents to Resume 'ROVING PATROLS' in LA, Siding With Trump

BY WENDY FRY AND SERGIO OLMOS, CalMatters

The U.S. Supreme Court today granted the Trump administration's emergency request to lift a temporary restraining order barring federal immigration officials from conducting "roving patrols" and profiling people based on their appearance in Los Angeles and Southern California.

The case is likely to have an enormous impact, not just for Los Angeles but across the country, several experts told CalMatters. It means immigration agents can legally resume aggressive street sweeps that began in early June in Los Angeles, the epicenter for President Donald Trump's mass deportation campaign.

The Supreme Court, by a 6-3 majority, agreed with the Trump administration that federal immigration officers can briefly detain and interrogate individuals about whether they are lawfully in the United States and that they can rely on a "totality of circumstances" standard for reasonable suspicion. That means everything the officer knew and observed at the time of the stop.

The U.S. Supreme Court took the case through its emergency docket, also known as the shadow docket, which is used for cases that are handled speedily with limited briefing and typically no oral argument.

Justices do not have to publish an opinion when they act from the emergency docket. Justice Brett Kavanaugh, nonetheless, wrote a concurring opinion explaining his reasoning in lifting restrictions on Los Angeles immigration sweeps.

EMWD Looks to Create the Next Generation of Water Professionals With Youth Program

INDUSTRY FACES A MAJOR WORKFORCE SHORTAGE IN THE NEXT FIVE YEARS

PERRIS - Life comes fast. One day, you're a new teen entering high school, and four express lane years later, you are a legal adult expected to make life-defining decisions. One learns quickly about the value of guidance and opportunity.

For Gracie Valencia, those came from a source that may not be at the top of one's list, the water company. Specifically, the Eastern Municipal Water District (EMWD), the sixth largest supplier in the state, and based in western Riverside County.

"I would not have had this life-changing opportunity if it wasn't for the Youth Ecology Corps program and the skills and experience it provided me," Valencia confided.

EMWD's Youth Ecology Corps (YEC) provides young adults with short-term opportunities to work part-time at the water district. In partnership with the Riverside County Workforce Investment Board, EMWD has hosted the program for more than a decade, instructing hundreds of 18-to-24-year-olds.

Often, opportunity comes by fulfilling a need. According to the water district, across the nation, the water business is facing a major workforce shortage, with nearly half of current employees eligible to retire in the next five years.

In a year, Gracie Valencia transitioned from Youth Ecology Corps applicant to full-time employee.

EMWD

Locally, EMWD is looking to address that anticipated need, in part, through the YEC program, which is, as described by EMWD Public Affairs Officer Kevin Pearson, "a (paid) level of work experience that can lead to opportunities."

For Valencia, it all began with her search for an opportunity.

Jurupa Valley Brush Fire Lights Up the Hills

JURUPA VALLEY (CNS) - The Pyrite Fire, which has burned 551 acres in mountainous terrain in Jurupa Valley, was 95% contained by Tuesday morning.

All evacuation warnings were lifted shortly after 5 p.m. Sunday, according to the Riverside County Fire Department.

Firefighters worked in favorable conditions Sunday, and resources remained on the line overnight, continuing to build containment lines, according to the department.

Residents were asked to use caution in the area while firefighters continued their work.

Firefighters responded at approximately 5:20 p.m. Friday near Pyrite Street and Granite Hill Drive to reports of a brush fire that initially consumed about 15 acres of vegetation, authorities said.

There were nearly 300 firefighters on the scene, including eight hand crews. They were aided by water drops from two helicopters.

No injuries have been reported, and the cause of the fire is under investigation.

BOARD TIGHTENS COUNTY CAMPAIGN FINANCE REGULATIONS

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - The Board of Supervisors Tuesday approved amending Riverside County's campaign finance regulations so the county superintendent of schools is required to comply with the same caps in place for other county elected officials, while also approving new requirements for so-called "intra-candidate transfers" of funds.

In a 4-0 vote without comment -- and Supervisor Chuck Washington absent -- the board implemented the regulatory changes, which were submitted by the county Executive Office.

"The ... amendments provide greater transparency and allow everyone the right to participate and support the candidates of their choice," according to an EO statement. "The purpose of this ordinance is to ensure that individuals and interest groups continue to have a fair and equal opportunity to participate in electing candidates for county elective office."

The changes were the first ones put forward since Ordinance No. 963, which fixes limits on campaign contributions for county candidates, was enacted in the fall of 2020. For unexplained reasons, the revisions did not include the county superintendent of schools.

"It was and remains the intent of the Board of Supervisors to have included the superintendent of schools in the original version of this ordinance," the EO stated. "This amendment is correcting an oversight."

Then-Supervisor Kevin Jeffries, joined by Washington, sought adoption of No. 963, which caps all individual contributions to any one candidate for county office at $20,000.

With the board's approval Tuesday, the ordinance has set contribution parameters for the schools superintendent that are the same for the assessor-clerk recorder, auditor-controller, any county supervisor, district attorney, sheriff and treasurer-tax collector. The limits do not affect state, federal or municipal elections.

The $20,000 cap applies to all individual contributions in a general, primary, recall or other election cycle. However, exemptions are permitted for candidates who contribute to their own campaign. For instance, the ordinance permits a candidate to self-loan up to $100,000 per election, but in doing so, the loan recipient's opponent is entitled to accept an equal amount in funding to ensure parity.

The other amendment passed by the board concerned intra-candidate transfers, which will no longer be permitted without the express written consent of individual donors.

"When a donor gives money, they express support for a candidate for a specific office, and that expression is protected by the free speech clauses of the state and federal constitutions," according to the Office of County Counsel. "But when a candidate then chooses to run for a different office, what becomes of the donor's speech?"

The attorneys said a candidate for a certain office cannot expect that just because he or she pursues a different office, the original individual contributors support that new campaign and want the money they previously gave going to the new political endeavor.

"This (amended) ordinance prohibits intra-candidate transfers without the consent of donors to the first campaign," according to the EO. "All intra-candidate transfers must be transparent and accounted for."

The ordinance specifies all individual contributions in excess of $1,000 be subject to instant documentation and presentation on the Office of the Registrar of Voters' portal for transparency, adhering to the California Political Reform Act of 1974.

So-called "independent" expenditures by outside organizations in support of a candidate are not impacted by the ordinance. Political action committees, unions, corporations and similar large organized donor groups generating and paying for their own advertisements and promotions are shielded from contribution limits under the U.S. Supreme Court case Citizens United v FEC, which was decided in 2010 based on free speech arguments

Public Safety Expo Next Week to Highlight 'PREPAREDNESS' FOR EMERGENCIES

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - Riverside firefighters and police officers next week will display gear, offer tips on what to do in case of an emergency and provide a host of demonstrations during an event to mark National Preparedness Month.

The annual "Public Safety Preparedness Expo," held every September, is set for noon on Saturday, Sept. 13, in the parking lot for the Galleria at Tyler Mall.

"This year's theme, 'Preparedness Starts at Home,' emphasizes the importance of creating emergency plans and building disaster supply kits," according to a Riverside Fire Department statement. "Our goal is to encourage individuals, families, schools, businesses and neighborhoods to take proactive steps toward emergency preparedness."

According to expo organizers, there will be CPR training, displays of ladder trucks and police patrol vehicles, information on how to form neighborhood watches, as well as details on how to join community emergency response teams.

Fire Chief Steve McKinster said the event will additionally underscore the need for readiness to evacuate at a moment's notice, relying on planning well in advance.

"The wildfires and extreme weather we've seen across the country are a powerful reminder of why it's so important for our communities to be prepared before disaster strikes," he said.

There will be a raffle drawing during the event, offering the chance for entrants to win "Dinner for 4 at a Fire Station," the chief said.

Additional resources and information regarding National Preparedness Month may be found at <https://www.riversideca.gov/readyriverside/>. Anyone interested may also call organizers at 951-826-5334.

Barry Sanders Advocates for People to Know Their Cholesterol Numbers a Year After His Heart Attack

By LARRY LAGE AP Sports Writer

MADISON HEIGHTS, Mich. (AP) — Barry Sanders was not motivated by statistics during his Pro Football Hall of Fame career, memorably opting to retire instead of playing one more season to likely break the NFL's all-time rushing record.

"It never was a driver for me," Sanders said Monday in an interview with The Associated Press.

Nearly 15 months after he had a heart attack, cholesterol numbers have become critically important for the Detroit Lions great. Sanders is hoping to encourage people to talk with their physicians about their cardiovascular health.

"I hope that they take advantage of just having the conversation with their doctor to see what their LDL-C number is — LDL-C is bad cholesterol," Sanders said. "So many of us are impacted by heart disease. Hardly anybody is untouched when you think about a loved one or a friend or relative."

Last year on Father's Day, he woke up with a burning sensation in the middle of his chest and drove himself to the hospital that night after the pain didn't subside.

"They proceeded to run tests and and told me that it was a heart attack," Sanders recalled. "Spent a few days in the hospital, got on a good treatment plan."

Sanders later partnered with Amgen Inc., a biotech drug developer, to amplify his new role as a heart health advocate with a documentary and interviews.

The 57-year-old Sanders retired just before training camp in 1999, when he was within striking distance of Walter Payton's then-record 16,726 rushing yards. Emmitt Smith later set the league mark of 18,355 yards that still stands.

Sanders ran for 15,269 yards for Detroit, a career that included an MVP award in 1997, six All-Pro nods and a Pro Bowl berth in each of his 10 seasons. Detroit drafted Sanders with the No. 3 overall pick in 1989 after his Heisman Trophy-winning season with Oklahoma State.

As World Gets Hotter, Americans Are Turning to More Sugar, Study Finds

By SETH BORENSTEIN AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Global warming in the United States is amping up the country's sweet tooth, a new study found.

When the temperature rises, Americans — especially those with less money and education — drink lots more sugary beverages and a bit more frozen desserts. It amounts to more than 100 million pounds of added sugar (358 million kilograms) consumed in a year, compared to 15 years earlier, according to a team of researchers in the U.S. and United Kingdom writing in Monday's Nature Climate Change.

"Climate change is shaping what you eat and how you eat and that might have a bad effect on your health," said study co-author Duo Chan, a climate scientist at the University of Southampton.

"People tend to take in more sweetened beverages as the temperature is getting higher and higher," Chan said. "Obviously under a warming climate that would cause you to drink more or take in more sugar. And that is going to be a severe problem when it comes to health."

A little added sugar every day adds up

By tracking weather conditions and consumer purchases, the researchers found that sugar consumption rose as temperatures moved between 54 and 86 degrees Fahrenheit (about 12 and 30 Celsius). And the warmer it got, the more sugar was consumed, until appetites began to lessen when it grew warmer than 86 degrees.

The daily difference from higher temperatures doesn't amount to even a single candy bar for the average person. But it adds up over time and has a big effect, said University of California San Francisco endocrinology professor Dr. Robert Lustig, a specialist in pediatrics and obesity who wasn't part of the study.

Lustig wrote in an email that detailed purchase records of 40,000 to 60,000 American households from 2004 to 2019, not using any data after the pandemic hit. Then they looked at the nutritional information of the items bought. That allowed them to eliminate other factors to make a causal link and come up with a calculation for how much extra sugar is consumed per person per degree, said lead author Pan He, an environmental scientist at Cardiff University.

Researcher He said she started thinking about the among poorer Americans, just one added can of sugary soft drink per day increases diabetes risk by 29% — and temperature-related thirst plays a big part in America's obesity epidemic.

The United States' average annual temperature has gone up about 2.2 degrees (1.2 degrees Celsius) since 1895, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

To chart the impact on sugar consumption, researchers compared it to the American Heart Association recommendations: limiting daily intake to 36 grams for men and 25 grams for women.

The team then compared wind, precipitation and humidity records to the study when she noticed that people in the U.S. tend to grab sugary soda when they are thirsty: "From a perspective of nutrition science or environmental science, that could be a problem," she said.

Sugar consumption can vary with gender, income and education

The researchers found that men consumed more sugary soft drinks, and that the amount of added sugar consumed during hot weather was several times higher for low- and very low-income families than for the wealthiest, the study found.

People who work outside drank more sugary drinks

DO WEIGHTED VESTS REALLY HELP YOU GET IN SHAPE FASTER?

By KENYA HUNTER AP Health Writer

In the fitness class Jessie Syfko created for a nationwide gym chain, exercisers wear weighted vests that add a challenge to their workouts.

"People start to realize how good it feels to work just a little bit harder and a little bit smarter" without actually changing what they're doing, said Syfko, senior vice president for Life Time gyms.

Weighted vests are increasingly showing up in fitness classes and on jogging tracks, touted by social media influencers as a way to keep bones healthy, improve performance and even accelerate weight loss. They are exactly what they sound like – vests that add resistance to the torso through pockets with removable weights.

But there's a lack of robust research on their benefits, experts say, so it's unclear how much of the hype is justified. And some people, such as seniors or those who are pregnant, should be cautious about using them.

Here are the potential benefits of weighted vests

When you think about how exercise works, the idea that a weighted vest will help you meet fitness goals like weight loss, muscle growth or preventing bone loss might make sense on the surface. Adding weight to the vest adds resistance to your everyday activities without changing up your patterns.

The vests may, in fact, offer benefits for healthy adults, experts say – although no one should expect transformative or instant results. Jeff Monaco, a certified strength coach who teaches medical fitness at the University of Texas at Austin, said while you may not lose a lot more calories during a weighted vest exercise, resistance from the vest may result in better sports performance over time.

"There are a lot of studies looking at (the weighted vest) from a speed perspective in different athletics, like soccer, with changing direction, agility and speed and so forth," he said.

You'll start to see those benefits by adding about 10% of your body weight to the vest, he said. If you weigh 150 pounds, for example, that would mean adding a total of 15 pounds to the vest.

But the research outside of sports isn't as clear.

One 2020 study from Wake Forest University School of Medicine in North Carolina found that adults between 60 and 85 years old who wore weighted vests at times during the day when they were most active lost about the same amount of weight as those who didn't wear them. They also lost the same amount of bone density, which happens as we age but can be slowed by building muscle.

Here's how to use weighted vests safely

Experts urge people to use weighted vests safely.

It's best to start out by adding between five to 10 percent of your body weight. Wearing a vest that's too heavy can put unnecessary strain on your joints, back and hips. That extra load can throw off your posture, lead to poor form or even result in stress fractures over time.

Some people should consult with a doctor before they throw on a vest, said Dr. Elizabeth Gardner, a team physician for athletes at Yale University. They include people who are pregnant, suffer from heart and breathing conditions or have back or neck injuries.

You'll have to use the muscles in your abdomen to use a weighted vest effectively, Gardner said, and this can be tougher for those already managing back pain.

Before starting to use a vest, Monaco said it's always helpful to get guidance from someone who has experience with them, "just to make sure that your movements are good, your form is good, that you have enough muscular upper body, muscular strength and endurance to support that during your movements."

But as long as you use it correctly, he said, a weighted vest can be "a good tool to have in your toolbox."

EMWD Youth

"She had looked into job opportunities in EMWD's website and saw the YEC program listed," Pearson revealed.

From there, the guidance, to the California Family Life Center, which conducted the interview and selected her for the program.

And according to Pearson, "once she did the interview, she was told her personality made her a great fit for Public Affairs and she fit in great."

The sessions run for 12 weeks, but for those who excel, they can be extended up to a year. Valencia made a strong impression, Pearson said. "She actually was a key contributor to many of our educational tours for area students while she was in our department. She also helped create some of the activities that are now being used in schools across our service area."

Eric Morales took a more defined path to the YEC program after earning his degree in biochemistry at UC Riverside in 2017. "I knew I wanted to work in a lab that made a difference, and the YEC program allowed me to see what the lab scientists do at a major place like EMWD."

After being accepted into the program, as did Valencia, he made a strong impression and was, according to Pearson, "retained as a temporary employee for a while until a position opened up and he went through the competitive process and earned it."

He is now a senior scientist in the lab, helping EMWD perform more than 48,000 water quality tests every year, working to ensure safe drinking water.

"Programs like this work. EMWD has taken the initiative to take a chance on interns and allow them these kinds of opportunities," Morales said.

The YEC program is only one of EMWD's growing stable of initiatives to promote water industry careers EMWD offers college internships, apprenticeships, and an award-winning high school Career Technical Education program that promotes careers in the water and wastewater sectors.

"These programs provide opportunities for young adults they would not otherwise have," EMWD Board President Stephen Corona said. "It is so rewarding when we can help them achieve their dreams."

"I knew EMWD was an organization I wanted to be at, and that this could be my long-term home," Gracie Valencia said. While participating in the YEC program from January to August, a full-time position as a customer service advisor opened up. She applied and was hired.

"The trajectory of my life is different because of this program and the commitment I made to it."

In LA Port, BOBBING BLUE FLOATS Are Turning Wave Power Into Clean Energy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On a recent sunny morning in a channel at the Port of Los Angeles, seven blue steel structures that look like small boats are lowered into the ocean one by one. Attached to an unused wharf on a site that once housed oil tanks, they gently bob up and down with the waves to generate renewable power. Nearby, a sea lion peeks from the water and pelicans and sea gulls soar overhead.

This is the nation's first onshore wave energy site, and on Tuesday, Eco Wave Power will officially unveil the pilot installation and begin operating. The pilot will generate just a small amount of electricity that can be used locally, but the larger goal is to prove the technology works well enough to expand along 8 miles of breakwater at the port — enough to power up to 60,000 homes.

Co-founder and CEO Inna Braverman said that much power could be a “game changer in terms of clean energy production” for the port and the communities around it. America's shipping ports have long struggled with dirty air that harms the health of people living nearby.

“We're starting here in LA, but we hope, aspire and believe that we will be in the United States and in other locations around the world,” she said, standing outside a blue shipping container serving as the project's power station.

An emerging industry, but plenty of power to tap

Wave energy is an emerging industry that's largely still focused on research, demonstration and pilot projects. But the potential is big.

Waves off the coasts of the United States generate enough power to meet roughly one-third of America's energy needs, according to Department of Energy estimates. Even if only a portion is harnessed, wave energy technologies could help meet the growing demand for electricity being driven in large part by the artificial intelligence race. Wave energy could also complement wind and solar to stabilize the electric grid.

Eco Wave Power installed its technology at the port's AltaSea ocean institute, a nonprofit that is working in part to advance ocean-based solutions to climate change. Half this pilot project was funded by the oil and gas company Shell.

“It's the first U.S. project on breakwater, so it opens up the possibility to do that on multiple other ports in the U.S.,” said Rémi Gruet, CEO of the trade association Ocean Energy Europe. “It's a moment where wave power is starting to turn from innovation projects to actual pilot projects that go toward industrialization and commercialization.”

Filling in gaps for wind and solar

A key advantage for wave energy is it produces electricity at different times than wind and solar, Gruet said. For example, when the wind stops blowing, wind turbines will stop generating electricity. But waves will carry on for hours and electricity can still be generated that way, he said.

But the cost needs to come down with the help of subsidies, like it has for solar and wind, Gruet added.

The first commercial wave power plant in Europe started operating in 2011 from a breakwater at Mutriku harbor in Spain. An offshore wave energy system came online off the coast of Hawaii in 2016.

California Gov. Gavin Newsom signed a bill in 2023 to promote wave energy development in the state. Eco Wave Power currently has a two-year license to operate the pilot station at the Port of Los Angeles.

As the small blue floats bob up and down, each pushes a cylinder that sends a biodegradable hydraulic fluid through a system of pipes into storage tanks. Pressure in the tanks builds up. That pressure turns a motor, which turns a generator, producing clean electricity.

“The world has waves, 70% percent of the world is covered by ocean,” Terry Tamminen, president and CEO of AltaSea and former secretary of the California Environmental Protection Agency, said at the site of the project.

“And we can harness all of that clean energy now, thanks to things like Eco Wave,” he said.

Company says plenty of sites can work for wave power

Braverman said there are dozens of sites along the U.S. coastline, identified through a study paid for by Shell, where her company could harness wave energy to add clean electricity to the grid. She said the technology is easy to adopt because unlike other renewables, this system doesn't require any land acquisition, it involves repurposing existing structures rather than altering coastlines and it can generate electricity around the clock.

The Eco Wave pilot did require licensing from the Army Corps of Engineers and from the port, but that came in a relatively quick two years, Braverman said.

Eco Wave Power is also working on projects abroad, including Taiwan, India and Portugal, and operating a grid-connected project in Israel. In New Jersey, where legislation is advancing to promote ocean energy development in the state, the company is looking for a site to install a pilot project, with help from elected officials.

Andrea Copping, an expert in marine renewable energy development, thinks Eco Wave Power's technology can be scaled up successfully. These small marine energy projects are not yet economically competitive with solar or wind, but there are places where they may be a better fit or a solution in cooperation with other energy sources, such as remote coastal communities and islands where diesel deliveries can be very expensive, she said.

“We consider every successful deployment an important milestone in creating this industry,” said Copping, a distinguished faculty fellow in the School of Marine and Environmental Affairs at the University of Washington.

An onshore wave energy site, a pilot by Eco Wave Power, at the Port of Los Angeles' AltaSea ocean institute, is visible on Thursday, Sept. 4, 2025, in Los Angeles.

Being mindful about what you eat each day can have a significant impact on so many aspects of your life. Food choices can influence your mood, energy level, cognition and memory, as well as your overall health and well-being," says Samara Sterling, Ph.D., director of research for The Peanut Institute.

Unfortunately, most "fast food" is overly processed and relies on sugar, salt and saturated fat to make it taste good in the moment, but it can end up having detrimental effects down the road and may even increase the risk for certain cancers.

Food As Medicine

Peanuts and peanut butter, on the other hand, are convenient and healthy superfood choices that satisfy immediate hunger while delivering lifelong benefits.

According to numerous research studies, regular consumption of peanuts has been shown to: reduce Alzheimer's disease risk by 70%; reduce diabetes risk by 53% and cardiovascular disease risk by 13%; and aid memory, cognitive function and concentration. Daily consumption can even help reduce anxiety and depression.

"Peanuts deliver such a plethora of benefits. A single serving of peanuts, which is about a handful, is packed with 19 vitamins and minerals and contains seven grams of plant-based protein," adds Sterling.

The Science

The benefits of plant-based protein are becoming more and more apparent. Research that compared nuts and legumes to animal protein showed higher intake from meat was associated with increased mortality risk. Another study found that replacing animal-based protein with plant-based protein can substantially lower the likelihood of developing diabetes. Finally, an interesting study of older adults found that faster walking speed was associated with a higher intake of plant protein, while slower walking speed was associated with greater animal protein intake.

Sun-dried TOMATOES

By CONNOR FORBES

Last week I shared a recipe for sun-dried tomato encrusted salmon. What I didn't mention is that the sun-dried tomatoes were homegrown and home-made. They are extremely easy to make and take very little effort. The real investment is time.

Ingredients

- 5 lbs roma tomato
- 2+ cups of olive oil
- 1 tbsp salt

To Make

Slice your tomatoes into 1/6ths lengthwise. Salt lightly. Dehydrate your tomatoes. If you have a dehydrator this is a bit easier but can also be done in an oven. You can do them outside in the sun as well though that is a bit harder to manage and I wouldn't suggest it unless you know what you are doing. In a dehydrator, set temperature to 135 and timer for 10 hours. In an oven, set to the lowest temperature and check every few hours. The texture you are looking for is mostly dry with some elasticity left. Fill a mason jar with the tomatoes. Add the rest of the salt. Add olive oil until the tomatoes are fully covered. And you are ready to start enjoying.

These will get better with time. Ensure tomatoes stay submerged or you risk mold starting to form.

"The Conjuring: Last Rites"

By BOB GARVER

A few days before I saw "The Conjuring: Last Rites," a friend of mine asked me about my plans for the weekend. I told her that I planned to see the film, and I was excited. When she asked me why I was excited to see yet another entry in the generally-middling "Conjuring" series, I blurted out, "They make such a cute couple!" "They" of course being Patrick Wilson and Vera Farmiga as real-life paranormal investigators Ed and Lorraine Warren, respectively. These fictionalized tales of their cases sell themselves on demon- and possession-related horror, not charming family dynamics. Yet whether by design, by accident, or by default, the Warrens as characters are what this series does best.

Take the opening scene, set in 1964. Ed and a pregnant Lorraine investigate the usual demonic element in the basement of an antiques shop. Lorraine insists on snooping around alone, with minimal light, and of course jump scares abound. The demonic presence causes Lorraine to go into labor early, and Ed rushes her to the hospital to give birth in a room without electricity. It looks like the baby doesn't survive, and the darkened room is full of tears. I'm not talking about the delivery room with the parents and doctors – I'm talking about the theater full of moviegoers. This scene, its characters, and its actors have been so engaging that the audience has become way more invested than they should in a movie that a few minutes earlier was easily dismissible as schlocky horror. And then the baby survives, and at my screening it made for one of the most deafening crowd reactions I've ever heard. Yes, I rolled my eyes a little, since daughter Judy Warren has been a character in other, later-set "Conjuring" movies, so I could guess how the scene was going to play out, but also yes, the cheering was infectious and it was an undeniable mark of a sequence well-done.

The rest of the film takes place in 1986, after the movie "Ghostbusters" has come out, and the Warrens are seen as jokes living in semi-retirement. Judy (Mia Tomlinson) is ready to take her next step in life, introducing her parents to her boyfriend Tony (Ben Hardy). Ed and Lorraine, like most parents, are conflicted about letting their baby go, but also know that she can't be their baby forever. Tony, for his part, is sweet and dedicated, if occasionally awkward. I seriously thought about recommending this movie to my horror-averse mother just for the family scenes. But I couldn't, because darker subject matter has to butt its way in. Unlike most parents, Ed and Lorraine also have to worry about lingering traces of demon possession in their daughter, which they aren't eager to foist upon the unsuspecting Tony.

To add to the drama at home, the Warrens are desperately needed in small-town Pennsylvania. A family recently came into possession of the world's creepiest mirror – the same artifact that caused problems for the Warrens in the opening scene – and are now being unsurprisingly haunted. Cue every cheap spiritual horror trope like unexplained bumping sounds and things moving when they shouldn't, as well as every cliché surrounding old heroes taking on one last mission. Judy and Tony are willing to help for the first time ever, but Tony doesn't know the first thing about demons and Judy may be compromised as an instrument of the mirror-demon.

"The Conjuring: Last Rites" is a tale of two conflicting tones. The loving, charming, occasionally-eccentric Warren family make for delightful "straight" scenes, but they aren't going to sell tickets without some kind of supernatural payoff. The horror scenes, while necessary for the movie's appeal, are often drab and even more often the result of stupidity (I know demon possession is a hard pill for non-believers to swallow, but still...). I'm swayed enough by the Warren family to give the movie a mild recommendation, but only because the main characters all make for cute couples.

Grade: B-

"The Conjuring: Last Rites" is rated R for bloody/violent content and terror. Its running time is 135 minutes.

'The Conjuring: Last Rites' Scores $83 Million Opening Weekend

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - "The Conjuring: Last Rites" opened with $83 million this weekend to lead all films, in the third-biggest opening for a horror film in North American history, according to industry estimates Sunday.

The ninth installment in a franchise that also includes the "Annabelle" and "The Nun" films, New Line's release stars series regulars Patrick Wilson and Vera Farmiga and was directed by Michael Chaves.

A re-release of a 2021 filmed version of the smash-hit musical "Hamilton" was in second place with $10 million, Comscore reported.

"Weapons" was third with $5.3 million Friday through Sunday in its fifth weekend in theaters.

"Freakier Friday" was fourth with $3.8 million in its fifth weekend, followed by "Caught Stealing" with $3.2 million in its second week.

Rounding out the top 10 domestic releases were "The Roses" ($2.8 million), "Fantastic Four: First Steps" ($2.75 million), "The Bad Guys 2" ($2.45 million), "Light of the World" ($2.4 million) and "Superman" ($1 million).

This weekend's overall three-day box office haul was estimated at $124 million. The year-to-date total is $6.138 billion -- up 3.9% from the figure at this time last year, according to Comscore.

Brighten Winter With Indoor Blooms by Forcing Spring Bulbs to Flower Early

By JESSICA DAMIANO
Associated Press

If the wait for bulbs to bloom in spring seems excruciatingly long, you can pot some up now and enjoy a floriferous winter indoors.

Gardeners are constantly gaming the system, using fertilizers to force plants to direct energy toward more blooms, more fruit or faster growth; starting seeds indoors to ensure earlier tomatoes; and using row covers or cold frames to extend the season. So why not bend nature's schedule to gift ourselves some joy during the bleakness of January?

That is, after all, what professional growers do to fill all those pastel-foil-wrapped pots of tulips and daffodils sold as Easter plants.

All you need are clay pots, potting mix, ordinary spring bulbs and some patience.

How to do it

Fill pots with the mix, then set grape or standard hyacinth, tulip, daffodil or crocus bulbs — or a combination -- just beneath the surface. (Tulip bulbs should be angled with their flat sides facing outward so that their eventual leaves unfurl over the container's edge.)

Store the pots at about 55 degrees Fahrenheit for four to six weeks to ensure good root establishment, and water regularly to keep the soil slightly moist. An unheated basement or attached garage could serve well, depending on your location.

Then prepare for the deception.

For the bulbs to bloom, you'll have to convince them that they've lived through winter. You can achieve this by placing the pots in the refrigerator (away from fruit, which releases ethylene gas that inhibits sprouting) for 12 weeks.

If you find yourself growing impatient, you can remove them from the fridge after six weeks, but they will take longer to bloom.

And if you're feeling creative, take one pot out at the six-week mark, then remove another every couple of weeks. You'll be rewarded with a succession of blooms that will last through winter.

After the chilling period, move the pots into the warmth and light of your living space, where they'll grow and bloom in as little as two weeks. If you live in a frost-free region, you can even plant the chilled bulbs outdoors.

Aside from water, the plants won't require anything from you, as bulbs contain all the stored energy and nutrients they need to survive and thrive.

When the danger of frost has passed, you can move your plants into the garden. Tulips may not reappear next year — that's a gamble with nothing to lose -- but you can expect daffodils, crocus and hyacinths to bloom again alongside their bedmates.

Heat and Sugar

than those who work inside, and the same went for families where the head of the household was less educated. White people have the highest added sugar effect, while Asian Americans showed no significant change in added sugar in the heat.

Lustig said sugary drinks are marketed and priced in a way to attract the poor, and in many disadvantaged communities the water tastes funny because of chemicals in them. Poor people are also less likely to have air conditioning and are more likely to work outside and need more hydration, Lustig and He said.

"It should concern us that the rate of the impact is larger in households where people make less money or are less educated," said Dr. Courtney Howard, vice chair of the Global Climate and Health Alliance. "These groups tend to have lower

Immigration

"Here, those circumstances include: that there is an extremely high number and percentage of illegal immigrants in the Los Angeles area; that those individuals tend to gather in certain locations to seek daily work; that those individuals often work in certain kinds of jobs, such as day labor, landscaping, agriculture, and construction, that do not require paperwork and are therefore especially attractive to illegal immigrants; and that many of those illegally in the Los Angeles area come from Mexico or Central America and do not speak much English," he wrote.

"To be clear," he continued, "ethnicity alone cannot furnish reasonable suspicion; under this Court's case law regarding immigration stops, however, it can be a 'relevant factor' when considered with other salient factors."

The three justices appointed by Democratic presidents dissented from the majority, stressing that they objected to the court lifting limitations on immigration sweeps without oral argument and through the emergency docket, which the Trump administration used extensively this year.

The Supreme Court has sided with Trump in at least 17 cases in a row now.

"That decision is yet another grave misuse of our emergency docket," Justice Sonia Sotomayor wrote in the dissent. "We should not have to live in a country where the Government can seize anyone who looks Latino, speaks Spanish, and appears to work a low wage job."

Los Angeles and dozens of other Southern California municipalities wrote in an amicus brief supporting the restraining order that, because of the population makeup that "half the population" of the region meets the federal government's criteria for being stopped and questioned about their immigration status.

Gov. Gavin Newsom in a written statement condemned the decision and said the state would "continue fighting these abhorrent attacks on Californians."

"Trump's hand-picked Supreme Court majority just became the Grand Marshal for a parade of racial terror in Los Angeles. This isn't about enforcing immigration laws — it's about targeting Latinos and anyone who doesn't look or sound like Stephen Miller's idea of an American, including U.S. citizens and children, to deliberately harm California's families and small businesses," Newsom said, referring to Trump's deputy chief of staff.

The ruling means the Border Patrol can resume the aggressive tactics a district federal judge said violated people's Fourth Amendment constitutional rights against unreasonable warming, Chan said.

But University of Washington health and climate scientist Kristie Ebi, who wasn't part of the research, said as temperatures increase with human-caused climate change "there will be other issues of more importance than a small increase in sugary beverages."

baseline health status, so this is an area where climate-related changes appear to magnify existing health inequalities."

search and seizure. It means officers can rely on little more than a person being in the parking lot of a Home Depot and speaking Spanish to question someone about their immigration status.

In a brief asking justices to remove restrictions on immigration stops, Trump’s Department of Homeland Security wrote that the lower-court injunction interfered with agents’ efforts to remove unauthorized immigrants.

“The injunction raises the specter of contempt for every stop in the district, threatening agents with sanctions if the court disbelieves that they relied on additional factors in making any particular stop. It chills the exercise of Executive authority and usurps the President’s Article II powers to enforce our immigration laws,” attorneys for the Trump administration wrote. Why courts paused ‘roving patrols’ The district court found, based on a “mountain of evidence,” that the government engaged in a pattern of conducting stops without reasonable suspicion—relying solely on traits like race or ethnicity, speaking Spanish or accented English, the location a person is in, and the type of work a person does.

The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals had upheld the lower court’s ruling, chiding the Trump administration for misrepresenting the restraining order in their appeal.

“If, as the Defendants suggest, they are not conducting stops that lack reasonable suspicion, they can hardly claim to be irreparably harmed by an injunction aimed at preventing ... stops not supported by reasonable suspicion,” the three-judge panel from the 9th Circuit wrote. A coalition of civil rights, immigrant rights, and local government agencies, including the American Civil Liberties Union and the United Farm Workers, sought the order, arguing the LA-area raids have violated people’s rights by allowing federal immigration agents to stop people who simply appear to be Latino, including U.S. citizens. “The federal government is seeking to detain individuals solely because they are not white, speak Spanish or speak accented English. That idea is anathema to everything the United States stands for, and it should be rejected,” a group of cities in Los Angeles County wrote in amicus brief supporting restrictions on immigration agents. They wrote that this summer’s raids had “sown terror” in their communities.

LA immigration sweeps continued Despite the previous order barring profiling, agents have continued an aggressive enforcement blitz in the nation’s second-largest city. About 40 agents hit a Westlake Home Depot on Aug. 28, using tear gas and pepper pellets to disperse a crowd before detaining eight people, a Border Patrol official confirmed Friday. That’s the same location where agents previously made a hype video set to rap music of themselves hiding in a Penske rental truck before bursting out to detain day laborers in a raid dubbed Operation Trojan Horse. Under Operation-At-Large Chief Gregory Bovino, the Border Patrol has detained Latino daylaborers, swarming Home Depots and carwashes across the nation’s second largest city. Bovino has vowed to bring similar tactics to cities across the country. Kevin R. Johnson, the director of Aoki Center on Critical Race and Nation Studies at UC Davis School of Law said the federal government’s racial profiling has consequences beyond immigration enforcement. He wrote to CalMatters and also in a paper for the SMU Law Review that “race-based immigration enforcement undermines Latina/o sense of belonging in the national community for generations.” “Importantly, the Trump administration’s campaign against people of color goes well beyond immigration law and immigrants. As exemplified by the administration’s war on diversity, equity, and inclusion, the President has sought to eliminate programs that seek to promote the full integration of racial and other minorities into U.S. society,” Johnson wrote.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property.

You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 877-237-7878, or visit www.peakforeclosure.com using file number assigned to this case: CARCS-25020865 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. NOTICE TO PERSPECTIVE OWNER/OCCUPANT: Any perspective owner/occupant as defined in Section 2924m of the California Civil Code who is the last and highest bidder at the trustee's sale shall provide the required affidavit or declaration of eligibility to the auctioneer at the trustee's sale or shall have it delivered to PEAK FORECLOSURE SERVICES, INC. by 5:00 PM on the next business day following the trustee's sale at the address set forth above. The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the property address or other common designation, if any, shown herein. If no street address or other common designation is shown, directions to the location of the property may be obtained by sending a written request to the beneficiary within 10 days of the date of the first publication of this Notice of Sale. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on 9/29/2025 at 8:30am in Department 8 located at 4050 Main St, Riverside, CA 92501.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Pursuant to Public Contract Code Section 22300, the successful bidder may substitute certain securities for funds withheld by City to ensure his performance under the Contract.

The Work is subject to the payment of not less than prevailing wages pursuant to Chapter 1 (beginning at Section 1720 et seq.) of Part 7 of Division 2 of the California Labor Code, as well as Title 8, Section 16000 et seq. of the California Code of Regulations ("Prevailing Wage Laws"). The Director of the Department of Industrial Relations ("DIR") has determined the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which this work is to be performed for each craft or type of worker needed to execute the Contract which will be awarded to the successful bidder, copies of which are on file and will be made available to any interested party upon request at Owners office or online at http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlsr. A copy of these rates shall be posted by the successful bidder at the job site.

Pursuant to SB 854, which amended the Prevailing Wage Laws, this Contract is subject to compliance monitoring and enforcement by the DIR. Beginning March 1, 2015, with very limited exceptions no contractor or subcontractor may be listed on a bid proposal for this Contract unless registered with the DIR pursuant to Labor Code section 1725.5. Beginning April 1, 2015, no contractor or subcontractor may be awarded this Contract unless registered with the DIR pursuant to Labor Code section 1725.5. The DIR registration number for each contractor and subcontractor must be identified on the bid proposal - failure to identify this number could result in the bid being rejected as nonresponsive. It is each bidder's responsibility to ensure that they have fully complied with SB 854. The City will report all necessary contracts to the DIR as required by the Prevailing Wage Laws.

The successful bidder and all subcontractor(s) under him, shall comply with all applicable Prevailing Wage Laws, which include, but are not limited to the payment of not less than the required prevailing rates to all workers employed by them in the execution of the Contract, the employment of apprentices, the hours of labor, the payment of overtime, and the debarmment of contractors and subcontractors. The successful bidder and all subcontractor(s) under him shall also be responsible for any and all violations and fines imposed on them pursuant to the Prevailing Wage Laws.

Pursuant to Public Contract Code Section 3400(b), if the City has made any findings designating certain materials, products, things, or services by specific brand or trade name, such findings and the materials, products, things, or services and their specific brand or trade names will be set forth in the Special Conditions. In addition, the applicable approved Notice Designating Sole Source Equipment and Product Specifications is available upon request from the City's contact person specified herein. Please note that if PCC 3400(c) findings have been made and are applicable to this Project, there may be only one subcontractor qualified or authorized to perform a portion of the Work, so each bidder must take note and ensure that you list the proper subcontractor on the Designation of Subcontractors form.

The successful bidder must fully comply with all applicable laws, rules and regulations in furnishing or using equipment and/or providing services, including, but not limited to, emissions limits and permitting requirements imposed by the South Coast Air Quality Management District (SCAQMD) and/or California Air Resources Board (CARB). Although the SCAQMD and CARB limits and requirements are more broad, the successful bidder shall specifically be aware of their application to "portable equipment", which definition is considered by SCAQMD and CARB to include any item of equipment with a fuelpowered engine. The successful bidder will be required to indemnify City against any fines or penalties imposed by SCAQMD, CARB, or any other governmental or regulatory agency for violations of applicable laws, rules and/or regulations by the successful bidder, its subcontractors, or others for whom the successful bidder is responsible under its indemnity obligations.

CARB implemented amendments to the InUse OffRoad DieselFueled Fleets Regulations ("Regulation") which are effective on January 1, 2024 and apply broadly to all selfpropelled off road diesel vehicles 25 horsepower or greater and other forms of equipment used in California. A copy of the Regulation is available at: https://ww2.arb.ca.gov/sites/default/files/barcu/regact/2022/offroaddiesel/appa-1.pdf. Bidders are required to comply with all CARB and Regulation requirements, including, without limitation, all applicable sections of the Regulation, as codified in Title 13 of the California Code of Regulations section 2449 et seq. throughout the duration of the Project. Bidders must provide, with their Bid, copies of Bidder's and all listed subcontractors' most recent, valid Certificate of Reported Compliance ("CRC") issued by CARB. Failure to provide valid CRCs as required herein may render the Bid nonresponsive.

Award of Contract: The City shall award the Contract for the Project to the lowest responsive, responsible bidder as determined from the base bid alone by the City. The City reserves the right to reject any or all bids or to waive any irregularities or informalities in any bids or in the bidding process.
