Residents Invited to Weigh In on Regional Transportation Plan

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - The Southern California Association of Governments announced Monday the start of a monthlong public comment period on two regional transportation planning documents outlining nearly $48.5 billion in proposed transportation investments across six Southern California counties.

The public comment period runs through Aug. 4 for the draft 2027 Federal Transportation Improvement Program and Connect SoCal 2024 Draft Amendment 2, which together identify transportation projects and long-range planning priorities for Riverside, Los Angeles, Orange, Imperial, San Bernardino and Ventura counties, according to SCAG.

"Public input is an important part of this process," SCAG said in a statement. "Feedback from community members, stakeholders, and organizations ensure(s) that transportation investments reflect local needs and priorities and improve the quality of life across Southern California."

ICE DETENTION CENTER TO PAY $100K SETTLEMENT IN LANDMARK CALIFORNIA CASE

By JEANNE KUANG, CalMatters

The private immigration detention company GEO Group has settled a landmark case over conditions in one of its Central Valley detention facilities. It has agreed to pay more than $100,000 over allegations the company failed to keep detained advocates and detained immigrants at the Golden State Annex facility in McFarland, state workplace safety inspectors from Cal/OSHA opened a case at the center and cited the GEO Group with workplace violations, alleging the company failed to prevent the spread of immigrants safe when they worked inside the facility.

The settlement, signed in May and announced Tuesday, is a victory for immigrants' rights groups that have pushed California lawmakers to attempt to regulate conditions inside the federal government's privately-operated detention facilities. Eight such facilities now operate across the state and the number of detained immigrants has spiked during the second Trump presidency.

During the pandemic, lawmakers passed a measure allowing state inspectors into the facilities. In 2022, after receiving complaints from COVID-19 among detainees who work there, and ensure other safety measures.

Immigrant detainees work for $1 a day inside a Geo Group facility in the San Joaquin Valley. The company settled a state complaint over conditions inside.

It was the first known time the state has treated immigrant detainees as workers and their detention facility operators as employers subject to state labor laws.

Immigrants held in ICE custody are detained on civil violations, not imprisoned for crimes. But in detention, where they can participate in a "voluntary work program" cleaning the facility, preparing food or cutting other detainees' hair, they are only paid $1 a day. Detainees often participate in order to afford food at the centers' commissaries or calls to their families.

Police: Man Accused of Sexually Abusing Kids Possibly Targeted Others

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - A Corona man charged with sexually abusing five girls a quarter century ago may have targeted others, prompting police Tuesday to ask anyone with information to come forward.

Christopher James Ray, 61, was arrested in February following an investigation by the Riverside Police Department's Sexual Assault-Child Abuse Unit. Ray is charged with four counts of lewd acts on a child under 14 years old and sentence-enhancing allegations of targeting multiple minors in sex crimes.

He's being held in lieu of $1 million bail at the Byrd Detention Center and is slated for a preliminary hearing on Sept. 9 at the Riverside Hall of Justice.

According to police Detective

Steve Espinosa, the SACA investigation was initiated last September when one of the victims, whose identity was not disclosed, detailed several alleged encounters with Ray in which she was molested.

No specific information was disclosed in the police statement.

After the first individual provided her statement, four others were identified as alleged victims. They also weren't publicly identified.

"The incidents of sexual abuse occurred approximately 25 years ago when the victims were children, residing in the Casa Blanca neighborhood," Espinosa said.

All of the alleged victims are now adults.

Ray was taken into custody without incident on Feb. 10 at his residence on Waverly Street. He has a documented prior felony conviction that wasn't listed in court records.

"Detectives believe there may be additional victims, or individuals with information related to this investigation," Espinosa said.

Anyone who might know something about the case was asked to contact SACA Detective Jennifer Cappelen at 951-353-7950, or jcappelen@riversideca.gov.

You Can Ignore AI Giants Like SpaceX, but Your 401(K) Won't

By STAN CHOE AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — While you might want to ignore all the hubbub around SpaceX, Elon Musk and IPOs, your 401(k) likely can't.

SpaceX is now worth more than $2.1 trillion following its ballyhooed debut on Wall Street last month. Whether or not you believe it deserves to be worth roughly the same as Walmart, Exxon Mobil, Bank of America and IBM combined, the collective market does. And because it's that big, SpaceX is about to join a high-profile index on Tuesday, the Nasdaq 100.

Many stock indexes don't care about how realistic a company's growth plans are or who its CEO is. They're simply trying to show how slices of the market, or the whole thing, are performing.

That matters for investors and their 401(k) accounts because they're depending more than ever on funds that simply mimic these indexes. It's a lower-cost way to invest, allowing savers to keep more of their investments. Partly because of that, such index funds have usually proven to be better performers than funds that try to pick and choose individual stocks.

Just one in five actively managed U.S. stock funds survived and beat their average index peer over the last decade, at 21%, according to Morningstar's data through 2025. Such disparities in performance meant investors had more money invested in U.S. index funds than actively managed ones beginning in 2024, and the gap has only grown since then.

Here's a look at what's going on:

Indexes measure the market. Indexes are things the investment industry has created to answer the question: What is the market doing? It's otherwise tough to answer quickly when the U.S. market has thousands of stocks moving in different directions at any moment.

The S&P 500 is perhaps the most famous and influential index. It tracks 500 of the biggest U.S. stocks, and trillions of dollars in investments are either directly mimicking it or at least benchmarking themselves against it.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average is well known because it's been around since the 19th century, but it tracks only 30 big stocks so Wall Street pays it little attention.

Companies want to be in indexes

Because index funds are the way so many investors put money into the stock market, companies want to be part of indexes. Stocks can see a big jump in their prices after S&P Dow Jones Indices, Nasdaq, FTSE Russell or other companies announce they'll be joining their indexes.

The investment industry has created funds, including both traditional mutual funds and exchange-traded funds, to track almost every kind of index. More than 1,000 index funds were available at the end of last year, according to the Investment Company Institute. Of them, 185 tracked the S&P 500.

SpaceX is joining indexes

Nasdaq changed its rules to allow some huge companies to join its Nasdaq 100 index after just 15 trading days. That's a break from the past, where it would wait until each December to add new members in an annual reconstitution to make sure it includes the 100 largest non-financial companies on the Nasdaq.

SpaceX will join the Nasdaq 100 before trading begins

Tuesday.

Some popular funds track the Nasdaq 100 index, including the QQQ exchange-traded fund from Invesco that has roughly $480 billion in total investments. That means QQQ holders will soon own shares of SpaceX, without doing anything on their own.

Other AI giants could as

The company behind the S&P 500 is not making changes to allow SpaceX and other "mega" IPOs faster entry into the index. For it, a stock needs to trade on an eligible exchange for at least 12 months before it can join the index.

Not only that, S&P Dow Jones Indices also requires companies to have made funds.

If Musk is able to control so much of the voting power on the board of directors, it would make him tremendously powerful atop SpaceX, "essentially making him unfireable without his own consent," the CEO of California Public Employees' Retirement System, the New York state

well

Anthropic and OpenAI are two other huge AI-related companies looking to sell their own stocks soon on a U.S. exchange for the first time. Their IPOs could potentially make each worth close to $1 trillion.

It used to be that companies would have an IPO long before they got that big. But SpaceX, Anthropic and OpenAI swelled to tremendous sizes thanks to dollars from private investors, including pension funds, companies and rich investors, away from the public market.

That's forcing the reconsideration for the investment industry about how quickly to add companies to indexes that they say track the biggest companies.

Not every index is making changes to fast-track big IPOs a profit in its most recent quarter and over the sum of its last four quarters.

SpaceX lost $4.9 billion last year and another $4.3 billion through the first three months of 2026. It acknowledges that it "may not achieve profitability in the future." Over the long term, a stock's price tends to track with how much profit the company is making.

Not everyone is happy about SpaceX's IPO entry to indexes

Officials from pension funds for firefighters, teachers and other workers in California and New York sent a letter to SpaceX before its IPO decrying its corporate governance, including how much power Musk will hold over the company through his ownership of a special class of stock with more voting power.

They said they could become owners of SpaceX stock because they hold index comptroller and the New York City comptroller wrote in their letter.

If an investor doesn't like certain companies in the index, choices are limited

Index funds track indexes. And if a stock is in an index, the index fund will buy it, even if investors may not like it.

Tesla has remained in the S&P 500 even though critics called it overvalued for years, for example, and Musk's electric-vehicle company has grown to become one of Wall Street's 10 biggest companies.

Some indexes say they will not include companies that have poor corporate governance standards or other narrowed criteria, but investors need to look for them.

The S&P 500 ESG index famously kicked Tesla out in 2022, for example.

Sentencing Delayed for Ex-Teacher Who Engaged in Sex Acts with Student

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - At the request of her attorney, sentencing was postponed last Thursday for a 34-year-old former Eastvale high school teacher who engaged in sex acts with a boy in one of her classes.

In March, Amanda Leigh Quinonez pleaded guilty to two counts each of sexual penetration with a foreign object and providing sexually explicit material to a minor, as well as one count each of lewd acts on a child under 15 years old, oral copulation of a child and annoying a minor. The admissions were made under a pretrial agreement with the Riverside County District Attorney's Office.

During her scheduled sentencing hearing last Thursday at the Riverside Hall of Justice, Quinonez's lawyer requested a two-month delay in proceedings. The reasons weren't specified in court minutes. Superior Court Judge Joshlyn Pulliam granted the request, resetting the sentencing to Aug. 31.

Quinonez is free on a $50,000 bond.

According to sheriff's

Riverside County Sheriff Department

investigators, the defendant, formerly a language arts teacher and water polo coach at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, began communicating with the victim, whose identity was not disclosed, in the fall of 2020, leading to multiple encounters.

Quinonez sent the youth nude photos, leading to intimate meetings, according to investigators. The locations of the meetings were not provided.

Sheriff's detectives were alerted to the acts by unnamed witnesses. Sufficient evidence was gathered to justify an arrest warrant, and Quinonez was taken into custody without incident in April 2022. She posted bail almost immediately.

At the time, Eleanor Roosevelt High Principal Greg Anderson publicly acknowledged there had been an "inappropriate relationship." In a letter sent to parents and guardians, he affirmed the Corona-Norco Unified School District had "zero tolerance for any behavior that endangers our students."

Quinonez was placed on unpaid administrative leave initially, then later dismissed.

She had been a teacher at Roosevelt High since 2016.

Health Officials Report Measles Exposure at LAX Shuttle

LOS ANGELES - Los Angeles County public health officials announced Wednesday that a traveler with measles may have exposed people to the virus at LAX and aboard a rental car shuttle after arriving in Southern California last week.

The traveler arrived aboard British Airways Flight 281 at LAX's Tom Bradley International Terminal on July 3 and was infectious while traveling in Los Angeles County, according to the Department of Public Health.

Officials said people who were at Gate 155 in Terminal B between 3 p.m. and 4 p.m. July 3 may have been exposed to measles.

Possible exposures also occurred aboard a Hertz rental car shuttle departing LAX between 3:30 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. that same day, according to the department.

In coordination with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, local health departments will notify passengers who were seated near the infected traveler on the international flight.

People who were at the airport gate or on the shuttle during the exposure periods could develop symptoms between seven and 21 days after exposure and should monitor themselves through July 24, health officials said.

A separate potential exposure occurred at a

Volcano Fire West of Murrieta Now 60% Contained

MURRIETA (CNS) - A brush fire that erupted in the hills west of Murrieta was 60% contained Wednesday, holding at 138 acres.

The blaze was reported at 2:50 p.m. Tuesday in the area of Via Volcano and Tenaja roads, in the unincorporated community of La Cresta, along the boundary of the Santa Rosa Plateau Ecological Preserve, according to the Riverside County Fire Department.

The agency said multiple engine and hand crews from the county, Murrieta Fire & Rescue, Riverside Fire Department, Corona Fire Department, Cal Fire-San Diego County and other departments were sent to the location and encountered flames moving at a moderate rate through medium to heavy brush.

At the height of the brusher, four Cal Fire air tankers and two water-dropping helicopters were making runs on it. However, by nightfall Tuesday, all of the fixed wing aircraft had cleared the location. They did not return Wednesday morning, but several choppers made targeted drops until early Wednesday afternoon, when they, too, were no longer needed.

One evacuation order and one warning remained in place Wednesday afternoon, covering scattered properties along Tenaja, between Avenida Caleta to the west and Clinton Keith Road to the east.

No residential properties were damaged.

Two firefighters fell ill from heat exhaustion and dehydration Wednesday morning. They were taken to Inland Valley Medical Center in Wildomar in stable condition.

An evacuation and reception center was established at Chaparral High School, 27215 Nicolas Road in Temecula. Any evacuees with large animals were encouraged to leave them with county personnel at the Murrieta Equestrian Center, 42646 Juniper St.

Sheriff's deputies shut down Tenaja west of Via Volcano for public safety.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

healthcare facility in Los Angeles County, and patients and staff who may have been affected are being notified directly by the facility, according to health officials.

This is the seventh confirmed measles case reported in Los Angeles County this year.

Health officials said people who previously had measles or received the recommended measles-mumps-rubella vaccine are likely protected, although they should continue to monitor for symptoms following exposure.

"As measles cases increase, it is important that residents take steps to make sure they are fully protected,"

Los Angeles County Health Officer Dr. Muntu Davis said in a statement. "The MMR vaccine is the safest and most reliable way to prevent measles and protect yourself, your family and your community."

Symptoms of measles include fever, cough, runny nose, red eyes and a rash that typically begins on the face before spreading to the rest of the body.

According to county health officials, more than 2,170 measles cases had been reported nationwide as of July 2, with most cases involving people who were unvaccinated or whose vaccination status was unknown.

Restoration Work on Former White House Helicopter Starts at March Field

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - A project to completely restore the Sikorsky VH-3A helicopter that served as a means of short-range air transport for President Richard Nixon was underway Tuesday at the March Field Air Museum.

The Sea King chopper was relocated to the museum last week by truck, removed from its customary station at the east end of the parking lot for the Richard Nixon Library & Museum in Yorba Linda and placed in a secure hangar at March Field in south Riverside.

The one-time U.S. Army and Marine rotorcraft will undergo a "complete restoration before returning as the centerpiece of a new education center," the Library said in an online statement.

The education center will be an addition to the museum, featuring an "interactive, immersive" experience for visitors, according to the Library.

The Sikorsky was active not only during Nixon's nearly eight years on Pennsylvania Avenue, but also during the two administrations that preceded his - - those of Lyndon Johnson and John F. Kennedy -- operating from 1961 to 1976 as a kind of "flying Oval Office," officials said.

"President Nixon flew aboard this helicopter on 181 missions, including to the Giza Pyramids in Egypt and into Vatican Square, where it was blessed by Pope Paul VI," according to the Library. "This helicopter flew under the call sign 'Marine One' when operated by the Marine Corps, and 'Army One' when operated by the Army."

The helicopter, which could be transported internationally aboard cargo aircraft whenever required by the White House, was removed from presidential service the year Nixon resigned, thereafter placed at the disposal of the Secret Service for training purposes.

After the VH-3A was deactivated, it went to the National Museum of the Marine Corps at Quantico, Virginia, but ultimately was placed on long-term loan to the Nixon Library by the National Archives & Records Administration. It has been a fixture on the museum grounds for two decades.

The March Field Air Museum said the helicopter's restoration will be a "multi-year" effort, but provided no further details on the extent of work planned. The projected cost also was not disclosed.

The chopper arrived on the afternoon of June 29.

It will not be among the dozens of static aviation assets on display while it is being restored.

Ice Settlement

As part of the settlement between GEO Group and Cal/OSHA, the company has agreed to improve its disease control plans for detainees and stopped fighting a ruling by state regulators last year that said the company was subject to state labor laws. GEO Group did not respond to a request for comment.

"Individuals who perform work in these facilities are entitled to workplace safety protections, and this settlement reinforces Cal/OSHA's commitment to enforcing those protections and safeguarding vulnerable workers," agency spokesperson Denisse Gomez wrote in a statement.

Detention facility operators and federal immigration officials have continued to clash with state and local regulators over conditions. Last month, a federal judge sided with San Diego County health officials and ordered the Department of Homeland Security and its contractor CoreCivic to allow a county inspector into the 1,400-bed Otay Mesa Detention Center near the Mexico border. That company last week sold the facility and another one in Kern County to the federal government, CalMatters reported.

And amid several federal lawsuits challenging the practice of paying just $1 a day for detainee work, GEO Group succeeded last month in getting ICE to update its standards for detention contractors, the Washington Post reported. The new standards state detainees "are not entitled to wages or benefits under applicable wage laws or labor regulations."

A CHILD CAN DROWN IN SECONDS.

DOCTORS WANT MORE FAMILIES TO BE PREPARED

By MIKE STOBBE AP Medical Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Doctors and others are sounding an alarm: More U.S. children have been drowning in recent years.

“When drowning occurs, seconds matter,” said Dr. Rohit Sheno, the lead author of a recent American Academy of Pediatrics warning. “Quick rescue and resuscitation can mean the difference between life, death and lifelong disability.”

About 4,000 to 5,000 Americans drown each year. Most are adults who die in natural bodies of water, such as lakes, ponds or oceans.

But statistically speaking, drowning is a much larger danger to children. It's the No. 1 cause of death for kids ages 1 to 4, and one of the top killers of children ages 5 to 14. The drowning rate is higher for white kids in the younger group, but much higher for Black, American Indian and Alaska Native children in the older group.

Drownings of very young children sometimes occur in bathtubs. But most, like Stewie Leonard's, occur in swimming pools.

A family tragedy leads to a foundation for water safety. The Stew Leonard's grocery chain offers a Disney-like shopping experience, featuring food-promoting animatronic characters like a dancing banana, a mooing cow and singing avocados. But several of its stores also have an animatronic creature that seems out of place: a life-jacketed duck named Stewie who sings about how not to drown.

The duck is named for the son of Stew Leonard, the grocery chain's chief executive. The boy was 21 months old when he drowned during a family vacation on the island of St. Martin in 1989.

More than a dozen adults and kids had gathered at a birthday party for Stewie's older sister, who was turning 3. Stew Leonard was outside hanging balloons and his wife was inside baking a cake.

“I saw Stewie outside and I assumed that he (Leonard) was watching him,” said his wife, Kim, noting that other relatives also were in the area of the pool.

“We never communicated with each other; ‘You’ve got him?’” said Kim Leonard, now 65. “When everyone's watching, nobody's watching.”

“There were a couple of balloons floating in the water,” Leonard, 71, recalled. “And you know after a few minutes, sort of everybody was like, ‘Where's Stewie?’ Unfortunately I was the one who found him. He was face down in the pool.”

His death led the couple to start a foundation that pays for children's swimming lessons and promotes drowning prevention.

Why are more kids drowning?

Unintentional child drowning deaths in the U.S. fell from around 2,000 a year in the 1980s to below 1,000 a year by the early 2000s, thanks in part to public awareness campaigns, expanded access to swimming lessons, and adoption of pool fencing laws. Between 2000 and 2019, health officials saw a 38% drop.

But then the trend reversed, with the number of child drowning deaths rising from 756 in 2019 to 865 in 2024, the most recent year for which complete data is available. The bulk of them were children younger than

5. The child drowning death rate also increased slightly, from 1.1 to 1.2 per 100,000 children.

What happened?

The COVID-19 pandemic interrupted swimming lessons and lifeguard training programs, and contributed to a national lifeguard shortage. Meanwhile, some data suggests an increase in swimming pool construction and increases in unsupervised swimming, said Tessa Clemens, the CDC Foundation's senior director for drowning prevention initiatives.

Inventors have recognized a need for child water safety measures, and recent years have seen the emergence of immersion alarms that sound if the wristband a child is wearing goes underwater. But manufacturers of such devices note they can serve as an extra warning system, but should not be considered a primary way to keep children safe.

The federal government's top public health agency, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, laid off Clemens and the rest of the staff of its drowning prevention program make a difference, including lifeguard standards, life jacket regulations and requirements that swimming pools be completely surrounded by fences with self-closing, self-latching gates.

Stew Leonard emphasizes two other approaches — swimming lessons for young kids and complete focus by caregivers when young children are around water.

“I mean, I love ballet. I love karate. I love tennis lessons. You know, all the activities that kids can do,” he said.

Kym Roberts studies drownings in Australia — where child drownings have been either level or decreasing in recent years. She said “drowning in young children is often associated with falls into water and lapses in direct supervision.”

Some possible good news: Preliminary U.S. data for last year suggests child drownings declined. But it's not clear whether that's the start of a trend, and the deaths still remain higher compared to before the COVID-19 pandemic, Clemens said.

Pediatricians push for standards and regulations last year. But new guidance and drowning prevention support continues to come out of other organizations, including the CDC Foundation and the American Academy of Pediatrics.

A CDC Foundation program has paid for basic swimming and water safety skills training for over 35,000 students since 2024. The program operates in 11 states with higher drowning rates: Alaska, Arizona, California, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Oklahoma and Texas.

“But the only thing you can do to save their life is put them in swimming lessons.”

His foundation has funded over 250,000 swimming lessons for children and opened two swimming schools — one of them across the street from his company's headquarters in Norwalk, Connecticut.

Also, “shut your cellphones off when you're around the pool, watching the kids. Don't sit there reading a book. Don't sit there talking to your friends, neglecting your child that's near the water,” he said.

“This happens in the blink of an eye.”

BLISTERED TOMATO

By CONNOR FORBES

I am constantly on the lookout for the last thing that will really tie the meal together. Sometimes that is a sauce. And sometimes that is a condiment of sorts. Or maybe even some fresh herbs to set the meal alight. But it is the question that plagues me every time I plate a meal for my family. What is going to be that last something, something. And boy oh boy do I have a good answer for you today. Blistered tomatoes. Tart, sweet, salty, full of umami. I mean these hit you every which way with flavor. I used the to finish off pork chops that I served with steamed artichoke and pasta. It, plus the juices from the pork, set the whole meal off. Let's cook!

Ingredients

- 1-pint tomatoes
- 2 tbsp olive oil
- 1 tsp salt
- 1 tbsp rosemary

To Make

Heat a medium or large saucepan on high for 2 minutes. Reduce heat to medium-high heat and add the oil. Heat oil for 30 seconds and add the tomatoes. Salt the tomatoes. Cook undisturbed for 2-3 minutes. Flip tomatoes or mix. And cook undisturbed for another 2-3 minutes. Reduce heat to medium, add rosemary, and cover. Cook for another 5 minutes. And EAT!

You can use this on a steak, or make bruschetta, or eat it straight up. It is fantastic beyond words. ENJOY!

How to grill vegetables and toss them in Isaac Toups' bacon vinaigrette

By ISAAC TOUPS Voracious

Want to make your vegetables taste better and have your friends love you? Char the hell out of some on the grill and then toss them in a bacon vinaigrette, using this recipe from my cookbook "Chasing the Gator: Isaac Toups and the New Cajun Cooking."

These are vegetables so unhealthy a Cajun might actually eat them.

You can do this dish year-round with whatever is in season: eggplant and zucchini, radishes, green beans, radicchio or others. If the vegetable is sliceable, slice it. If it's broccoli or cauliflower, cut into quarter-size florets; if green beans, leave them whole.

GRILLED GARDEN VEGETABLES WITH BACON VINAIGRETTE

From the cookbook "Chasing the Gator," by Isaac Toups and Jennifer V. Cole

Servings: 4

Ingredients

- 8 slices thick-cut bacon
- 5 cloves garlic, peeled

3 anchovy filets

½ cup apple cider vinegar

½ cup canola oil

1 pound assorted vegetables, cut into ¼-inch slices

1 ½ teaspoons kosher salt

1 teaspoon ground black pepper

½ teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes

1 tablespoon extra virgin olive oil

Directions

Preheat the grill to high (about 500°F). Preheat the oven to 400°F.

Place the bacon slices on a rimmed baking sheet and cook in the oven for about 20 minutes, until the bacon is crispy. Remove the bacon and reserve the baking sheet with the rendered fat. Crumble the bacon and set aside.

In a blender, combine the garlic, anchovies, and vinegar and put the lid on. Turn the blender on and slowly drizzle in the canola oil. This is never going to be a fully emulsified vinaigrette, so don't fret if it looks like it's breaking. Add the reserved bacon fat (about 1 ½ tablespoons, but if you have more from cooking your bacon, just toss it all in) and keep the blender buzzing for 5 seconds to combine all the ingredients. Keep warm. I like to put it in a metal container, like a mixing bowl, and keep it by the grill while I cook the vegetables. The vinaigrette doesn't need to be hot, just not too cold because the bacon fat will congeal if you let it.

In a large bowl or on a rimmed baking sheet, toss the vegetables with the salt, pepper, pepper flakes and olive oil. Place the vegetables on the hot grill in a single layer and cook on each side for about 2 minutes. They should char on the outside while keeping the crunch or snap of fresh crudité. They should be really crispy and charred, not all wimpy and overcooked; high heat is key here. Remove the vegetables from the grill and put in a nonreactive bowl.

Toss the grilled vegetables in the bacon vinaigrette. Top with the crumbled bacon. Serve.

“Minions & Monsters”

By BOB GARVER

“Minions & Monsters” is the seventh cinematic outing for the Minions, and the third where they take center stage, as opposed to playing backup for former supervillain Gru. The jellybean-like animated gibberish-spewers all voiced by Pierre Coffin are once again taking the prequel route, as their story is told by a modern-day movie studio tour guide (Allison Janney), though a further framing device modifies even that context.

At the beginning of the story, the Minions are once again searching the world for a new home in their inexplicable quest to serve the most despicable master possible despite not having an evil bone (or possibly any bones) in their bodies. A hulking cyclops seems like a good candidate (let's see if this movie and “The Odyssey” in two weeks lead to a rise of cyclopes in pop culture), but a creative, ambitious Minion named James screws everything up for everyone. He also screws things up with a mummy, a pirate, and a wizard with a book of spells. Most of the Minions despise James's antics, but friends Henry and Ed think he's funny and stick by him.

Washing up on American shores sometime in the 1920's, the Minions see an outlaw train robber and think he'll make a great master. They destroy half a town just to track him down to offer their services, then they find out that he's no outlaw at all. He's an actor, the town is Hollywood, the train robbery was part of a movie from short-tempered director Max (Christoph Waltz), and the Minions ruined the take. Having used the last of his film, Max is forced to present the picture, Minions and all, to a pair of finicky studio executives (both voiced by Jeff Bridges). Surprisingly, the execs love the Minions and order them to be put into more films. The whole tribe becomes movie stars overnight.

To be clear, I love this portion of the film. The obvious love of – and constant references to – the golden age of Hollywood should earn admiration from any red-blooded cinema lover. I'm just not crazy about the parts that come before the Hollywood invasion and after the Minions fall from grace because they have a hard time transitioning to talkies (an appearance in “Citizen Kane” had me cracking up).

Eventually, the Minions again need to find a new master. Most of them settle on metallic space alien Dort (Jesse Eisenberg), who is either planning to invade Earth along with his home planet, or is just another actor in a clunky suit. The Minions help Dort in a cute romance with suffragette Debbie (Zoey Deutch), who is willing to spend time with him as long as he doesn't kick children (it's sweeter than it sounds)

Meanwhile, James and his cohorts, trying to stay in the movie business by turning to directing, crack open their old wizard master's spellbook to summon a monster for their sci-fi movie. They can only manage the puny Goomi (Trey Parker), but he can summon other monsters, including insatiable blob Irene, who tries to consume Hollywood. Can the Minions clean up the mess they created? Can James complete his movie and win an Oscar? Can this franchise finally give us an installment where the Minions and/or Gru's family go up against Will Arnett's evil banker from the first “Despicable Me”? It's been 16 years and it really bugs me that they've never seriously revisited that character.

The movie, as always, depends on your tolerance for the Minions' lowbrow schtick. Here they're most effective when the movie is actively celebrating the art of schtick. But that's just part of the movie, and the rest of the time I feel that they miss more gags than they hit. Plus the last act drags as it tries to work in too many sci-fi elements.

“Minions & Monsters” comes close to getting my recommendation, but it falls short by a margin thinner than a 1920's mustache.

Grade: C

“Minions & Monsters” is rated PG for violence/action, language and rude/macabre humor. Its running time is 90 minutes.

Portable Tic-Tac-Toe for All Your In-Between Travel Moments

By MIA ROTELL

Road trips are so fun, but getting bored in the car or in the hotel room before the “big stop” isn’t — especially when you have little travelers who will make it known to the world that they aren’t entertained.

That’s where a traveling tic-tac-toe board comes in handy! It’s user-friendly and can be stored just about anywhere.

What you need:

- Nine small rocks or pebbles
- Half a yard of burlap
- White

and colored paint

- Paintbrushes
- A cup of water
- Paper towels
- Scissors
- Jute rope or ribbon
- A ruler or measuring tape

How to make it:

Step 1: Lay out the small pebbles and gather your paint supplies: paint, a cup of water, paper towels to dry the brushes between colors, and paintbrushes.

Step 2: Paint the tops of the pebbles with two coats of white paint.

Step 3: Once the second coat of white paint is dry, paint a cute design on four of the pebbles and a different design on the other five. You can do blueberries and strawberries, umbrellas and beach balls or, as pictured above, bees and ladybugs.

Step 4: When you’re done painting the pebbles, set them aside to dry completely.

Step 5: Measure and cut a 7-inch by 7-inch square from the burlap.

Step 6: Paint a tic-tac-toe board onto the burlap. Feel free to get creative! Just make sure to paint the lines white first, then go over them with any color or design you’d like.

Step 7: Set the burlap aside to dry.

Step 8: Once it’s dry, cut slits about half an inch apart and about an inch from the edge of the burlap on all four sides. Make sure the slits are large enough to pull the ribbon or jute rope through. Be careful — if a slit is too close to the edge, the burlap may unravel.

Step 9: Thread the ribbon or jute rope through one hole, then weave it through the next hole on the opposite side.

Step 10: Continue weaving until you reach the first hole where you started.

Step 11: Place the pebbles in the center of the square, then pull the ribbon or jute rope tight. You’ll have a little drawstring bag and a travel game all in one!

Tip: Don’t forget to cut holes in the corners of the bag, or you’ll have gaps when you pull the ribbon or jute rope to close the bag! For the playing pieces, you can use pebbles you find outside or purchase large vase filler or aquarium rocks from a craft or pet store!

How the White House Rose Garden and Its Plantings Have Changed Over the Past Century

By JESSICA DAMIANO
Associated Press

President Donald Trump’s two makeovers of the White House Rose Garden, including converting its lawn into a patio, have drawn recent attention to one of the nation’s most iconic gardens.

The garden has seen many changes over the years; presidents and first ladies have planted, removed, redesigned and even fully revamped it. Here’s a look at how the Rose Garden and its plantings have evolved.

Ellen Wilson and then Jackie

Kennedy make changes

The Rose Garden was established by President Woodrow Wilson’s wife, Ellen Wilson, who worked closely with landscape architect George Burnap, in 1913. It replaced Edith Roosevelt’s Colonial Garden, planted 11 years earlier. Before that, greenhouses occupied the space.

The original Rose Garden remained close to its roots for nearly half a century until 1961, when President John F. Kennedy and first lady Jacqueline Kennedy brought in their friend and Cape Cod, Massachusetts, neighbor, Rachel “Bunny” Mellon, to oversee a redesign.

Mellon, a horticulture expert, worked closely with landscape architect Perry Wheeler and White House Head Gardener Irwin Williams on plans for the new Rose Garden, aiming to create an outdoor room where press conferences, meetings with dignitaries and ceremonies could be held. It was installed the following year.

The space included an expansive central lawn, inspired by the croquet-match passage in Lewis Carroll’s “Alice in Wonderland,” with magnolia trees planted at each corner. Roses, interplanted with culinary herbs, spring-blooming bulbs, seasonal annuals and young Katherine crabapple trees, flanked the lawn in 12-foot-deep borders.

Since then, the space has hosted many historic events and has become known as a place where presidents deliver important speeches to the American people.

The garden evolves with new plants

Mellon’s style favored classic, muted tones, reflected in the roses she selected. But the crabapples turned out to be a misstep. As they matured, they became so large that they shaded the sun-loving roses they were intended to complement.

In 2003, some of those trees were removed to allow sunlight to reach the failing roses. Over the years, various perennials were added and replaced. Dying roses were removed, and the remaining trees continued to grow.

Boxwood shrubs bordering the beds became threatened by boxwood blight disease, and the lawn developed drainage issues that prompted frequent replacements.

The remaining trees’ roots had grown so large that it became difficult to plant annuals in the borders without disturbing them. In addition, as walkway repairs became necessary, portions had been replaced, piecemeal, with various slabs.

A 2020 restoration brings new roses and various upgrades

Then in 2020, first lady Melania Trump commissioned two architectural firms, Perry Guillot, Inc., of Southampton, New York, and Oehme van Sweden & Associates of Washington, D.C., to work with the Committee for the Preservation of the White House and the National Park Service to address those concerns and return the garden to its 1962 aesthetic.

They removed and relocated the remaining crabapple trees, and replaced the dwindling plantings with pastel-colored roses, including the white, tall shrubby “White House Rose,” the cream-colored “JFK Rose,” the white hybrid tea rose “Pope John Paul II,” and the “Peace Rose,” a smaller tea rose with a pale yellow center and light pink edges.

The team also upgraded the garden’s infrastructure, adding electricity for TV appearances and uniform, 36-inch-wide limestone walkways to accommodate wheelchair access and comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

The shrubs were replaced with blight-resistant New-Gen boxwoods.

Pavers replace the grass

In 2025, President Trump revamped the space again, this time replacing the central lawn with a white limestone patio. He added solar-powered lighting, tables and umbrellas, and bronze statues of George Washington, Benjamin Franklin and Alexander Hamilton.

He has hosted dinners on the patio, and has called the space the Rose Garden Club.

And on the perimeter, the roses continue to bloom.

ANY INFORMATION OBTAINED MAY BE USED FOR THAT PURPOSE. FOR TRUSTEE’S SALE INFORMATION PLEASE CALL: (844) 901-0998 OR VIEW OUR WEBSITE: HTTPS://SALESINFORMATION.PRIMERECOM.COM NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (844) 901-0998 for information regarding the trustee’s sale or visit this internet website - HTTPS://SALESINFORMATION.PRIMERECOM.COM - for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case: TS#190789. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an “eligible tenant buyer,” you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an “eligible bidder,” you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (844) 901-0998 for information regarding the trustee’s sale, or visit this internet website HTTPS://SALESINFORMATION.PRIMERECOM.COM for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case TS#190789 to find the date on which the trustee’s sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee’s sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee’s sale. If you think you may qualify as an “eligible tenant buyer” or “eligible bidder,” you should consider contacting an attorney

or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. Effective March 1, 2026, new federal regulations (89 Fed. Reg. 70.258) require specified information to be reported on nonfinanced title transfers of residential real property to covered entities and trusts. The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A hearing on the petition will be held in this court on July 24, 2026 at 8:30 a.m. in Dept. 11 located at 4050 Main Street, Riverside, CA 92501, Downtown.
If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
You may examine the file kept by the court. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. IMPORTANT NOTICE: Starting March 1, 2026, Federal Law may prohibit ZBS Law from issuing a Trustee's Deed Upon Sale in connection with this trustee's sale until information about the winning bidder is reported to the U.S. Treasury's Financial Crimes Enforcement Network. See, 31 CFR § 1031.320 (https://www.ecfr.gov/current/title-31/subtitleB/chapterX/part-1031/subpartC/section-1031.320). If this trustee's sale qualifies as a "reportable transfer" under 31 CFR § 1031.320(b), and you, as buyer, qualify as a "transferee entity" under 31 CFR § 1031.320(e)(1) or "transferee trust" under 31 CFR § 1031.320(e)(2), you will be obligated to provide information about the Beneficial Owner(s) of the transferee to ZBS Law or ZBS Law's designated representative. If you qualify as an exempt entity or trust under 31 CFR § 1031.320(n)(10)-(11), you may be required to provide evidence of the exemption supported by a declaration under penalty of perjury. If the Trustee's Deed Upon Sale cannot be issued due to a qualified transferee's failure or inability to provide the necessary reporting information, the qualified transferee will be responsible for all fees and costs to renotify the trustee's sale. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on this property.

Please be advised that the trustee may require entity or trust bidders at this trustee's sale to provide information, documentation and/or certification of the vesting instructions and the data required to be reported pursuant to FinCEN regulations effective for transfers of residential real property to covered transferees on or after March 1, 2026. The required information must be provided to the trustee before a trustee's deed upon sale will be issued for covered transfers. Additional information regarding these regulations and the required transferee information and certifications can be found at <https://www.federalregister.gov/documents/2024/08/29/2024-19198/anti-moneylaunderingregulationsforresidentialreal-estatetransfers> and https://www.fincen.gov/rfaqs#d_5

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (866)-960-8299 or visit this Internet Web site <https://www.altisource.com/loginpage.aspx> using the file number assigned to this case 2026-00071-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction, if conducted after January 1, 2021, pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (866)-960-8299, or visit this internet website <https://www.altisource.com/loginpage.aspx>, using the file number assigned to this case 2026-00071-CA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid, by remitting the funds and affidavit described in Section 2924m(c) of the Civil Code, so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase.

Why Losing Weight Isn't Just About Counting Calories — AND WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT

By J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

BOSTON (AP) — When it comes to losing weight, it turns out the simple math of counting calories doesn't always add up.

Fad diets come and go, but the underlying message almost always follows a simple equation. If you consume fewer calories than you burn, the weight will melt away.

In principle, it's true. And counting calories can be a useful tool for managing weight. But it only works if you know what numbers you're counting. And what's been billed as basic math can sometimes look more like Einstein's theory of relativity.

That's because a complex web of factors influences how or even if our bodies process calories. And it turns out diet quality is just as important as quantity, and possibly more.

"Different foods have very different effects on the brain, liver, fat cells, muscle function, pancreas and all organs related to metabolism and body weight," said Dr. Dariush Mozaffarian, a cardiologist and director of the Food is Medicine Institute at Tufts University.

Counting calories could burn you

A calorie is the unit of energy used to count what the body can get from carbohydrates, proteins and fats. That sounds simple, but the complexity of counting calories went mainstream recently, when a lawsuit accused the maker of David protein bars of affixing labels that misrepresent how many calories and how much fat the products contain. The lawsuit has since been dropped.

The allegations were based on an analysis of the bars using bomb calorimetry, which measures calories by burning food and calculating the amount of heat released, a method that counts every potential calorie. But our bodies aren't combustion chambers and don't treat all calories the same. The company's numbers, like many food labels, are based only on the calories our bodies can actually use. Technically, both are correct, but only the latter matters for diet.

"You could put sawdust into a bomb calorimeter and you would get basically 4 calories per gram," said Dr. David Ludwig, an endocrinologist and researcher at Boston Children's Hospital. "If you're a termite, yes, you'll get calories from it. But humans won't."

The calorie counts on most nutrition labels reflect the total our bodies are likely to metabolize, not their burn rate. But they still can be misleading. Because of permitted rounding, the tallies can be off by as much as 20%. Additionally, the digestibility of an ingredient, whether and how it is cooked, to what extent it was processed, variations in processing, even quirks in our own DNA — all of these things influence whether and how our bodies use the calories we eat. Even that is just the start of the complications.

Calories are simple. How your body uses them is not

Our bodies determine how to process calories — either burning them or storing them — depending in part on our energy needs. But the quality of the calories matters, too. High-glycemic foods, such as white breads, pastas and sugars, are easily converted to usable energy and trigger our bodies to store calories, Ludwig said.

Foods containing resistant starches, including some beans, whole grains and seeds, resist easy conversion into usable energy and don't trigger that same storage response. They also are more difficult to process, so we absorb fewer of the total calories contained in them.

"Having a snack of 8 ounces of sugary beverage, 100 calories, should be better for your weight than 1 ounce of nuts at 200 calories, right?" Ludwig said. "That's the opposite of what actually happens because those 100 calories, even if they're fewer at that moment, they shift your body toward storing fat and leave you hungrier sooner."

Which of course triggers you to eat more, well, calories.

Even cooking and ripeness influence the equation. The calories in cooked foods are more easily absorbed than from raw ingredients, sorbed substantially less well than the calories in almond butter," Ludwig said. "Just processing the almonds into almond butter causes a change in how much they will be absorbed."

Ultra-processed foods introduce another challenge. Diets high in such foods have been found to decrease the number of calories we burn at rest, Mozaffarian said. That means a higher proportion of those calories will stick to your ribs.

Then there's just plain old variation between people. Genetics lead our bodies to treat calories differently, said Dr. Fatima Cody Stanford, a Harvard Medical School obesity specialist. Even something as simple as a bad night's sleep can change how the body processes calories. So you might absorb more or fewer calories from the same food on different days.

Should you even bother to count calories?
