Anniversary Observance Set Sunday for 'Day of Infamy'

NORCO (CNS) - The 84th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor will be commemorated Sunday during a ceremony in Norco, featuring patriotic music and recollections from that "Day of Infamy," which prompted the United States to go from neutral to Allied leader in World War II.

The Lake Norconian Club Foundation is hosting the commemoration, which is free and open to the public, getting underway shortly after 10 a.m. at Veterans Memorial Plaza on the grounds of the George Ingalls Equestrian Event Center.

The event is intended to honor all service branches, not only the U.S. Navy, which will have representatives from the nearby Corona Naval Surface Warfare Center, part of U.S. Naval Sea Systems Command, on hand.

Rather than the customary speakers from the Corona facility, Navy Capt. Kyle Caldwell, commander of Naval Weapons Station-Seal Beach, will deliver the keynote address. Members of the Lake Norconian Club Foundation are additionally slated to make remarks.

Why Doing Good Also Makes Us Feel Good, During the Holidays and Beyond

By CHRISTINA LARSON AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The holiday season is a time for giving thanks, giving gifts — and for many, a time for giving back.

Food banks, services that deliver meals to seniors and other U.S. charities typically see a surge in volunteering between Thanksgiving and the end of the year. But there are good reasons to volunteer at any time of the year.

Alfred Del Grosso volunteers weekly to work the lunch shift at Shepherd's Table, a food bank in Silver Spring, Maryland. "I feel more connected to the broader community," he said.

Most Thursdays, the retired chemist from Kensington, Maryland, also lends an unpaid hand to help clear fallen trees and brush from local trails with the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club. "It's mostly volunteers who help maintain the trails," he said.

Researchers who study human evolution and social psychology say that giving back is deeply rooted in human nature. Volunteers say they feel closer ties to the communities they serve.

"When we feel grateful for all we have, that motivates us to do good things for other people who have helped us, and also to do good things for new people," said Sarah Schnitker, a psychologist at Baylor University.

"There's a nice upwards reciprocal spiral between gratitude and generosity," often enhanced at holiday times, she said.

For many in the U.S., the season most associated with giving, receiving and volunteering runs from Thanksgiving through Hanukkah and Christmas to New Year's.

But around the world, a giving season or festival is present in many cultures, said Amrisha Vaish, a developmental psychologist at the University of Virginia.

"Nearly all cultures have events or public festivals that allow people to express gratitude," she said. "In Hinduism, Divali is a time of lights and festiveness and good eating, but also a time in which people give gifts to really express what people have meant to them."

For Muslims, Ramadan, which ends with the festival of Eid al-Fitr, is a time for reflection, gratitude and acts of charity. Many Buddhist traditions also emphasize gratitude.

The common purpose of such seasons, which also include non-religious acts of service, is to reinforce our natural cooperative tendencies, Vaish said.

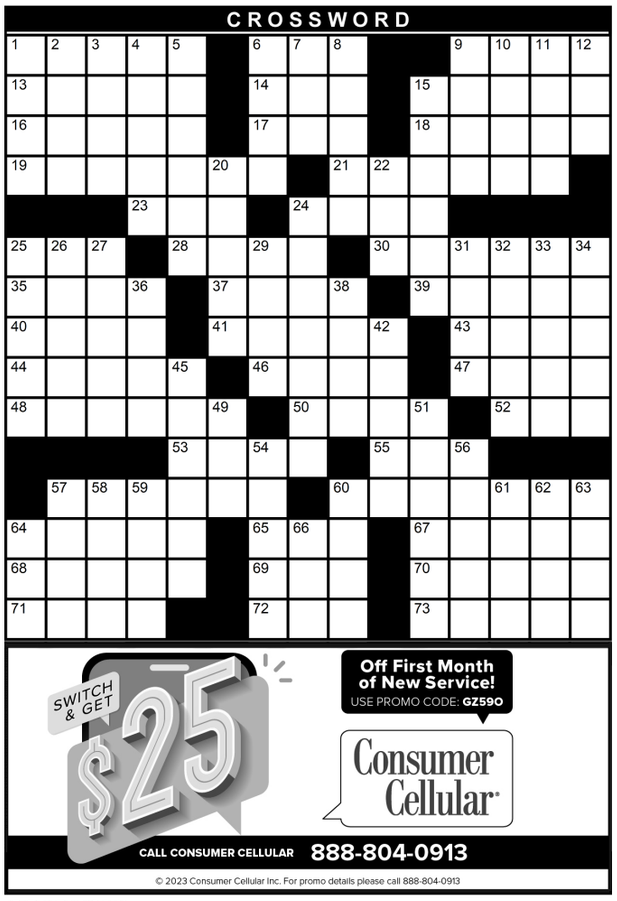

"In human evolutionary history over hundreds of thousands of years, we've had to become cooperative in order to work together and survive as a species," she said.

"We don't have sharp claws, high speed, many other natural abilities. But what we do have is that we're super cooperators; we can do more in groups than alone."

Panda Express to Pay over $1 Million to End Litigation Locally, Elsewhere

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - A lawsuit spearheaded by the Riverside County District Attorney's Office against Panda Express Restaurant Group Inc. over the alleged mishandling of sensitive substances was settled for $1.056 million, which the corporation will pay to Riverside and other counties, along with implementation of a program to correct past deficiencies, it was announced Tuesday.

The settlement agreement, which includes civil penalties and an injunction, was reached after roughly three months of litigation, all of which took place in Riverside. The stipulated judgment was agreed to by the defendant and plaintiffs on Nov. 20. Along with Riverside County, district attorney's offices from 37 other counties were involved.

The principal investigators behind the civil action originated from Riverside, Marin, San Joaquin and Solano counties.

The suit stemmed from "the unlawful handling of hazardous materials, specifically carbon dioxide ... at (Panda Express') 500-plus California restaurant locations, including over 30 in Riverside County," according to the D.A.'s office.

"Panda Express restaurants use carbon dioxide for their carbonated fountain beverage systems," the agency stated. "Carbon dioxide is typically stored in tanks on-site and is widely used by restaurants. Carbon dioxide is safe if handled properly."

Prosecutors alleged that Panda Express employees had not received appropriate training in storage and management of the naturally occurring gas.

The defendant did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

Under the settlement agreement, the corporation will pay $881,925 in penalties, $100,000 to cover supplemental projects and $75,000 in general reimbursement for the plaintiffs' legal expenses. Riverside County's share of the aggregate payout will be $273,980.

Panda Express further agreed to abide by the terms of a Certified Unified Program Agency, provided under California Health & Safety Code section 25404. That's part of an injunction mandating implementation of revised training protocols for employees and other compliance measures to ensure proper management of hazardous substances at all its restaurants.

National, California Economy to Soften Early 2026, UCLA Economists Report

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - As California inches closer to a new year, the economy is expected to soften through the first quarter of 2026 before rebounding in later months as a result of a bifurcated economy, according to a UCLA economic forecast released Wednesday.

The December 2025 UCLA Anderson Forecast, a 98-page report examining economic trends, described two situations working in opposition. Some sectors of the economy will drive growth as a result of heavy investment in artificial intelligence and rising income among high-wealth households while other areas will weaken as a result of tariff-induced inflation, policy-driven uncertainty and a gradually weakening labor market.

On Wednesday, the UCLA Anderson School of Management is expected to conduct its Winter 2025 Economic Outlook conference and discuss findings of their report. Economists will give addresses on the topic "Financial Stability Amid AI & Crypto Exuberance," presented in collaboration with the UCLA Fink Center for Finance.

Highlights of the report show, at present, California's economy continues to outpace the nation's in high-productivity sectors such as AI, aerospace and advanced manufacturing. California received significant venture funding in early 2025 with seven of the 10 largest investment deals in the Americas occurring in-state.

However, due to federal spending reductions, tariffs, elevated costs and the early effects of immigration policies, sectors such as construction, nondurable goods manufacturing, retail, leisure and hospitality will remain under pressure.

California's unemployment rate has remained above 5.0% for more than 19 consecutive months, and economists anticipate it will continue until 2027.

"The Forecast's analysis of historical immigration restrictions suggests that deportations tend to raise unemployment among U.S.-born and documented workers through reduced consumption and disruptions in complementary occupations," according to the report. "Early county-level data in California show this pattern beginning to emerge, especially in counties with higher shares of foreign-born workers employed in construction, agriculture and hospitality."

Despite an urgent need for new construction following December 2024 and January 2025 wildfires, housing will be impacted due to workforce shortages tied to deportations, increased costs in materials and high financing.

A positive note of the report found air cargo volume has begun to recover to pre-pandemic levels in both Northern and Southern California. The data indicates a steady demand in higher-income households and businesses linked to the state's technology sector.

The forecasts anticipates a gradual improvement beginning in late 2026 for California's unemployment rates, employment growth, non-farm payroll jobs, real personal income growth and residential permits.

Meanwhile, the national forecast highlights a slowing but resilient economy -- also being supported by investment in AI infrastructure. The report notes that AI-related investment surpassed $405

'Rage Bait' Named Oxford University Press Word of Year as Outrage Fuels Social Media Traffic in 2025

LONDON (AP) — Oxford University Press has named "rage bait" as its word of the year, capturing the internet zeitgeist of 2025.

The phrase refers to online content that is "deliberately designed to elicit anger or outrage by being frustrating, provocative or offensive," with the aim of driving traffic to a particular social media account, Oxford said in a statement.

"The person producing it will bask in the millions, quite often, of comments and shares and even likes sometimes," lexicographer Susie Dent told the BBC. This is a result of the algorithms used by social media companies, "because although we love fluffy cats, we'll appreciate that we tend to engage more with negative content and content that really provokes us."

Rage bait topped two other contenders — "aura farming" and "biohack" — after public comment on a shortlist compiled by lexicographers at Oxford University Press.

"Aura farming" means to cultivate a public image by presenting oneself in "a way intended subtly to convey an air of confidence, coolness or mystique." "Biohack" is defined as "an attempt to improve or optimize one's physical or mental performance, health or longevity."

The word of the year is selected by lexicographers at Oxford University Press who analyze new and emerging words, as well as changes in the way language is being used, to identify words of "cultural significance."

Oxford University Press, publisher of the Oxford English Dictionary, has selected a word of the year annually since 2004.

Past winners include "podcast" in 2005, "emoji" in 2015, and in 2022 "goblin mode," which described people who resisted returning to normal life after the COVID-19 pandemic.

Here's a Strategy to Get Through Stressful Holiday Gatherings. Act Like a Dull Rock

By JAMIE DUCHARME
Associated Press

The holidays are a time of merriment, festivity — and, for many, tense family gatherings.

People think, "'How do I deal with relatives who, at times, are intrusive or trigger me or say things that are abusive?" said Mark Rapaport, president-elect of the American Psychiatric Association.

When trying to defuse stressful family dynamics, some people use a strategy called "gray rocking."

The point is to "act boring, like a gray rock," said Samantha Whiten, a Maryland-based clinical psychologist. "You do not give difficult people any potential ammunition."

Is gray rocking actually a smart way to survive the holiday season? Here's what experts said.

When it can be helpful

The gray rock method is perhaps best known as a tool for managing interactions with narcissistic, manipulative or otherwise toxic individuals. But it doesn't have to be so extreme. It can be deployed "in any situation where you are trying to minimize conflict with somebody who you have to interact with," Whiten said.

When gray rocking, you're purposely making yourself uninteresting by politely offering short, non-committal responses rather than getting sucked into a high-drama exchange. The idea is to deprive the other person of the attention or reaction they want, prompting them to move on.

Imagine you're invited to a holiday party with your whole family — including Uncle Bob, who gets under your skin. You don't want to skip the party outright; you just want to de-escalate conversations with Bob so you can enjoy your evening. That's where gray rocking might come in.

Maybe Bob corners you to talk politics. In previous years, you might have taken the bait and ended up in a shouting match. But when gray rocking, you'd sidestep conflict with a bland response, like, "Interesting opinion. How's work?"

Rapaport said he's not aware of published research on the technique's efficacy, but said its objectives make sense.

"One of the keys in circumstances like this is not to emotionally engage," he said.

And when gray rocking hurts

Gray rocking can be helpful in a pinch. But particularly when practiced regularly, it can come at a cost to your emotional health and relationships, warned Darlene Lancer, a California-based marriage and family therapist.

"After a while, people get numb," Lancer said. "They start shutting down to their own feelings of hurt or anger."

The strategy can create distance between you and your loved ones.

"I don't recommend it, really, in a relationship that you want to last and grow," Lancer said. If you care about the long-term health of a relationship, "the ideal is always to be more authentic" and talk through your issues, she said. (And of course, if a relationship is truly harmful or dangerous, it may be best to leave it or limit contact.)

Even in the short-term, stonewalling someone may anger or upset them, particularly if they didn't realize their comments bothered you in the first place, Rapaport added. Great Aunt Sally may think she's just making friendly conversation when she asks, yet again, when you're going to have kids, even if it feels like an attack to you.

Polite directness may get you further in these situations, Rapaport said.

"Sometimes you acknowledge it and say, 'I hear what you want to talk about, but it's not something I want to discuss at this time,'" he suggested.

Go in with a game plan

To set yourself up for success at gray rocking, plan ahead. "People really do well with having a specific goal," Whiten said, so think about exactly how you'd like to handle difficult situations likely to arise at your gatherings. That way, when the moment comes, you can fall back on your plan instead of responding emotionally.

Consider which interactions tend to be hardest for you, and think of a few placid responses to keep in your back pocket. This can be as simple as responding to your mother's unsolicited advice with a neutral comment like, "Thanks, I'll think about it," instead of snapping, Lancer said.

You might also recruit similarly minded loved ones to help if things start to get heated, Rapaport suggested.

"Contact folks ahead of time and say, 'Hey, if you see this happening with me, pull me away,'" he said.

Make sure to keep drug and alcohol consumption in check, since substances make it much harder to keep a level head.

Finally, try to focus on the good — the people who you do want to see at the party — and channel a little empathy toward the difficult figures in your life, Rapaport said.

"These actions that trigger huge emotional responses in you may be a little less likely to do so because you're thinking about their vulnerability, their weaknesses, their inability to know how to engage with others," he said.

A little generosity of spirit can go a long way. It is the holidays, after all.

Caldwell will recount how the events of Dec. 7, 1941, impacted the Navy and the lessons learned from the sneak attack.

Attendees will pay homage to those who made the ultimate sacrifice that day.

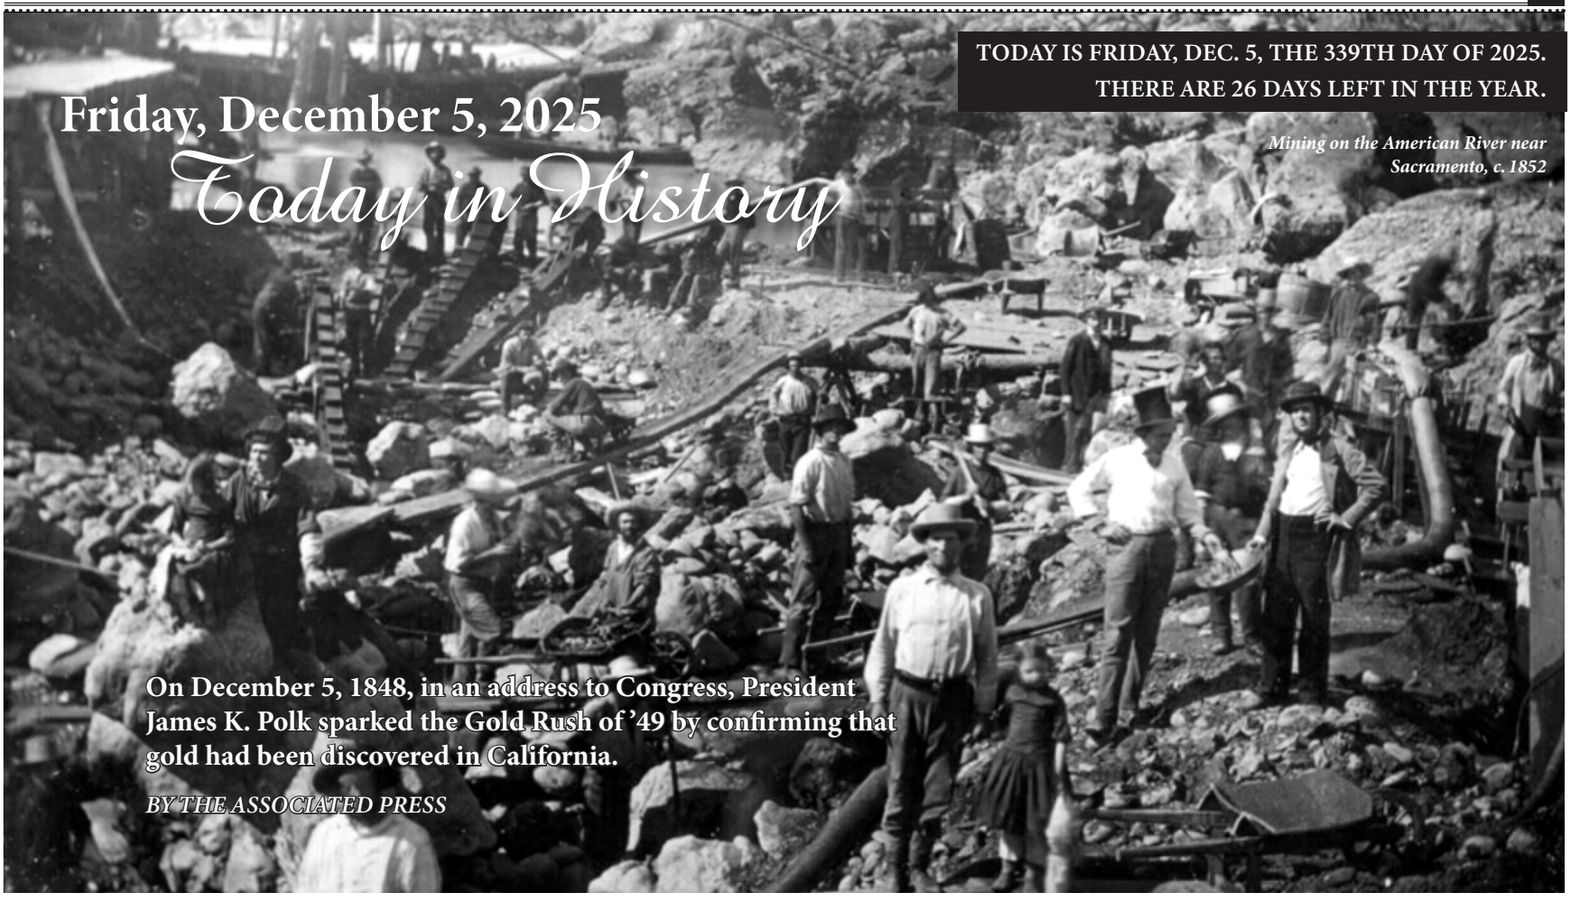

More than 2,400 U.S. soldiers, sailors and Marines died defending the Hawaiian naval base from Imperial Japanese attackers in a two-hour air assault. The following day, Dec. 8, 1941, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt declared war on Japan, which led to the Axis powers uniformly declaring war on the United States, marking the nation's official entry into World War II.

Just before 8 a.m. on Sunday, Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese torpedo bombers, dive bombers and fighters -- altogether numbering more than 350 aircraft -- arrived in two waves, permanently sinking two battleships, the USS Arizona and Utah at Pearl.

The Arizona's losses totaled 1,177 -- the highest of any ship in the harbor. Most of the military vessels that went down in the surprise attack were resurrected and deployed to fight again.

Bellows, Hickam and Wheeler airfields were also bombed, as were the installations at Ewa, Ford Island and Kaneohe Bay, sustaining major damage.

Imperial Japan carried out the attack in an attempt to cripple the U.S. Pacific Fleet as it sought domination over much of Asia by pushing the Americans, British, Dutch and French off of their long-held colonies.

Of course, humans aren't always cooperative and generous — sometimes we're also selfish and stubborn.

The tension between selfishness and altruism was recognized even by Darwin, said Michael Tomasello, a psychologist at Duke University. "That's why life is so complicated. We have all these motives mapped together."

But reflecting with gratitude on what we have, and seeing others do good, can encourage our most generous tendencies, experts say.

On an individual level, "giving, volunteering and generosity have the ability to increase our sense of meaning and purpose in life," said Jenae Nelson, a developmental psychologist at Brigham Young University

"There's a quick dopamine hit sometimes called the 'helpers high.' But there's also that deeper reward of helping us to establish purpose and meaning," she said. "By helping other people and believing that small acts can change the world, you can bring coherence to your own life."

After Mia Thelen retired as a nurse in Owosso, Michigan, she began volunteering for the American Red Cross, starting out by minding the office phones during blood drives before gradually taking on more organizational and administrative responsibilities.

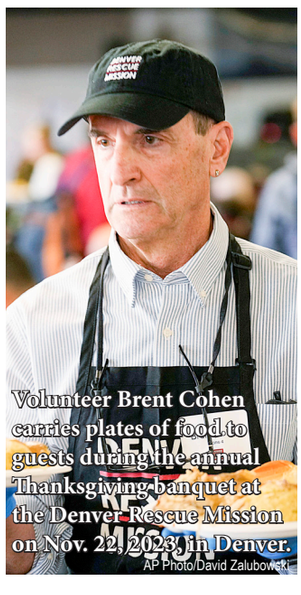

"It's a good way to spend your time, making the lives of others a little easier," Thelen said. "I wanted to do something that helps the community."

"And I'm learning a lot: learning computer skills, learning communication skills. I have great co-volunteers." She enjoys feeling more connected with her neighbors.

Another common holiday tradition — sending greeting cards to family and old friends — also provides a chance to enhance or renew social ties, which people are often surprisingly reluctant to do, said Lara Aknin, a social psychologist at Simon Fraser University.

Her research has shown that "people are actually hesitant to reach out to old friends, they worry about being a burden or an inconvenience," she said. But on the flip side, "people who've just heard from old friends report it as a really positive experience."

So go ahead and write those cards or make those phone

New FDA-Approved Glasses Can Slow Nearsightedness in Kids

By MATTHEW PERRONE
AP Health Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For many children, the experience of getting their first pair of glasses is an inevitable milestone, the first in a lifetime of visits to the eye doctor.

But what if those lenses could actually help preserve the child's vision and reduce the chances for more serious eye problems in adulthood?

That's the promise of a new type of lens approved by the Food and Drug Administration in September. While the technology has previously been available in Europe, Asia and other parts of the world, it's now rolling out in the U.S.

Here's what to know about the new approach.

What is myopia and why is it increasing?

Myopia, commonly called nearsightedness, is when people can clearly see objects at close range but struggle with distant objects, which often appear blurry or indistinct.

Studies conducted around the world have shown rising rates of myopia, which researchers have associated with increased time indoors looking at screens, books and other objects held close to the eyes.

In the U.S., 30% to 40% of children will have myopia by the time they finish high school, according to Dr. Michael Repka, a professor and pediatric ophthalmologist at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine.

Until now, doctors had few options for treating the condition.

"It was typically and simply: 'Your child needs to wear glasses and they'll live with it,'" Repka said. "'It will be lifelong and it will likely get worse over the next few years.'"

How do the new lenses work?

The specialized glasses, sold under the brand Essilor Stellest, are approved by the FDA to slow nearsightedness in 6- to 12-year-olds.

The FDA said it cleared the lenses based on company data showing children experienced a 70% reduction in the progression of their myopia after two years.

Over time, myopia causes the eye to grow longer, worsening vision and increasing the risk of tears to the retina — the light-sensitive tissue at the back of the eye that is essential for vision.

The new lenses use 11 concentric rings filled with tiny raised dots to refocus light onto the retina in a way that is believed to slow elongation of the eye.

"Whether this hypothesis is ultimately proven to be true, of course, matters only in part," Repka said, noting that the lenses appear to work regardless of how the underlying science works.

In the company study, children wearing the lens showed a 50% reduction in eye lengthening when measured after two years. Currently, researchers in the U.S. and other countries are conducting their own independent studies to confirm those results.

Ophthalmologists say the potential benefits go beyond preserving vision to heading off some long-term consequences of severe myopia, which can include cataracts, glaucoma and retinal detachment that can lead to blindness.

"Now we have a way to slow that down and maybe we can prevent kids from having that really elongated eye that puts them at risk for blindness," said Dr. Rupa Wong, a Honolulu-based pediatric ophthalmologist.

How much will the lenses cost?

The suggested retail price is $450, according to Essilor-Luxottica, the company that makes the lenses.

Major U.S. vision insurance providers are expected to cover the lenses for children who meet the prescribing criteria.

How do the new lenses compare to older treatments?

The only other FDA-approved product to slow myopia are contact lenses made by a company called MiSight. The daily disposable lenses, approved in 2019, use a similar approach intended to slow the progression of nearsightedness in children ages 8 to 12.

But Gupta says many parents and physicians are likely to prefer the glasses.

"A lot of people might be hesitant to put a child as young as 8 in contact lenses, so the glasses offer a really nice alternative," she said.

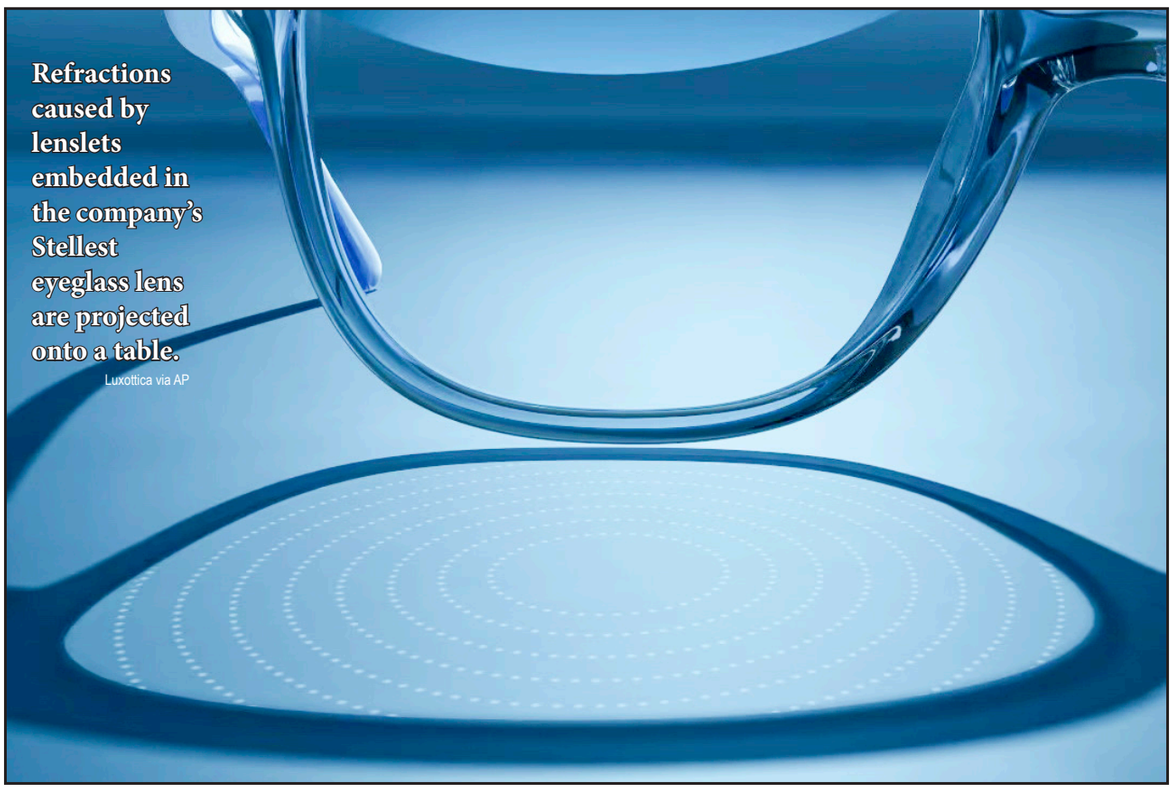

Some doctors prescribe medicated eye drops intended to slow myopia, but those are not approved by the FDA.

Which children are good candidates?

Under the FDA's approval decision, the lenses can be prescribed to any child with myopia who's within the recommended age range. There were no serious side effects, according to FDA, although some children reported visual disturbances, such as halos around objects while wearing the lenses.

The studies that the FDA reviewed for approval were conducted in Asia. Repka said U.S. ophthalmologists and optometrists may want to see some additional research.

"I think before it becomes widely used, we will need some data in the United States" showing that the lenses work, said Repka, who is conducting a U.S.-based study of the new lenses supported by the National Institutes of Health.

billion far beyond what was originally estimated at $250 billion, which will be further boosted due to the One Big Beautiful Bill Act.

Tariffs enacted throughout 2025 will continue to impact the supply chain with businesses expected to raise goods prices, placing pressure on consumers and small businesses.

Unemployment is expected to increase up to 4.5% by the end of 2025, according to the report. Inflation is projected to peak at 3.5% in early 2026, driven by tariff hikes, though economists anticipate that figure will gradually decline but remain elevated.

Fresh, Yearly, Homemade Tree Ornaments

By Mia Rotell

What do cookie cutters and Christmas ornaments have in common? Not much — but with some flour, water, and salt, charming Christmas tree embellishments can be brought to life. Salt dough ornaments bring together homey Christmas nostalgia and create darling keepsakes — especially with paw or little hand imprints.

What You'll Need:

A whisk
A large bowl
2 cups of flour
1 cup of salt
⅓ cup of ground cinnamon (optional)
1 ¼ cup of warm water
Rolling pin
Cookie cutters (as many and whatever design desired)
1 straw
String or ribbon
Baking sheet
Parchment paper

How to Make It:

Step 1: Preheat the oven to 210 degrees.

Step 2: Whisk the flour and salt together in a large bowl. Optional, add in ⅓ cup of ground cinnamon before whisking to make the ornaments brown.

Step 3: After the dry ingredients are whisked together, put 1 1/4 cup of water in the microwave for a minute.

Step 4: After the water is warm, pour small amounts at a time into the dry mixture and stir together.

Step 5: Continue to stir the mixture until there is ¼ cup of water left and the dough is formed.

Step 6: Take the dough out of the bowl and knead it for 10 minutes — make sure the dough is smooth and feels like Play-Doh. If the dough feels dry add a little bit of the warm water set aside and continue kneading.

Step 7: After kneading, roll the dough out with a rolling pin — the dough should be about ¼ inch thick.

Step 8: Press shapes into the dough with the desired cookie cutter(s) or press a pet's paw or child's hand into the dough and press the cookie cutter around the imprint.

Step 9: With a straw make a hole toward the top of each shape so the ornament can be hung.

Step 10: Place the shapes onto a baking sheet lined with parchment paper — they can be placed close together since they won't spread or rise.

Step 11: Put the baking sheet in the oven and set the timer for 3 hours.

Step 12: After 3 hours flip the shapes over and bake for another hour.

Step 13: Take the ornaments out when they aren't squishy in the middle (it may take longer than 4 hours to achieve this depending on the dough's thickness)

Step 14: After the ornaments are dry, take them out of the oven to cool.

Step 15: Once they are cool, hang them up with string or ribbon through the hole at the top of the ornament.

Step 16: They're done!

Tip: Use fine grit sandpaper to smooth out any rough edges that may need it. Use paint pens to decorate the ornaments once dry. After dry, coat them in Mod Podge, or a UV light curing clear gel, to seal them so they last for Christmases to come!

Beef Chili

By CONNOR FORBES

My kids claim they don't like beans. That made it a little tricky to make chili this week. But it was cold and windy and chili felt right. I got a little clever with the marketing and told them it was basically meat sauce but a little different. And that isn't totally dishonest.

There was no fooling my oldest, he's 9 after all and knows my tricks. He picked out the beans but enjoyed the rest. My 5-year-old and toddler ate it up, hook and sinker.

Ingredients

- 2 lbs ground turkey
- ½ large onion, diced
- 6 cloves garlic, minced
- 15-ounce pinto beans
- 15-ounce tomato sauce
- 15-ounce canned corn
- 1 tsp salt
- 1 tbsp cumin
- ½ tbsp smoked paprika
- 2 bay leaves

To Make

In a pot, over medium heat, add onions, garlic, ground beef, and salt. Brown. Chop with spatula. Add beans, tomato sauce, canned corn, cumin, paprika and bay leaves. Simmer for as long as you can to thicken, up to 3 hours, but certainly doesn't half to be. I simmered for about 30 minutes to avoid a revolt from my hungry family. I served this over pasta, and garnished with green onion, diced onion, and chili flakes. Sour cream, shredded cheese, and Fritos are great toppings too.

This Holiday, Don't Forget the Cornbread, and Here's a Nicely Cheesy Version

By KATIE WORKMAN
Associated Press

Even though there are many options on our Holiday table, we pay attention to the breadbasket. And every year, one of the non-negotiable items is cornbread. This year, it's going to be this nicely cheesy version, with shredded cheddar incorporated into the batter, and then some more strewn across the top before baking for good measure.

This recipe is everything I want in a cornbread: moist (dry cornbread is a no-go for me, unless we are talking about stuffing), a little crumbly in the best way, and loaded with sharp cheddar cheese so you get that pop of flavor in every bite.

There is a reason that cooks have long reached for their cast-iron skillets when making cornbread. The dark, heavy metal gives the crust a wonderful color and a wonderful crispness on the outside. If you don't have a cast iron skillet, you can absolutely use any other heavy ovenproof pan. Just make sure it's about 12-inches in diameter and has sides that are at least 2-inches tall.

Leftovers are great toasted the next day, with a smear of lightly salted butter or hot honey, or butter and hot honey mixed together.

If you want to make the cornbread ahead of time and freeze it, that's a great plan. Allow the bread to cool completely in the pan on a wire rack. Then wrap the bread well in foil and freeze it. You can freeze the whole circle of cornbread, or if it's easier (and I think it is), cut the cornbread into 4 quarters and freeze them separately. Defrost at room temperature; it will take about 12 hours to thaw. If you want to warm the bread before serving, just place it, still wrapped in foil, in a preheated 350° oven for about 10 minutes. Unwrap, slice and serve.

Cheddar Cornbread

Ingredients:

1/2 cup (1 stick) unsalted butter
2 cups all-purpose flour
2 cups yellow cornmeal
2 tablespoons baking powder
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon kosher salt
Hefty pinch cayenne pepper (to taste)
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese, plus 1/2 cup for sprinkling
2 large eggs
2 cups buttermilk

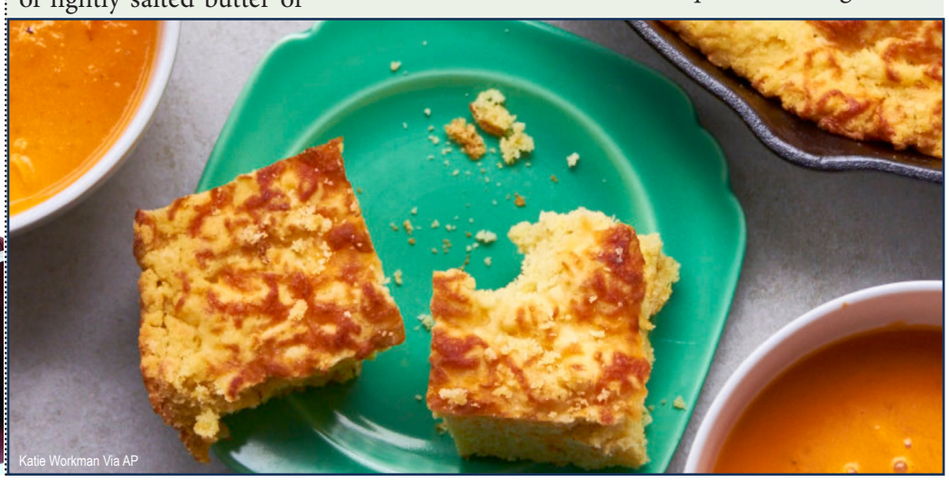

Directions:

1. Preheat the oven to 400°F. Place the butter in 12-inch cast iron skillet and put the pan in the oven until the butter melts and starts to very lightly brown.

2. Meanwhile, in a large bowl whisk together the flour, cornmeal, baking powder, sugar, salt and cayenne. Stir in 1 cup of the shredded cheese.In another smaller bowl use a fork to stir the eggs with the buttermilk.

3. When the butter is melted, twirl the pan a bit so that the butter coats the sides as well as the bottom, then pour almost all of it, except for a couple of tablespoons, into the buttermilk mixture and stir quickly to combine. Stir the buttermilk mixture into the flour mixture, just until combined (you want to see lumps; don't overbeat or the cornbread will become tough). Scrape the mixture into the hot butter-coated pan, smooth the top, and sprinkle over the remaining 1/2 cup shredded cheese.

4. Bake for 22 to 25 minutes, until a wooden skewer or a toothpick inserted into the center comes out clean, and the cornbread just starts to pull away from the outside of the pan. Cool in the pan on a wire rack, until warm or room temperature. Serve in squares or wedges.

"Zootopia 2"

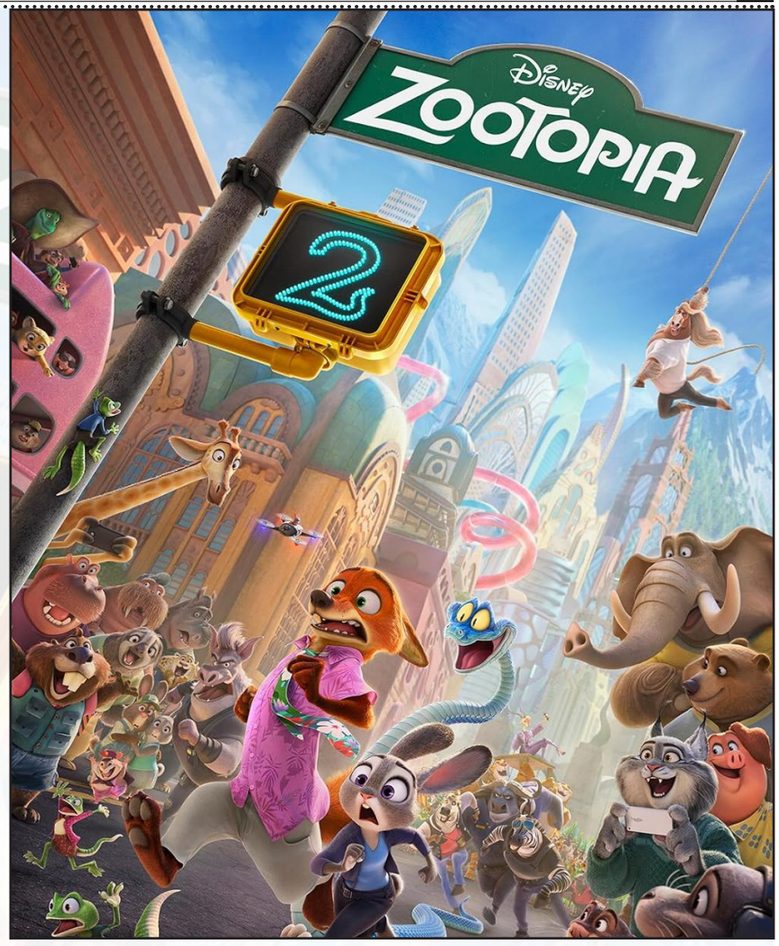

By Bob Garver

2016 was a great year for animation. Disney gave the world a new musical masterwork in "Moana." Pixar had its biggest hit up to that point in "Finding Dory." Even underdog Laika came out with cult classic "Kubo and the Two Strings." But the winner of the Best Animated Feature Oscar that year wasn't any of those films ("Finding Dory" wasn't even nominated), it was another Disney movie, "Zootopia." It wasn't a terribly controversial choice either, with critics and audiences alike praising the film for its more-thoughtful-than-usual look at race relations, symbolized as relations between various species of animals, though usually taking the form of predators vs. prey. The film was so successful, funny, and poignant that at time I advised Disney to add a whole Zootopia section to their Animal Kingdom theme park. To date, the property has only gotten a single attraction – a 3D movie in the park's Tree of Life – but it's in a key location. Anyway, here's a look at the less-poignant sequel.

Following the events of the first "Zootopia," bunny police officer Judy Hopps (Ginnifer Goodwin) was hailed as a hero, along with her unlikely ally, former con-artist fox Nick Wilde (Jason Bateman). Now the two are both officially cops, and partnered together as a mismatched-on-paper duo that Judy is determined to turn into the superstars of the station. She decides that the best way for the team to make its mark is to bust a smuggling operation without consulting buffalo police chief Bogo (Idris Elba) or even Nick. Poor communication turns the desired bust into, well, a bust, and Judy and Nick soon find themselves at the bottom of the department's figurative food chain.

Nick wants to wait patiently to get out of the (again, figurative) doghouse, but Judy wants to turn things around immediately, so she doubles down and drags Nick into another unauthorized mission, this time to protect the theft of a book that details how the weather accommodates all the animals in Zootopia. The book belongs to the powerful Lynxley family (of lynxes, naturally), and patriarch Milton (David Strathairn) has graciously decided to display the book at a fancy gala, where Judy interacts with his son Pawbert (Andy Samberg), the most charmingly awkward runt of a family since Hans from "Frozen."

The book does indeed get stolen by Gary (Ke Huy Quan), a venomous snake. This is a big deal for the city, as for all its supposed inclusivity, reptiles, especially snakes, have been banished from Zootopia for the last century. Judy and Nick naturally want to stop Gary, but there's more to the story than a simple book theft. If Gary can just use the book for its intended purpose, he can end the reptile ban and make life better for himself, his family, and his whole class of animals. But the city at large, including the Lynxleys and stallion mayor Winddancer (Patrick Warburton), are more interested in protecting the accepted truth than the actual one. Judy and Nick have to rely on unconventional resources like beaver conspiracy theorist Nibbles Maplestick (Fortune Feimster), all while questioning if they really belong as partners after all.

"Zootopia 2" is a fine movie, if missing some of the magic of the first. A few too many gags take the form of terrible puns or played-out schtick, but there are more than enough funny jokes to balance them out. What really dinged the film for me was the idea of the acceptance of the reptilian race hinging on a single piece of information. The Zootopia of the first movie was too complex to rely on outdated concepts like "banishment." Prejudice, sure, maybe mistreatment, but not black-and-white banishment. Oversimplified shortcuts like these are why this film can't measure up to its predecessor. Then again, the worldbuilding is still creative and the chemistry among the cast still sharp. It's a movie that I'm happy to recommend, but as with last year's "Moana 2," that happiness is somewhat dulled by remembering the heights that the franchise reached before.

Grade: B-

"Zootopia 2" is rated PG for action/violence and rude humor. Its running time is 108 minutes.

"Wicked: For Good" made another $62.8 million over the three-day weekend, one week after its big $150 million opening, Comscore reported.

Third place went to "Now You See Me: Now You Don't" with $7 million in its third weekend.

"Predator: Badlands" was fourth with $4.8 million in its fourth week in theaters, followed by "The Running Man," which made $3.7 million in its third weekend.

Rounding out the top 10 domestic releases were "Rental Family" ($2.1 million), "Hamnet" ($880,000), "Sisu: Road to Revenge" ($810,000) and "Nuremberg" ($749,325).

Netflix's "Wake Up Dead Man: A Knives Out Mystery," the third film in director Rian Johnson's series featuring Daniel Craig as detective Benoit Blanc, opened in selected theaters across North America on Wednesday and grossed about $4 million over the five-day weekend, according to trade publication reports. Netflix does not report box office figures.

This weekend's overall three-day box office haul was estimated at $186 million. The year-to-date total is $7.818 billion -- up 1.24% from the figure at this time last year, according to Comscore.

You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee's sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 916-939-0772 or visit this internet website www.nationwideposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case 2025-11550. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not be immediately reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 916-939-0772, or visit this internet website www.nationwideposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case 2025-11550 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid, by remitting the funds and affidavit or declaration described in Section 2924m(c) of the Civil Code, so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. The requirements of California Civil Code Section 2923.5(b)/2923.55(c) were fulfilled when the Notice of Default was recorded. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 714-730-2727 or visit this internet website www.ndscorp.com/sales, using the file number assigned to this case 24-00618-SMCA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT*: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are a "representative of all eligible tenant buyers" you may be able to purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 888-264-4010, or visit this internet website www.ndscorp.com, using the file number assigned to this case 24-00618-SMCA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as a "representative of all eligible tenant buyers" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase.*Pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code, the potential rights described herein shall apply only to public auctions taking place on or after January 1, 2021, through December 31, 2025, unless later extended. The Thrill of Victory, Agony of Defeat

It was a tale of two competitive high school football programs fighting for a championship title in their respective "weight classes," the perennial heavyweight, Corona Centennial, and the relative newcomer, Riverside Hillcrest.

Centennial, the most proficient public high school football program for more than two decades in the CIF Southern Section, was unable to avenge its lone loss of the season, dropping a lopsided game at the Rose Bowl for the Open Division title last Friday to Santa Margarita, 42-7.

It was a crushing end to a historic season that featured two wins over archrival Mater Dei, while coach Matt Logan won his 300th game, all at Centennial, only the 15th high school football coach in California history to do so.

The Huskies remain ranked second in the state and ninth in the nation on MaxPreps. California's #1-ranked Santa Margarita faces Northern California's traditional power, De La Salle, for the state championship on Saturday, December 13 at Saddleback College.

Corona Centennial Head Football Coach Matt Logan takes in the moment before addressing his team following an outstanding season in which the Huskies defeated perennial rival Mater Dei twice.

When Riverside Hillcrest opened in 2012, it originally fielded only a freshman team. Two years later, the varsity finished with a not all that surprising 1–10 record. But a year later, they were 6-5 and have been a solid program ever since.

The COVID pandemic ended a 5-0 season prematurely in 2020. This year, the Trojans have reached new heights.

The offenses dominated Saturday as Hillcrest secured the Division 10 crown with an entertaining 63-34 victory over the Hemet Tahquitz Titans. Trojan Quarterback Matthew Ramos was involved in six touchdowns.

Hillcrest now faces Irvine Beckman, the Division 8 champion, in the semi-finals of the California State 4A playoffs. The game is at 6 PM on Saturday at Tustin High. The winner advances to the state championship game against the winner of the Menlo-Atherton vs El Cerrito game.

With the CIF Southern Section divvied into 14 divisions, the goal of matching like-skilled teams to carve out creatively balanced competition appears to have been successful for local programs this year.

Santa Margarita's Vai Manutai (left) hits Corona Centennial QB Dominick Catalano (8) while he attempts to pass during the second quarter of the CIF Division 1 Championship game played at the historic Rose Bowl in Pasadena. The pass fell incomplete as Dash Fifita (0) rushes Catalano. The Eagles captured the Open Division crown 42 – 7. Both of the Huskies' losses this year were inflicted by Santa Margarita; the regular-season contest went to overtime.

Hillcrest QB Matthew Ramos (3), who accounted for 6 touchdowns, heads for the end zone with his fifth in the first half in the Trojans' 63 – 34 CIF Division 10 Championship game Saturday night.
