WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress passed a bipartisan housing bill on Tuesday that aims to reduce federal regulations and expand local control, one of the most lawmakers in both parties try to address housing costs in an election year. The final version of the legislation bans corporate investors from buying single-family homes but doesn't include a Senate provision that would have required investors to sell newly constructed homes within seven years.

The measure was the result of years of work to "lower costs, expand housing supply, cut red tape, protect taxpayers, and help more Americans achieve the dream of homeownership," said Senate Banking Committee Chairman Tim Scott, R-S.C., who worked with Democrats to get the bill passed.

Woman Fatally Struck by Train Near Corona

CORONA (CNS) - A woman was struck and killed by a freight train after she stepped onto tracks just east of Corona, authorities said Wednesday.

The victim, whose identity was not immediately released, was hit at 10:24 a.m. Tuesday on the Burlington Northern Santa Fe rail line that passes underneath the Riverside (91) Freeway/ Interstate 15 interchange, according to BNSF.

Agency spokeswoman Lena Kent told City News Service that the woman walked onto the tracks where there "is not a designated crossing."

The eastbound train immediately stopped, and all rail traffic was brought to a standstill as Corona Fire and Police Department personnel, along with Riverside County sheriff's deputies, reached the location.

Paramedics pronounced the victim dead at the scene.

It was unclear why the victim stepped into the train's path.

Kent said the ensuing investigation, initially handled by the sheriff's department but then turned over to BNSF Railway Police, required a complete closure of the tracks until just before 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Data Centers Are Guzzling California's Water. We Have No Idea How Much

BY RACHEL BECKER,
CalMatters

Data center builders don't tell the public how much water they use, according to a new report — and the industry is encroaching into water-stressed and vulnerable communities.

The report, by the think tank Next10 and researchers at Santa Clara University, finds that planned data centers — the ganglia of artificial intelligence — are spreading to regions reliant on overtapped groundwater and strained surface water, with potentially major effects in the Central and Imperial Valleys.

But, reinforcing previous studies, the researchers found that a patchwork of state, federal and local policies allow data center operators to avoid publicly disclosing their actual water use.

California lawmakers tried to address this last year, but California Gov. Gavin Newsom vetoed the measure. Now, the Legislature is trying again, with bills mandating disclosures about water use and planning.

"We have this huge build out, and we have very little data," said Irina Raicu, who directs the Internet Ethics program at the Markkula Center for Applied Ethics at Santa Clara University.

Paired with California's precarious water supplies, Raicu said, "it's just not a good combination."

Shaolei Ren, an expert on the environmental impacts of AI at UC Riverside who was not involved in the study, said the findings point to a much broader problem.

"Limited publicly available information about data center water use makes it difficult for communities, water providers, and researchers to have meaningful public discussions and responsibly assess power-water trade-offs," Ren said in an email.

Murky water use

Few environmental impact reports for California's data centers were publicly available online, the researchers found.

Raicu and a team led by Iris Stewart-Frey, a professor of environmental science and the main author of the study, went looking for the reports, meant to assess and disclose a project's impacts for both nature and people under the landmark California Environmental Quality Act.

They found almost none. The ones they did find were largely for facilities in the city of Santa Clara.

Through interviews with planning officials, they discovered that projects can slip through with little environmental review if they fall under certain size or water use thresholds, or if they meet a city or county's criteria for other approval pathways. These include something called ministerial approval, which requires planning agencies to approve a project that meets local zoning and other standards.

Even for data centers that undergo more stringent environmental scrutiny, the researchers found that documentation is rarely available to the public.

In the few cases the planning documents were posted publicly, the information — on the data center's owner or operator, size, type of cooling system, the amount of water used, whether it's recycled or potable — was often "missing, contradictory, or vague," the report said.

The researchers said they contacted water providers in areas where data centers cluster, seeking usage data. None responded.

A shift to vulnerable regions
California's data centers mostly cluster in the south San Francisco Bay Area and the city of Los Angeles, with smaller concentrations in Sacramento and San Diego.

But the report noted large, planned projects in rural and less affluent regions — like in Santa Clara County's Gilroy, as well as in the heavily agricultural Imperial Valley.

Center Coalition, which has opposed bills mandating more granular water use reporting, said in an email the industry is "committed to being a good neighbor."

Boender argues that data centers collectively "used significantly less water than other essential industries in 2025, including the agriculture, power, food and beverage, and semiconductor sectors," but the coalition offers no data to back that up.

Collective use matters less than local impacts in a state where each community has its own mix of water supplies and strains, according to a previous study published by a team at UC Berkeley.

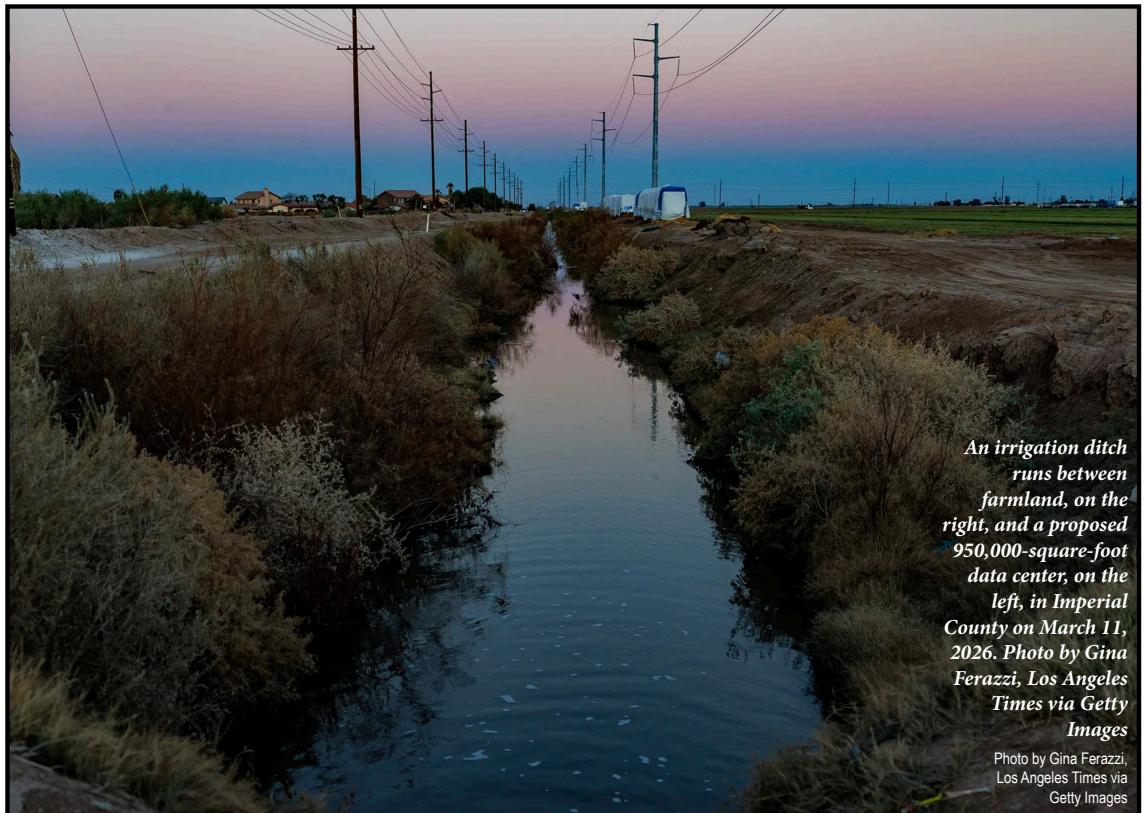

Whether data centers use a lot or a little water relative to agriculture or other supplies and community vulnerabilities to anticipated expansion.

"We're at the brink of this happening in California," Stewart-Frey, the environmental scientist, said. Her report, she added, isn't advocating against data centers. But "communities should know what they're getting themselves into."

Debates over proposed data centers are erupting in a Kern County desert community with dwindling groundwater and in the hot Imperial Valley drawing from the strained Colorado River.

Monterey Park residents in the San Gabriel Valley successfully opposed one data center project over environmental concerns and inadequate information

"They need a bunch of cheap land," Raicu. "If we're not careful, they will end up being pitched, very convincingly, to communities that have real needs — without enough attention being paid to the water part."

Khara Boender, director of state policy for the Data industries, "what matters most is the scale of new local use compared to available local supply," the Berkeley team concluded earlier this year. "Unfortunately, this picture is clouded by data deficiencies."

In this week's report, the Santa Clara University team drilled into those local

In a letter to city officials, a representative for the developer dismissed opponents as "rage-baiting an uninformed mob to pressure your decisionmaking."

County Budget Totaling $10.36 Billion for Next Fiscal Year Approved

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - The Board of Supervisors Tuesday formally adopted a $10.36 billion budget for the 2026-27 fiscal year, incorporating some new allocations deemed necessary during hearings on the proposed spending blueprint.

"The revisions represent targeted investments in priorities identified by the board," county CEO Jeff Van Wagenen said in the final appropriations report received by the board Tuesday. "The 2026-27 budget continues to prioritize preservation of core services, avoidance of widespread layoffs, maintenance of prudent reserves and gradual reduction of the structural deficit through active fiscal management."

The board signed off on the spending plan in a 5-0 vote without comment. However, prior to the close of the public hearing, Moreno Valley resident and frequent board commentator Roy Bleckert told the supervisors the budget reflected their lack of "will to do what's right." "Costs are rising higher than revenues," he said. "But the county doesn't have a revenue problem. It's spending."

Bleckert said the board's priorities were off, such as making larger allocations to Housing First initiatives to expand affordable residential complexes that won't "make this community safer" because vagrants will still be out on the streets, committing crimes and refusing any type of mental health treatment, he said. He complained that the board should have provided funding to fully open the Benoit Detention Center in Indio, only a quarter of which is operational.

Van Wagenen indicated during the June 8-9 budget hearings that layoffs may be unavoidable in some departments. He emphasized the hiring freeze initiated last year will continue, along with targeted spending cuts and controls, to mitigate deficit spending. According to the CEO, "just-in-time" funding will be available to meet specific needs as the board engages in unending "budget management" throughout the coming fiscal year.

At the end of the hearings earlier this month, the Executive Office returned to the board with $27.4 million in new allocations to at least partially satisfy agencies' needs.

The augmented outlays include $8.5 million more for the county Sheriff's Department, $679,000 more for the District Attorney's Office and $250,000 more for the Department of Animal Services.

The increased allotment to the Sheriff's Department remains well below what Sheriff Chad Bianco insisted he needed to preclude patrol deputy layoffs. He told the board that without another $250 million, he'll end up slashing over 600 deputies from payrolls in the next few years.

"This is a massive number that we cannot recover from," he said.

Bianco said roughly $138 million of the $250 million request that his staff submitted to the Executive Office, and wasn't accepted, amounts to "stay flat funding" to keep the agency about where it was in staffing during the current fiscal year.

He asserted there would be major impacts to unincorporated communities as patrols are taken away to ensure the 17 municipalities that contract with the county for law enforcement services continue to receive protection.

"These are tough budget times," Supervisor Jose Medina told Bianco. "The pain needs to be distributed across the county departments. As important as public safety is, it cannot be helped not to feel some of the pain (of spending caps)."

Supervisor Manuel Perez advocated for the quarter-million dollar increase in the Department of Animal Services' budget, mainly for continuation of pet adoption campaigns intended to attain a near-term goal of turning the county's shelters into "no kill" facilities.

As it stands now, the county has a projected $46 million structural budget deficit going into 2026-27.

The proposed $10.36 billion appropriations plan represents a roughly 3.5% increase from the 2025-26 budget, which totaled $9.98 billion.

The new blueprint indicated that 30% of allocations will be dedicated to health and hospital services, followed by 23% for public safety units, 19% for human services, 11% for public works, 9% for internal support to departments and 7% for agencies dedicated

Riverside County's Jobless Rate Drops Marginally in May

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - Amid a mix of payroll losses and gains throughout the regional economy, Riverside County's unemployment rate dropped marginally in May, according to figures released Friday by the California Employment Development Department.

The countywide jobless rate last month, based on preliminary EDD estimates, was 4.7%, compared to 4.9% in April.

According to figures, the May rate was three-tenths of a percentage point lower than the year-ago level, when countywide unemployment stood at 5%.

The latest agency estimates indicated Cherry Valley had the highest unemployment rate within the county in May at 8.7%, followed by Blythe at 8.6%, Coachella at 7.5%, Rancho Mirage at 6.9% and March Air Reserve Base at 6.7%.

The combined unemployment rate for Riverside and San Bernardino counties -- the Inland Empire -- was 4.6%, down from 4.9% in April, the EDD stated.

Bi-county data indicated payrolls expanded by the widest margin in the agricultural sector, where 1,400 positions were added in May.

Additional gains were recorded in the construction, manufacturing and public sectors, which put nearly 1,000 people to work last month, figures showed.

Payrolls declined by the largest amount in the professional business services sector, which shed 1,800 jobs in May. Further losses were documented in the health services, hospitality, information technology and trade, transportation and utilities sectors, which sank by a total 2,400 positions, EDD said.

Miscellaneous unclassified industries also fell by 200 jobs.

The financial services and mining sectors were unchanged.

The statewide non-seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in May was 4.7%.

to various governmental operations, such as the Office of County Counsel.

The county's composite reserves should top out at $584 million by the start the new fiscal on July 1. However, earlier projections had put the figure at $650 million.

More than two-thirds of the county budget is composed of programmed spending, including federal and state earmarks for specific uses, along with grants and related external source revenue. The board has little control over those dollars.

New laws v. Big Tech

Last year, Assemblymember

Diane Papan, a Democrat from San Mateo, authored a bill requiring data center operators to report estimated or actual water use to their water supplier when seeking or renewing a business license or permit.

Gov. Gavin Newsom vetoed the measure amid industry pressure, saying he was "reluctant to impose rigid reporting requirements about operational details on this sector without understanding the full impact on businesses and the consumers of their technology."

Now Papan is trying again with two bills. One largely reprises last year's measure, with additional reporting required to the city and county. The other would bar local governments from approving new or expanded data centers unless the developer discloses information about their water use and plans.

It would also set other requirements — like prohibiting development in overdrafted groundwater basins, like in the San Joaquin Valley, unless state water managers okay it.

"You cannot manage what you have not and cannot measure," Papan said. "The public likes transparency, and they should."

Both bills cleared a key legislative chokepoint this week but face staunch opposition from the tech industry and business groups.

"If they run out of water, guess what happens? And they can't cool their systems — are they going to succeed?"

USC Study Puts 2026 Dementia Cost at $818 Billion

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - Dementia is expected to cost the United States an estimated $818 billion in 2026, with much of the burden falling on people living with the condition and family members who provide their care, according to a USC-led study released Wednesday.

The study, published in Alzheimer's & Dementia: The Journal of the Alzheimer's of the cost, totaling $320 billion. Unpaid care provided by family members and friends accounts for an additional $237 billion, while medical and long-term care costs total $222 billion.

According to the study, about 5.2 million people provide 6.8 billion hours of unpaid care annually to family members or friends with dementia.

while patients and families pay about $46 billion out of pocket, according to the study.

"By providing annual, comprehensive and transparent estimates of dementia's total costs, our research can help guide decisions about how to allocate resources as the dementia population is set to grow substantially," lead researcher Julie Zissimopoulos of the USC Schaeffer Center for Health Policy & Economics said in a statement.

The report was produced as part of the U.S. Cost of Dementia Project, a federally funded effort supported by the National Institute on Aging. Researchers said this year's estimates include new measures of lost earnings and quality-of-life impacts on caregivers.

Officials said the findings could help policymakers, health care providers and researchers evaluate the potential effects of new treatments, care models and other efforts aimed at reducing the impact of dementia on patients and families.

Association, estimated that 5.7 million Americans are living with dementia this year, including 5.1 million people ages 65 and older.

Researchers found that reduced quality of life for people living with dementia represents the largest share

Researchers also estimated that people with dementia and their caregivers forgo a combined $23 billion in annual earnings.

Medicare and Medicaid cover about 70% of medical and long-term care costs associated with dementia, or roughly $154 billion,

Supervisors Approve 10-Year Agreement with Organ Procurement Firm

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - The Board of Supervisors Tuesday approved a 10-year compact sought by the Riverside County Sheriff's Department with an organ procurement company for the pre-authorized recovery of anatomical parts from decedents received by the coroner's office.

In a 5-0 vote without comment Tuesday, the board signed off on the coroner's office request to continue a standing agreement with Azusa-based OneLegacy until June 30, 2036.

The coroner's office, which is under the sheriff's umbrella, has had contracts with the nonprofit going back to 2008.

The new contract, with an estimated annual cost of $35,000 -- or $350,000 for the entire period -- requires the county to bear all expenses associated with surgical organ and tissue removals and storage initially. However, OneLegacy ultimately will be responsible for reimbursing the coroner's office for the process of acquiring the potential life-saving elements.

OneLegacy CEO Prasad Garimella said in March that the firm is the only federally designated organ procurement organization, or OPO, across seven Southern California counties -- Los Angeles, Kern, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara and Ventura.

Garimella said service agreements are in place with more than 200 hospitals, nine transplant centers and seven coroner's offices.

The renewal agreement with Riverside County contains stipulations regarding how tissue and organs are to be obtained through the coroner's office and maintained afterward until designated for recipients.

Organ donation registration is available through the California Department of Motor Vehicles and multiple nonprofit registries statewide. A decedent must have signed a donor card at some point in his or her lifetime in order for transfer of vital internal organs, eyes and other parts to be passed on at the time of a person's death from an accident, suicide or other act.

OneLegacy is accredited and licensed by multiple entities, including the American Association of Tissue Banks, Eye Bank Association of America, Association of Organ Procurement Organizations and the U.S. Food & Drug Administration, according to documents posted to the board's agenda.

A Soothing Cup of Herbal Tea Can Begin in YOUR Garden

By JESSICA DAMIANO
Associated Press

Drink a fragrant cup of herbal tea, and the intoxicating scent of steeped herbs might calm your mind before you even take a sip. Even better is when they come from your own backyard herb garden.

Mine includes several ingredients for my daily cup, and they're all easy to grow and prepare.

Herbal teas are distinct from true teas — such as black or green — which comes from the leaves of the Camellia sinensis plant. (You can grow that in your garden, too.) Brew herbal teas with either freshly harvested or dried herbs.

Either way, settling in with a cup of homegrown herbal tea — hot or iced — can be a relaxing ritual.

General tips for growing herbs

Most herbs require a sunny throughout the growing season.

To sow directly outdoors, space seeds as directed on the package label. If seeds are super tiny, such as those of mints, mix them with a bit of sand, then scatter them directly over the soil. When they reach 2 inches tall, remove excess sprouts to achieve the recommended spacing between the remaining plants.

Check the “date to maturity” on the seed pack or plant tag. Seeds are best sown in spring, but purchased starter plants can be planted later as long as the expected harvest date falls within the remaining time frame before the first frost.

Keep the soil lightly moist until the plants become established, then water only when the soil dries out.

spot that receives at least 6-8 hours of sunlight daily, but they benefit from a bit of afternoon shade in hot climates. They grow well in containers, raised beds and gardens in well-draining soil. Fertilizer isn't usually necessary, but incorporating a generous helping of compost into the soil at planting time will help nourish herbs to get you started.

5 TOMATO SUPERSTARS for a MOUTHWATERING Summer Harvest

By JESSICA DAMIANO
Associated Press

Tomato time is my favorite time.

In spring, the anticipation of slicing into a juicy, meaty ball of perfection has me planting more than I should.

By mid-summer, plumping tomatoes on fragrant vines motivate me. And in late summer, when the payoff arrives here in my zone 7 garden, I'm reminded why they're the most popular backyard vegetable.

Tomatoes, of course, are technically fruits, as is every crop with seeds inside its edible part. True vegetables are plant parts such as flowers, stems, leaves and roots. Still, we colloquially refer to tomatoes as vegetables, so who am I to argue?

Every year, I grow at least one new-to-me variety in hopes of discovering the next best thing, but in the end, I keep returning to the same five superstars (all require a minimum of 6-8 hours of direct sunlight daily and about 1 to 1 ½ inches of water per week):

Bull's hearts, or oxhearts

These are staples in my raised beds. I fell in love with them on a trip years ago to Italy's Amalfi Coast, where they're called cuore di bue; in France, they're coeur de boeuf. Your seed packet might call them by any of these names (tomato, to-mah-to!).

Plants produce large, meaty, fragrant and tasty heart-shaped (human, not Valentine's) fruit with few seeds. They make great salads, sandwiches and, because of their low water content, tomato paste and sauce, too.

There are variations among subtypes (pink, Russian, beefsteak was introduced by the Burpee Seed Company in 1949. Plants are highly productive, pumping out a steady stream of (at least) 10- to 12-ounce, aromatic tomatoes starting about 78 days after planting.

Hungarian, etc.). Some are heirloom; others, hybrids. Expect most to be ready for harvesting roughly 80 days after planting.

Rutgers

First introduced to home gardeners in 1934, this is a new favorite in my garden. Technically hybrids bred by Rutgers University and the Campbell Soup Company, their seeds can be saved for replanting as with heirlooms because they have been open-pollinated. Sometimes called Jersey tomatoes, the round, bright red, flavorful, 4- to 6-ounce “slicer” tomatoes are nice and meaty, making them great for sandwiches and salads. You can expect to harvest in about 75 days.

Big Boys

These may look like perfectly round, boring supermarket tomatoes, but just one bite will put an end to the comparison. Among the tastiest of the hybrids, the

These have a somewhat cult following among tomato growers, myself included. Since they're prone to splitting, they aren't typically found in grocery stores, so unless you're lucky enough to stumble upon them at the farmers' market, you'll have to grow these babies yourself if you want to taste what all the fuss is about. Plants produce clusters of candy-sweet, low-acid, orange tomatoes, each approximately an inch wide. Use them in salads and crudite platters, or just snack on them right off the plant. Ready in about 60-65 days.

Brandywines

Large, juicy heirloom beefsteaks that date to the late 1800s. The plant has potato-type foliage and produces 6-to 7-inch pinkish-red fruits that weigh up to a pound apiece and make perfectly sized sandwich slices. Pink-fruited varieties are available, as well.

Sesame Scallion Sauce

By CONNOR FORBES

I had some chicken in my fridge that I had been brining in salt water for a couple of days. Brining is a simple trick to add a ton of juiciness to your end result chicken. To brine simply combine 2 tablespoons of salt to about 4 cups of water. Then submerge your chicken in it for at least two hours. Though you can leave it to brine for a few days.

I was keeping it simple, so I just went with a brine with no other marinade. And when I cooked it, I used sesame oil for my fat, and salt and pepper for my seasoning. I have been making chicken this way (though usually with vegetable oil) for my Caesar salads and have quickly become a fan of its simplicity. It is one of those keep it simple for big flavor recipes. Brine, salt, and pepper equals tasty chicken breast.

Because I wanted to add some flair, I wanted to make a sauce to spread over the chicken. You know, to kick it up a notch, as Emeril would say. I have a ton of green onions, also known as scallion, in the garden. So that seemed like a natural ingredient to use.

This recipe is great to add to any protein, whether chicken, pork, beef, or tofu. And is infinitely flexible with really any meal. Need a little extra something? Look no further than sesame scallion sauce. So let's make some sauce!

Ingredients

- 1 cup diced scallions, greens and whites
- 1/3 cup of sesame oil
- 1 thai chili pepper or any other spicy variety
- 1 tsp salt
- 1 tsp soy sauce
- 1 tsp fish sauce

To make

Heat the sesame oil on medium heat for 5 minutes. It should be very hot, but you may not see boiling. Be careful not to leave it on too long or the sesame oil will start to take on a burnt taste. While the sesame oil is heating, dice your scallions and place in a heat resistant bowl. Chop your chili pepper and add to bowl. Pour hot sesame oil over scallions. Add salt, soy sauce, and fish sauce and stir. Mixing well. And

EAT!

Michael Mina shares an Alexandria-inspired steak sandwich recipe from 'My Egypt'

By MICHAEL MINA

Voracious

Not far from the Corniche along the Eastern Harbor in Alexandria, Egypt, there's El Fallah, a tiny place that only makes one thing: liver sandwiches.

You say liver sandwich in Alexandria and people know you're talking about this spot — it's so famous that the owner has dozens of pictures of himself posing with Egyptian celebrities.

The reason the sandwich works is the meat is cut paper-thin and is generously seasoned with spices. That liver sandwich inspired this recipe in my book "My Egypt," made with rib-eye, which applies similar flavors to steak sliced super-thin (as in, Philly cheesesteak thin).

If you'd rather make the sandwich with beef liver instead of steak, slice the liver in half horizontally, season generously with salt and pepper, and brush with the garlic butter used in this recipe. Broil the liver for 1 to 2 minutes or until brown on the outside and slightly pink in the center. Let it cool for a couple of minutes, then slice it crosswise and add it to the bowl with the cooked shallots and other fixings.

You can make the garlic butter ahead and refrigerate it with the garlic cloves inside. This recipe makes more garlic butter than you need, but the extra keeps, sealed in an airtight container, for a month, ready to be pulled out and used to make many other things, like garlic bread or scampi.

Alexandria Steak Sandwiches

Serves 4

Ingredients

GARLIC BUTTER:

- ¼ pound (113g) unsalted butter

- 5 garlic cloves, peeled and smashed

- ¼ teaspoon fine sea salt

- Freshly ground black pepper

SANDWICH:

- 4 soft French sandwich rolls, cut in half and toasted cut side up

- 2 boneless rib-eye or New York strip steaks (about 12 ounces / 340 g each)

- 1 teaspoon vegetable oil

- Fine sea salt

- Freshly ground black pepper

- 2 tablespoons unsalted butter

- 3 shallots, thinly sliced

- 1 small hot pepper (Ancho or jalapeño), thinly sliced crosswise

- ½ teaspoon ground cumin

- ½ teaspoon ground turmeric

- ½ teaspoon paprika

- 1 lime, halved

- 1 handful cilantro sprigs

Directions

1. To make the garlic butter, in a small saucepan, melt the butter with the garlic over medium heat, about 2 minutes. Season with salt and a few pinches of pepper and let cool to a warm room temperature, about 10 minutes.

2. Using a pastry brush, lightly coat the cut side of the sandwich rolls with the garlic butter, about 1 tablespoon per roll.

3. Trim some of the fat from the steak and save to render in the pan. Cut away any gristle. Slice each steak in half crosswise, then slice thinly across the grain into 3- to 4-inch- (7.5 to 10 cm) long pieces (try to get as close as you can to Philly cheesesteak thinness with the slices).

4. In a large skillet over medium-high heat, render the saved beef fat for 1 minute, then remove (it's OK if not much fat comes out). Add the oil and heat for a few seconds, then add the sliced steak and sear briefly, turning the pieces once or twice and seasoning with a few pinches of salt and a generous pinch of pepper, until the beef is cooked through, about 2 minutes. Transfer the beef and any juices to a heat-proof bowl and keep warm.

5. In the same skillet, melt the butter over medium heat. Add the shallots, hot pepper, cumin, turmeric, and paprika and cook until the shallots have softened slightly, about 2 minutes. Add to the bowl with the steak and stir together well. Squeeze the lime over the bowl, then mix again, adding more salt if needed.

6. Divide the steak and shallots among the sandwich rolls and finish with cilantro sprigs. Slice the sandwiches in half before serving.

"Toy Story 5"

By BOB GARVER

Simply put, "Toy Story" is my favorite movie franchise of all time. The 1995 original about cowboy doll Woody (Tom Hanks) fighting for relevance against hi-tech spaceman action figure Buzz Lightyear (Tim Allen) was a groundbreaking first for computer animation – not to mention about the most fun a kid could possibly have at a theater... until three worthy sequels came along. I've seen the original six times in theaters – my personal record. I was disappointed that "only" the third film in the series was nominated for Best Picture at the Oscars. I didn't think that 2019's "Toy Story 4" was in any way a step down from its predecessors. And yet here I am, saying that "Toy Story 5" is the first significant misstep in the franchise (not counting 2022's sorta-spinoff "Lightyear," which I'd like to banish to infinity and beyond).

Despite all the emphasis on the Woody/Buzz reunion in the film's advertising, the main character of this movie is actually Jessie the Cowgirl (Joan Cusack), a doll companion of Woody's introduced in the second movie, where she shared a tragic backstory of being abandoned by her human owner. Now owned by 8-year-old Bonnie (Scarlett Spears), along with Buzz and other familiar figures, Jessie spends her days as the youngster's favorite plaything. But Bonnie has a hard time making human friends, despite the toys' best efforts to add to the number of children playing in the house. Her parents decide that the best way to connect with other kids in the neighborhood is to get her on social media, which is why they present her with frog-themed tablet LilyPad (Greta Lee). Soon Bonnie is addicted to the screen, "socializing" with so-called friends that aren't in the room, and the cowgirl has to fight for relevance against the hi-tech newcomer.

The film bafflingly never really comments on the parallels to the first movie. Couldn't Woody say, "I've been through this before..." or Buzz ask, "Is this what is what is was like for you?" as he's being replaced by something flashier? For all its reliance on nostalgia, the film is missing a lot of potential for callbacks here.

A sleepover for Bonnie organized by LilyPad turns disastrous for Jessie, and she finds herself rejected, abandoned, and returned to the home of her original owner. There's a bright girl named Blaze (Mykal-Michelle Harris) living there now, but no time for her, Jessie has to get back to Bonnie. And the only way to do that is with the help of nearly-dead electronic potty-training device Smarty Pants (Conan O'Brien), even though Jessie is averse to all tech. Meanwhile, a reunited Buzz (who wants to marry Jessie) and Woody (taking a break from his life as "lost toy") organize a rescue effort that will eventually lead them to a whole squadron of lost Buzz figures.

The emphasis on helping humans make human friends is a nice touch, but too much of the movie is just a series of par-for-the-course toy rescues. Or overly-familiar jokes and bickering. Or throwaway lines given to returning characters just to remind viewers that they're still alive (as toys go). Even heavy emotional moments are hit-and-miss, with one at a tree being suitably effective, but others (usually involving bullying) feeling like the writers just needed a "down" story beat. It's also worth mentioning that the usually bright, agreeable, effective animation is often murky and ugly here, and not in a "haunting" way, more in a "shoddy" way.

Don't get me wrong, I'm recommending "Toy Story 5." This franchise on its worst installment is better than a lot of franchises on their best. There's enough heart and laughter and creativity here to save it... but just barely. And for someone like me who puts "Toy Story" on a pedestal, a movie that I can "just barely" recommend is a big disappointment.

Grade: B-

"Toy Story 5" is rated PG for some thematic elements and rude humor. Its running time is 102 minutes.

'Toy Story 5' Opens with Franchise Record $160 Million

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - "Toy Story 5" opened with $160 million at North American theaters this weekend, the biggest opening in franchise history and the largest opening for any movie this year, according to industry estimates released Sunday.

The latest edition in the saga of Buzz Lightyear, Woody, Jesse and other children's toys features series regulars Tom Hanks, Tim Allen and Joan Cusack and was directed by Andrew Stanton. The franchise, which is produced by Pixar Animation Studios and released by Disney, began with the original "Toy Story" in 1995.

Director Steven Spielberg's "Disclosure Day" was second with $17 million, one week after opening in first place with $44 million, Rentrak reported.

"Obsession," 26-year-old YouTube comedian Curry Barker's low-budget horror film, continued its phenomenal run with $14.2 million Friday through Sunday in its sixth weekend in theaters.

Another low-budget horror film from a young director with an internet pedigree, 20-year-old Kane Parsons' "Backrooms," was fourth with $7.3 million in its fourth weekend.

"Scary Movie" was fifth with $6.7 million in its third week.

Rounding out the top 10 releases were "Masters of the Universe" ($5.59 million), "Star Wars: Mandalorian & Grogu" ($3.9 million),

"Leviticus" ($2.7 million), "The Death of Robin Hood" ($2.6 million) and "Michael" ($2.1 million).

This weekend's overall three-day box office haul was estimated at $230 million. The year-to-date total is $4.463 billion -- up 14% from the figure at this time last year, according to Rentrak.

Recycled Utensil Holders for Independence Day — It's ALL IN THE DETAILS

By MIA ROTELL

This year's Independence Day is unlike most — it's America's 250th anniversary, which means everything is going to be bigger, better and more fun! If you're hosting friends and family, get creative with every detail of your decorations to make every part of your home as festive as possible — like these recycled utensil holders. With contribution from Lauren Rotell.

What you'll need:

- At least one can
- A festive napkin
- A hot glue gun
- Flat-backed beads
- Scissors
- Glossy Mod Podge

- A paintbrush
- A glue stick for the hot glue gun

How to make it:

Step 1: Remove the label from the can and wash it thoroughly. Unfold the napkin and separate the festive printed layer from the white backing. Plug in your hot glue gun.

Step 2: Lay the can on its side in the bottom right or left corner of the napkin. Cut straight up the napkin from either the top or bottom edge of the can, depending on which corner it's in.

Step 3: Set the napkin strip aside and hot-glue three beads to the bottom of the can to act as feet.

Step 4: Once the glue is dry, brush a coat of Mod Podge over the entire can.

Step 5: Place the napkin strip on top of the Mod Podge and trim away any excess napkin.

Step 6: Brush Mod Podge over the napkin until it's thoroughly coated. Let it dry for 15 minutes.

Step 7: Repeat Step 6 and let it dry for another 15 minutes.

Step 8: Apply a third and final coat of Mod Podge and let it dry for 30 minutes.

Step 9: Once the Mod

Podge is dry, your utensil holder is ready to use!

Tip: You can find everything you need at Dollar Tree.

Space Shuttle

In 2012, Endeavour flew over Southern California atop a modified NASA 747 Shuttle Carrier Aircraft, with many thousands on the streets, atop hills, and rooftops, witnessing the majestic return "home" to Southern California for its final destination. The Shuttle landed at LAX, and was towed across the streets of Los Angeles, before settling in a temporary exhibit at the California Science Center.

On Wednesday, The California Science Center provided the first public view of Space Shuttle Endeavour in its permanent home and announced an opening date for its future air and space museum.

The Samuel Oschin Air and Space Center will open to the public Nov.

13, according to the science center.

Officials said the exhibit will be the only place in the world where visitors can view a complete, authentic space shuttle system in launch position. The display features the flown orbiter Endeavour attached to a pair of real solid rocket boosters and ET-94, the last remaining flight-qualified external tank.

The unveiling took place Wednesday morning at the California Science Center in Exposition Park, where Endeavour is displayed inside the Samuel Oschin Shuttle Gallery, the centerpiece of the $450 million Samuel Oschin Air and Space Center.

The shuttle stack stands nearly 200 feet tall, allowing visitors to walk beneath the orbiter's main engines, view its open payload bay and ascend to elevated viewing platforms overlooking the spacecraft, according to officials.

The exhibit will also include a 140' gantry style elevator to evoke the feeling of astronauts preparing for launch, a 115' slide emulating the reentry of a space shuttle, and a replica flight deck replete with switches, lights, pedals, and joysticks, placing guests in the cockpit.

Construction of the Samuel Oschin Air and Space Center was completed in April, nearly four years after groundbreaking on the project in June 2022. The 200,000-square-foot addition nearly doubles the Science Center's exhibit space and will house more than 100 aerospace artifacts and hands-on exhibits focused on aviation and space exploration, officials said.

In addition to the shuttle gallery, the facility will include the multi-level Korean Air Aviation Gallery and Kent Kresa Space Gallery.

"Through the development of the Samuel Oschin Air and Space Center, the California Science Center is fulfilling a decades-long dream," President and CEO of the California Science Center Jeffrey N. Rudolph said in announcing completion of the building in April. "This amazing project significantly expands our ability to accomplish our mission, to stimulate curiosity and inspire science learning in everyone, on a scale and with an impact unlike anything in our history."

He added that the facility "will stand as an enduring source of inspiration for generations of scientists, engineers and explorers."

The facility was designed around the unprecedented vertical display of Endeavour, according to project architect Ted Hyman of ZGF Architects.

"At the outset of this project we challenged ourselves to achieve something that has never been done before: to design the only place in the world for the public to see a space shuttle in launch position," Hyman said when construction was completed.

Endeavour was lifted into its permanent vertical configuration in 2024 following a six-month assembly process known as "Go for Stack." The orbiter, which flew 25 NASA missions between 1992 and 2011, has been on public display at the Science Center since arriving in Los Angeles in 2012.

Tax Audit Measure Qualifies for November Ballot

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - Southern California voters will have a chance in November to weigh in on a proposed constitutional amendment that would require audits of programs funded by new state special taxes and restrict certain future tax increases.

Secretary of State Shirley N. Weber announced Tuesday that the initiative has gathered enough valid signatures to qualify for the Nov. 3 general election ballot.

Under the proposal, state-wide special taxes approved after Jan. 1, 2026, would be subject to recurring audits, while special tax measures proposed through the initiative process would require a pre-election audit of programs slated to receive funding.

The measure would also prohibit new state taxes enacted after Jan. 1, 2026, from being excluded from California's existing voter-approved state spending limit, including taxes appearing on the same ballot as the measure.

According to the Secretary of State's office, the initiative needed 874,641 valid petition signatures to qualify. Election officials determined it exceeded the threshold through a random sampling process.

The measure is scheduled to be certified for the ballot on June 25 unless it is withdrawn by its proponent before then.

A fiscal analysis prepared by the Legislative Analyst and Department of Finance found the proposal's overall fiscal effect is unknown. The analysis said future costs or savings would depend on factors including the number of special tax measures requiring audits, additional voter guide expenses and any savings identified through the audit process.

The measure's proponent is Sacramento attorney Kurt R. Oneto.

Housing Bill

Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren, the top Democrat on the banking panel, said it is the most significant housing bill to pass Congress since 1990, when the average home in America was sold for $150,000. Now it costs more than $500,000, she said.

The bill "acknowledges that the federal government has a role to play in lowering housing prices," Warren told The Associated Press. "For the first time ever, private equity will be blocked from buying up single-family homes and trying to turn housing into one more Wall Street investment."

As of publication on Thursday at 8 am, the bill had not yet been sent to President Donald Trump, who had signaled his support. But he abruptly canceled a signing ceremony on Wednesday morning, demanding that the Save America Act, which limits access to voting, be passed first.

The bill is not dead yet, however. Without a veto, and Congress remaining in session for 10 days, the bill will automatically become law. Should there be a veto, if members stick with their original vote, it has far more than the two-thirds vote needed in both houses to override. The 10-day clock is not yet ticking as the bill has not been sent, and the White House has not indicated its intentions when received.

Housing costs are a concern for both parties. Republicans and Democrats have embraced the bill as a way to show they are addressing the nation's affordability crisis, driven in part by rising home prices due to a shortage of affordable housing. The U.S. housing market has been in a slump dating back to 2022, when mortgage rates began to climb from pandemic-era lows.

Sales of previously occupied U.S. homes have been hovering close to a 4-million annual pace going back to 2023 — well short of the 5.2-million annual pace that's historically been the norm. Sales slowed last year to a 30-year low and have remained sluggish so far this year, declining in January and February versus a year earlier.

The Economic Report of the President in April found a shortage of 10 million homes, while a report this month from the Joint Center For Housing Studies at Harvard University found sales of existing homes were at three-decade lows and inventories were rising due to high home buying costs. "Cost burdens for both renters and owners continue to climb, while assistance remains profoundly underfunded," the report said.

While the median U.S. monthly rent has been declining for nearly three years, it was still 17.2% higher in May than it was before the pandemic, according to data from Realtor.com.

Changes for grants, Section 8 and manufactured housing

To increase the supply of housing, the bill would streamline environmental reviews and speed up the construction process.

It would offer funding to local governments that build more housing, including Community Development Block Grant money to places exceeding the median rate of homebuilding. It would also provide new dollars for communities to turn abandoned infrastructure into housing, and offers a framework for communities that want to reform outdated zoning regulations, which often limit larger housing developments.

The legislation would allow banks to invest more in affordable housing and raise limits on the number of public housing units that can receive private financing through Section 8 funding to rehabilitate properties. And it would remove outdated requirements and expand federal financing to make manufactured homes more affordable.

"Manufactured housing produces some of the most cost-effective housing in America, but access to financing has been tightly restricted," Warren said. "This creates the opportunity for more manufactured housing and, at the same time, creates a structure for people living in manufactured housing communities to organize and protect their investment in their homes."

Lawmakers compromised on a disaster program

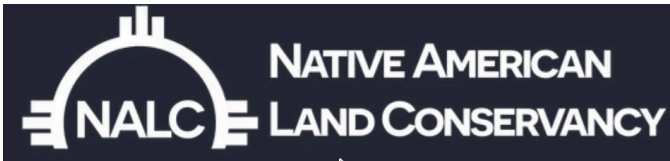

One of the sticking points between the two chambers was over a federal disaster recovery program.

An earlier Senate bill had permanently authorized block grant recovery funds, a change intended to ensure that funding requests aren't needed after every disaster. House lawmakers opposed that provision because of concerns over how the program was run, so they agreed on a three-year authorization instead.

The final bill has received widespread support in the housing community, both from organizations representing landlords and large property owners as well as groups that advocate for tenants and low-income renters.

"There is no magic wand that will fix this crisis overnight, and no single piece of legislation is perfect," said David Dworkin, chief executive of the National Housing Conference, the nation's oldest housing coalition.

"Compromise demands that. But this bill is a significant down payment on a long-term effort to make housing more affordable for all Americans."

Program Geared to Kids Offers Visits to Sacred Sites Throughout Region

BANNING (CNS) - Working alongside Coachella Valley tribes, a Banning-based nonprofit is bolstering efforts to raise awareness among youths about the historical importance and need for preservation of ancestral lands throughout the region.

The Native American Land Conservancy's "Native Youth Ambassador Program" focuses on turning adolescents into "ambassadors" with expertise on landscapes linked to area tribes for centuries.

"This program will provide young people around California with opportunities to explore ancient land and gain knowledge on its cultural significance, as well as on the necessary steps to support biodiversity, climate resilience and protect cultural connections," NALC Executive Director Robert Przeklasa said.

Among those active in the ambassador program are members of the Torres Martinez Desert Cahuilla Indian Tribe in Thermal.

In April, tribal volunteers, along with NALC staff, traveled with youth ambassadors to Bonanza Spring at the Mojave Trails National Monument in the southeastern Mojave Desert, near Amboy in southern San Bernardino County.

While hiking in the foothills within the 1,000-square-mile area, participants learned about the vital role free-flowing water plays in the lives of indigenous people and wildlife, and how some animal species, including desert bighorn sheep and kit foxes, are under threat from encroachments, according to NALC.

"Springs throughout this landscape are a life source, so protecting them is not optional; it's our responsibility," Torres Martinez Desert Cahuilla tribal member and youth ambassador Rachel Gallardo said. "Standing at Bonanza Spring, I reflected on how these free-flowing waters have sustained indigenous peoples ... for generations."

such as 5-10-5, according to package directions, beginning one month after planting.

Mints: There are many delicious choices. Favorites include peppermint, spearmint, chocolate mint, pineapple mint, lime mint and apple mint. All perennial mints (hardy in zones 3-9) grow and spread with abandon, so it's best to plant them in pots rather than directly into the garden (unless you are willing to allow them to take over an entire area).

Agastache foeniculum: Commonly called anise hyssop, this perennial is often used as an ornamental in flower beds in zones 3-8 or 9. The plant's highly aromatic leaves make a tasty licorice-flavored tea. Although related to mint, it retains a mostly mounded form and does not spread as aggressively as its cousins. Note:

groups are involved in the program, the educational aspects of which additionally stress advocacy, using the experiences of the Chemehuevi and Fort Mojave tribes as examples.

The two tribes have vigorously worked to prevent foreign investors and com-

For tea, be sure to plant the straight species (foeniculum); although other anise hyssops may be edible, their flavors vary.

Lemon balm: Another mint relative, this perennial is hardy in zones 4-8 and should also be contained to prevent aggressive spread. Its subtle lemon flavor is refreshing without being overpowering.

Lemon verbena: This perennial shrub, hardy in zones 8-11, grows best in partial shade and is a heavier feeder than many other herbs. Apply a liquid fertilizer every 2-3 weeks to boost its health and vigor. Hardy in zones 8-11, the plant's leaves impart a stronger, more intense lemon flavor than lemon balm.

When to harvest herbs and how to steep them

Harvest herbs in the morning, just after the dew has dried, when their essential oils are most concentrated. In my zone 7 garden, that's typically around 10 a.m.

Rinse them well and pat dry.

To use right away, heat water to just below boiling, then pour 8 ounces into a cup with 2-3 tablespoons of chopped, fresh herbs. Cover the cup and allow it to sit for 10-15 minutes. Strain, and add sweetener or combine with other herbs, as desired.

To dry herbs for future use, spread them on a screen or tie a bunch of stems together and hang the bouquet upside down. Place in a well-ventilated, dark, dry spot until they become crunchy.

Remove leaves or flowers from stems, then store in a tightly sealed glass jar in a cool, dark spot, like a kitchen cabinet, where they'll retain their flavor and fragrance for about 2 years.

Because the drying process concentrates their flavors, you'll need fewer herbs and less brewing time to make your tea, so start with 1 teaspoon and 5 minutes of steeping, adjusting according to your preference.

panies, such as Cadiz Inc., from implementing projects to procure and market water from the area's springs.

For the remainder of 2026 and beyond, the program will support field trips, meetings and other endeavors that strengthen youth leadership education and research, featuring travel in the California and Arizona deserts.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE TS No. CA-23-959422-CL Order No.: FIN-23003025 YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED 6/3/2017. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER. A public auction sale to the highest bidder for cash, or cash equivalent if deemed acceptable to the trustee, cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, check drawn by state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, or savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 to the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state, will be held by duly appointed trustee. The sale will be made, but without covenant or warranty, expressed or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note(s) secured by the Deed of Trust, with interest and late charges thereon, as provided in the note(s), advances, under the terms of the Deed of Trust, interest thereon, fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee for the total amount (at the time of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale) reasonably estimated to be set forth below. The amount may be greater on the day of sale. BENEFICIARY MAY ELECT TO BID LESS THAN THE TOTAL AMOUNT DUE. Trustor(s): Michael J Jaques, a married man as his sole and separate property and Irene Romero Duran, a married woman as her sole and separate property, all as joint tenants Recorded: 6/6/2017 as Instrument No. 2017-0225715 of Official Records in the office of the Recorder of RIVERSIDE County, California; Date of Sale: 7/8/2026 at 09:00 AM Place of Sale: In the courtyard of the Historic Corona Civic Center located at 815 W Sixth St, Corona, CA 92882 Amount of unpaid balance and other charges: $386,709.32 The purported property address is: 617 SHENANDOAH DRIVE, CORONA, CA 92879 Assessor's Parcel No. : 115-534-003 All bidders, at the date, time, and place of the scheduled sale, will be required to show satisfactory support to the auctioneer of their ability to pay the amount they intend to bid, unless arrangements have been made with the trustee prior to the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 800-280-2832 for information regarding the trustee's sale or visit this internet website <http://www.qualityloan.com>, using the file number assigned to this foreclosure by the Trustee: CA-23-959422-CL. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 866-645-7711, or visit this internet website <http://www.qualityloan.com>, using the file number assigned to this foreclosure by the Trustee: CA-23-959422-CL to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. NOTICE TO PROSPECTIVE OWNER/OCCUPANT: Any prospective owner/occupant as defined in Section 2924m of the California Civil Code who is the last and highest bidder at the trustee's sale shall provide the required affidavit or declaration of eligibility to the auctioneer at the trustee's sale or shall have it delivered to QUALITY LOAN SERVICE CORPORATION by 5 p.m. on the next business day following the trustee's sale at the address set forth in the below signature block. NOTICE TO PROSPECTIVE POSTSALE OVER BIDDERS: For postsale information in accordance with Section 2924m(e) of the California Civil Code, use file number CA-23-959422-CL and call (866) 645-7711 or login to: <http://www.qualityloan.com>. The above statutorily mandated notices to Tenant, Prospective Owner/Occupant, and Prospective PostSale Over Bidders are brief summaries of what may be required under Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. Compliance with all relevant provisions will be required. The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the property address or other common designation, if any, shown herein. If no street address or other common designation is shown, directions to the location of the property may be obtained by sending a written request to the beneficiary within 10 days of the date of first publication of this Notice of Sale. If the sale is set aside for any reason, including if the Trustee is unable to convey title, the Purchaser at the sale shall be entitled only to a return of the monies paid to the Trustee. This shall be the Purchaser's sole and exclusive remedy. The purchaser shall have no further recourse against the Trustor, the Trustee, the Beneficiary, the Beneficiary's Agent, or the Beneficiary's Attorney. If you have previously been discharged through bankruptcy, you may have been released of personal liability for this loan in which case this letter is intended to exercise the note holders right's against the real property only. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that JUDITH ANN BLUM be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.
Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (844) 901-0998 for information regarding the trustee's sale or visit this internet website - HTTPS://SALESINFORMATION.PRIMERECON.COM - for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case: TS#190789. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale.

NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (844) 901-0998 for information regarding the trustee's sale, or visit this internet website HTTPS://SALESINFORMATION.PRIMERERECON.COM for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case TS#190789 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. Effective March 1, 2026, new federal regulations (89 Fed. Reg. 70.258) require specified information to be reported on nonfinanced title transfers of residential real property to covered entities and trusts. In order to successfully bid on applicable properties, the successful bidder will be required to complete, sign, and certify a form providing specified information, including but not limited to the following: All Successful Bidders: Category Information Required Beneficial Owner(s) Full legal names of all individuals who exercise substantial control over the entity, date of birth, complete residential street address, citizenship, and unique identifying number (like tax ID no. or nonexpired passport no.) ONE TECH TIP: Watch out for Scams When Buying World Cup Tickets

By KELVIN CHAN AP Business Writer

Looking for a World Cup ticket? The buzz around the soccer tournament now under way across North America might inspire a last-minute search online, but fans should be wary of cyber scammers.

Experts and authorities warn that criminals will be deploying a range of tactics targeting soccer fans desperate to attend big-name matches at the event, which kicked off June 11. The World Cup runs until July 19, and the most important games are still to come.

With FIFA charging record ticket prices, some games are sold out, but plenty more have seats remaining.

Here are some pointers on how to avoid getting scammed:

Take your time to consider what you're being offered

If you see a Facebook post offering last-minute tickets to a popular game at a good price, take a beat before handing over your money. Ask yourself if the offer is too good to be true.

As with many other types of scams, World Cup fraudsters will try to capitalize on surging demand to pressure people into paying for non-existent tickets.

Watch out for classic pressure phrases such as "lots of interest" or "I need to sell right now," the Britain's Home Office warned fans last month as part of an ongoing fraud awareness campaign.

"Scammers often use urgency to push you into making hasty decisions," it said.

Be careful on social media because it's rife with scams

Social media sites are a cesspit of soccer scammers.

The U.S. Federal Trade Commission warned fans in a March consumer alert that fraudsters use social media posts to funnel people to scam websites, where they advertise fake tickets or sell the same seat to many people.

Or, according to the British government, scammers might advertise a spare ticket on social media, then move the discussion to an encrypted messaging app like WhatsApp and push the buyer to transfer money to a bank account before blocking the victim and disappearing.

Meta Platforms announced two weeks ahead of the event's kickoff that when Facebook users search for World Cup tickets, they will see pop-up notifications reminding them to buy tickets from verified sources and telling them how to report suspicious listings.

Experts say criminals are using artificial intelligence to create realistic messages, polished online storefronts and convincing fake endorsements and promotions.

"My advice: assume any World Cup deal that reached you through a social media ad or search result is suspect until proven otherwise," said Chris Olson, CEO of digital safety company The Media coming more sophisticated, more targeted, and more difficult to detect. We've seen it all, from data harvesting to fake ticket sales," Olson said

Watch out for copycat FIFA sites

To obtain World Cup tickets, fans should first go to the official FIFA website ticket for direct or second-hand sales. Resale tickets are also available on established third-party sites like StubHub and SeatGeek, though FIFA warns that buying outside official channels risks fake or invalid tickets, or inflated prices.

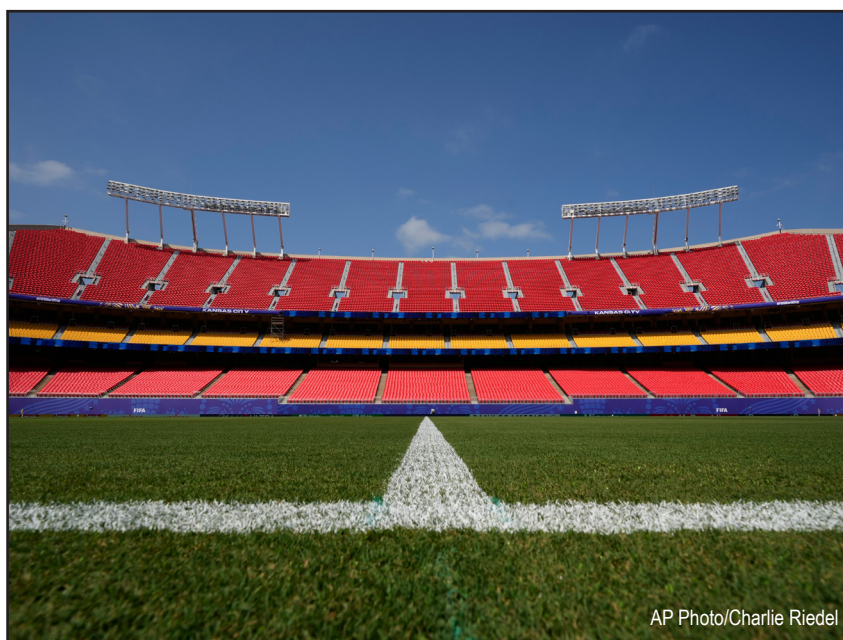

Another danger is copycat FIFA sites. The FBI warned in a public service announcement that scammers are creating spoof FIFA websites to trick people into providing personal details or sell fake tickets or hospitality packages.

The bureau listed three dozen spoof FIFA websites it's aware of with URLs that appear at first glance to be authentic, such as fifa-online.com and fifa-ticket.live.

Just 15 months after Eastvale Eleanor Roosevelt star Brayden Burries led his team to the California CIF Open Division boys high school basketball championship, he was the 10th overall selection by the Milwaukee Bucks in the NBA draft on Tuesday night. After starring as a freshman for the University of Arizona, Burries' selection was lauded by basketball writers nationwide. Congratulations, Brayden!
