CALIFORNIA WOULD SHARE CUTS UNDER FEDERAL PROPOSAL TO MANAGE THE COLORADO RIVER

By WUFEIYU, DORANY PINEDA and BRITTANY PETERSON
Associated Press

Three western U.S. states would take less water from the Colorado River under a federal proposal released Friday to stave off a crisis in the beleaguered waterway.

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation proposal spares four other states from facing mandatory cuts for now. It's meant to be flexible, allowing deeper cuts in drier times while giving the states more time to collectively agree on how to manage the dwindling resource that flows through dams to produce hydropower.

The Lower Basin states of Arizona, and industries that depend on it," Interior Secretary Doug Burgum said in a statement.

Under the proposal, California, Nevada and Arizona would divide half the cuts based on a plan they already developed. Beyond that, priority water rights come into play. The priority system generally benefits California users over those in the other states.

Arizona and Nevada have faced mandatory reductions before, but the proposal outlines deeper cuts that could impact agriculture, cities and tribes. It could translate into higher water prices, more reliance on groundwater and leaving fields unplanted, experts say.

California and Nevada could together be forced to reduce their use by up to 3 million acre-feet (130 billion cubic feet) annually through 2036 — about the amount that Arizona and Nevada receive and enough to serve more than 25 million people a year. The actual reductions would be determined every two years based on conditions throughout the basin.

"The Department has a responsibility to ensure the Colorado River system remains reliable and resilient for the millions of Americans, communities longstanding laws and guidelines that govern the river, some of which expire at the end of 2026. A record-dry winter also left two key Colorado River reservoirs at a combined record low. Federal officials are expected to finalize the proposal in the coming days.

Why is the plan coming now?

More than 40 million people in seven U.S. states, several tribal nations and Mexico rely on the flows of the 1,450-mile (2,334-kilometer) river.

'DON'T FLOCK ME': California, U.S. Lawmakers Debate License Plate Reader Technology

BY RYAN SABALOW, CalMatters

In the past year alone, they've helped catch suspected murderers, bank robbers and hit-and-run drivers. They've located dozens of stolen cars and helped send a wildland arsonist to prison.

They're also distrusted and despised by privacy rights activists on the left and on the right. Just last month, police accused a suspect in Monterey County of yanking down three of them with his pickup.

They're called automated license plate readers. Every day, untold numbers of Californians drive past the thousands of cameras that at least 230 police and sheriffs' departments have posted along roadways or installed on their patrol cars. The cameras in real time capture and read plate numbers, then cross-reference them with law enforcement databases of vehicles police want to locate, such as stolen cars, getaway vehicles or those that may be carrying a missing or wanted person.

lawmakers have unsuccessfully sought to further restrict how police use the technology. They're trying again this year with a bill that would add limits on how long police may retain license plate data, how they access it and with whom they share it.

Police agencies and officers' unions across the state oppose the latest measure, which is similar to a bill Gov. Gavin Newsom vetoed last year.

Measles Exposure Reported at Universal Studios Hollywood

LOS ANGELES - Los Angeles County health officials Wednesday warned that people who visited Universal Studios Hollywood while an infectious person was at the theme park last month may have been exposed to measles.

According to the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health, anyone who was at the theme park between 10 a.m. and 9 p.m. Sunday, July 26, may have been exposed to the highly contagious virus. Officials said additional exposure locations are under investigation.

People who were at the theme park during that time should monitor themselves for symptoms through Aug. 16, the department said.

Those who have previously had measles or received the recommended measles-mumps-rubella, or MMR, vaccine are likely protected but should still watch for symptoms, health officials said. People who are unvaccinated or have unknown vaccination status are at greater risk of infection.

"As measles cases increase, it is important that residents take steps to make sure they are fully protected," Los Angeles County Health Officer Dr. Muntu Davis said in a statement. "The MMR vaccine is the safest and most reliable way to prevent measles and protect yourself, your family and your community."

Health officials urged residents to review their vaccination records, particularly before traveling, and to contact a health care provider if they are pregnant, immunocompromised, have an infant younger than 12 months who may have been exposed or are otherwise at higher risk.

Anyone who develops symptoms including fever, cough, runny nose, red eyes or a rash should stay home, avoid school, work and public gatherings, and contact a health care provider before visiting a medical facility, officials said.

Measles spreads through the air when an infected person breathes, talks, coughs or sneezes, and the virus can remain in the air or on surfaces for several hours after the infected person has left an area. According to the department, two doses of the MMR vaccine are about 97% effective at preventing the disease.

As of July 31, 2,371 measles cases had been reported nationwide this year, county health officials said. Los Angeles County last reported a measles case on July 21.

"This bill is about one simple principle: Protecting the privacy and safety of Californians while ensuring law enforcement tools are used responsibly before it's too late," the author of this year's legislation, Riverside Democratic Sen. Sabrina Cervantes, told the Assembly privacy committee last month. She did not respond to a request for an interview from CalMatters.

Critics of the technology cite high-profile examples of California police using license plate data inappropriately, including to stalk or harass innocent people. As CalMatters reported last year, California officers have repeatedly violated an 11-year-old state law that prohibits sharing the data with federal authorities and others outside the state.

404 Media also reported last year that a Texas cop searched a national license plate database to try to locate a woman who had

GILBERTO CÁRDENAS, Revered for His Advocacy for Chicanos and Latino Art, DIES AT 79

By TERRY TANG
Associated Press

Gilberto Cárdenas, a highly respected sociologist who many considered a great advocate for advancing Latino and Chicano identity through academia and art, has died.

Cárdenas died Sunday at his home in Austin, Texas, after a long illness, according to a statement released by his family. He was 79.

Born and raised in San Gabriel, California, Cárdenas became deeply entrenched in the Chicano Movement of the 1960s and 1970s. Chicano was a rallying social and political identity embraced by Mexican Americans fighting for equality and civil rights.

Cárdenas advocated for the cause with his camera. He documented marches, meetings and other community gatherings. He also loved to acknowledge Chicano artists in the movement and often swapped his photos for posters, prints and other artworks. He would even save posters that were about to be thrown away because

Along with his wife Dolores Carrillo García, Gilberto Cárdenas collected nearly 20,000 pieces of Latino art, nearly half of which they donated to the University of Texas.

of their potential cultural significance.

"Looking at all his accomplishments, he was such a gentle and humble man and really appreciated where he came from," said Richard Flores, a friend and Mexican American Studies professor at University of Texas at Austin. Cárdenas was always "trying to make a contribution not only to the community but the artists he so loved."

He went on to earn a doctorate at the University of Notre Dame and then was hired by the University of Texas at Austin as a sociology professor. He spent nearly 25 years lecturing on the sociology of immigration. Cárdenas is credited for establishing Mexican American Studies there.

In 1999, Cárdenas went back to the University of Notre Dame as a faculty member. In his role as assistant provost, he created the Institute for Latino Studies.

In the meantime he and his wife, Dolores Carrillo García, had amassed a collection of nearly 20,000 pieces of Latino art. In 2023, they donated nearly half to the Blanton Museum of Art at the University of Texas. Other items in their collection went to the Smithsonian American Art Museum in Washington, D.C., the National Museum of Mexican Art in Chicago and the Snite Museum of Art at the University of Notre Dame.

an abortion, leading to fears that conservative states that criminalize abortion are accessing California's plate data to hunt down patients or providers.

Cervantes' bill would generally limit to 30 days the amount of time agencies could keep license plate data, unless it pertains to an active investigation or is part of a search for missing people. It also sets limits around who can access the data and adds training and search-tracking requirements.

Police and sheriffs' departments would be prohibited from entering into contracts with camera companies that provide default access to plate databases that federal and out-of-state police can search.

That provision is in response to Flock Safety, a prominent license plate reader company that allowed federal authorities to search local license plate data as part of a pilot program, said Tracy Rosenberg of Oakland Privacy, one of the bill's supporters.

"(Police departments) learned after the fact, like our advocates did," Rosenberg said. "And we all said, 'What the ...?' You know, pick your four-letter word."

Flock Safety did not respond to CalMatters' request for an interview, but the company says on its website that it doesn't work with immigration agencies and it stopped its federal pilot programs. Local agencies have total control over the data Flock readers collect, the company said.

The Trump Administration Is Ending a Medicare Drug Subsidy Program.

Here's How It Could Affect Costs

By ALI SWENSON
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Millions of older adults on Medicare prescription drug coverage could face steeper monthly costs in 2027, after the Trump administration concludes a temporary subsidy program that has helped offset premiums for the past two years.

The Centers for Medicare &

Medicaid Services this week announced it would wrap up the program, which was initially implemented by the Biden administration in 2024 to lower patients' Medicare Part D prescription drug costs in response to the effects of the 2022 Inflation Reduction Act.

While federal officials insist the financial impact on Medicare beneficiaries will be minimal, the decision opens the Republican-led administration to potential political consequences in a high-stakes midterm election year. Voters have identified cost of living as a top concern, and many older adults, who tend to vote in high numbers, are on fixed incomes where every dollar counts. The roughly 25 million Americans with Medicare Part D plans will find out about their 2027 rates in the fall, when they are casting ballots in November's elections.

Democrats slammed CMS's move as part of a pattern of federal attacks on healthcare affordability, alongside federal Medicaid cuts and the expiration of Affordable Care Act subsidies that had reduced premium costs for working-age Americans in that program.

"The Trump administration is actively raising prescription drug costs for 25 million seniors," Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer wrote on X in response to the news, which was first reported by The Wall Street Journal. "Heartless, cruel, and completely by choice."

CMS Administrator Dr. Mehmet Oz on Tuesday said ending the subsidy program would prevent billions of taxpayer dollars from being funneled to insurance companies. It cost the agency an estimated $3.6 billion in 2026.

He said most Medicare beneficiaries would see less than a $10-per-month increase, and some would even see lower premiums than beforehand.

"Every Medicare beneficiary still has access to low-cost plans, and we will continue to lower prescription drug prices for every American patient, from more MFN deals to our policy giving seniors access to GLP-1s for $50 a month," he wrote on social media.

The federal government also negotiates directly with pharmaceutical companies to lower the prices of some of the most expensive drugs in Medicare, through a program created by Congress in 2022.

This week's decision has no impact on the out-of-pocket cap that limits the amount that older adults with standalone Medicare drug coverage spend on their prescription drugs over the course of a year. That was set at $2,100 in

Colorado River

Decades of overuse, along with rising temperatures, drought and climate change, mean it no longer provides what was promised in 1922.

The river's health often is determined by how much water is in Lake Mead and Lake Powell, the two largest human-made reservoirs in the U.S. Together, the reservoirs are at their lowest point since they began filling, according to a recent paper by Colorado River experts, and approaching levels where they could no longer produce hydropower.

How the water is allocated and conserved — especially amid a decades-long drought — has led to contentious arguments among the states, including threats of lawsuits. Both basins drew up proposals but didn't decide together on a single plan.

Because the states didn't reach an agreement, the federal government stepped in with its own proposal to buoy the river.

How are the states reacting?

Leaders in Arizona, which has the lowest priority rights in the Lower Basin, called the federal proposal flawed. Those in California said it's an important milestone but not the finish line. Nevada officials called the proposed reductions unrealistic and devastating.

The Lower Basin states have been united in wanting all seven states to share in specific, measurable cuts. The Upper Basin states of Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming, meanwhile, repeatedly pushed back, saying mandatory cuts to their water use would be illegal under the existing compact for the Colorado River. While the federal proposal mandates cuts in the Lower Basin, the Upper Basin states can proceed with voluntary water cuts primarily among agricultural users.

The four Upper Basin state governors gave the document a favorable initial assessment but said they were still reviewing it.

"We are encouraged that new operating guidelines will better reflect existing water supply which must underpin any practicable plan going forward," the governors said in a joint statement.

The Arizona Department of Water Resources said the proposed cuts devastate its water users and economy. The Central Arizona Project, which manages much of the state's allocation used primarily in metro Phoenix and Tucson, said the proposal doesn't accurately portray Arizona's rights.

What impact could the plan have?

The states will have a say in how they shoulder the cuts, though the federal government is expected to offer suggestions in the coming days.

Arizona Department of Water Resources director Tom Buschatzke said it will be painful. Farmers in Southern California and Yuma, Arizona, produce the majority of North America's leafy greens in the winter.

"Those are a lot of potential devastating impacts — and a lot of uncertainties for all of us," Buschatzke said.

Cities in metro Phoenix don't rely entirely on the Colorado River and likely will keep everyone's taps running, but water rates will increase in some areas, said Rhett Larson, a water law professor at Arizona State University. The city of Gilbert, for example, has increased residential water rates by 50% since April 2025, he said.

"We are not running out of water. We're running out of cheap water," Larson said.

Meanwhile, cities across the Colorado River basin are constantly on the hunt for new sources of water, like tapping groundwater, treating wastewater and desalinating water, all of which are more expensive than deliveries from the Colorado River. ___ Pineda reported from Los Angeles and Peterson from Denver. Associated Press writer Mead Gruver contributed from Fort Collins, Colorado.

Trump Administration Threatens to Gut Head Start Rules, AFFECTING 70,000 KIDS IN CALIFORNIA

BY CAROLYN JONES,
CalMatters

The Trump administration appears poised to gut the central policies that shape Head Start, a popular and long-established early childhood education program that serves the country's neediest children, including thousands in California.

The federal Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs posted a notice that it intends to "significantly reduce regulatory requirements" for Head Start, effectively stripping the program of the unique features that have defined it since its creation in the mid 1960s.

The announcement came in late May and will likely go through a review process before becoming official in 2027.

The agency doesn't specify what exactly it plans to cut, but reports indicate that it could be most of the program's standards and guidelines. That may include low student-to-teacher ratios, minimum teacher qualifications, and stipulations that Head Start accept all income-eligible children regardless of whether they're disabled or if their parents are citizens.

The agency also suggested it wants to shift Head Start funding to the states, although it didn't specify how or when this would happen.

"The complete gutting of these goals ignores what we know really works in early childhood education," said Deborah Stipek, a former dean of the Stanford School of Education who's researched the topic. "If you're going to spend money on something, wouldn't you want it to have positive effects?"

The agency said in its announcement it expects the cuts to be "well-received by Head Start programs, since they will welcome reduced (administrative) burden and increased flexibility."

It also said it would allow local Head Start programs to keep policies that "best address the needs of their communities." But individual Head Start programs are unlikely to comply with standards that aren't required, particularly if they're facing pressure to serve more students, said Melanee Cottrill, executive director of Head Start California, a nonprofit that advocates for California's 1,813 Head Start centers.

In the same announcement, the agency said it also planned to boost the nutrition and physical exercise components of Head Start, but didn't offer further details.

'It will be very different'

So far, Head Start has evaded major budget cuts, and the federal government doesn't appear poised to slash funding now. A handful of California Head Start programs shuttered during the government shutdown last fall, but reopened when legislators returned to work.

But a reduction in standards would, eventually, have a significant impact, Cottrill said. It's likely Head Start will have less qualified teachers, larger class sizes and fewer opportunities for parent involvement, she said.

"Those standards are what make Head Start a high quality program," Cottrill said. "Head Start will still exist, but it will be very different from what it is today."

Head Start, launched in 1965 as part of President Lyndon Johnson's War on Poverty, is a federal child-care program that serves the country's lowest-income families – those earning less than $33,000 a year for a family of four. The federal government issues grants directly to school districts, nonprofits or other organizations that run Head Start programs, sometimes in combination with other funding sources.

Head Start offers health screenings, meals, curriculum focused on literacy and math, and resources for parents such as parenting classes. Children who attend Head Start are more likely to go to college and hold professional jobs later in life, a 2022 study found.

In California, about 70,000 children are enrolled in Head Start. The number would be higher but programs have had to turn away families because they struggled to hire staff. Early childhood educators sometimes earn less than fast food workers and turnover is high, Cottrill noted.

Cost of losing disability screening

One Head Start standard that could be especially costly to eliminate is disability screening. Identifying and addressing disabilities such as dyslexia early can reduce the need for special education later on, potentially saving thousands of dollars, Stipek said.

Beth Meloy, an early childhood education consultant who worked on the federal government's Head Start standards, said that simplifying and streamlining the standards is probably a good idea. Navigating too many standards may be overly burdensome for some local Head Start programs, she said.

But gutting them entirely would be a disaster, she said.

"Head Start is built around a mission of giving low-income children a path to sustained education and life outcomes," Meloy said. "These changes lack the thoughtfulness that these children deserve."

2026 and is projected to rise to $2,400 for 2027.

Part D beneficiaries paid an average of $36 a month this year for their prescription drug premiums with the subsidies in place, according to the healthcare research nonprofit KFF. The subsidies offset the average premium by $16 in 2026, according to the federal Medicare Payment Advisory Commission (MedPAC).

It's not yet known how many Americans the change will affect, or how much more they'll pay. Older Americans have the opportunity to shop for plans each year, and prices vary widely between them. CMS has said it will release information about next year's premiums in September.

AARP Executive Vice President Nancy LeaMond said her organization, which serves Americans 50 and older, had supported the temporary subsidy.

"While it's too early to know the full impact of this change, it would be unfortunate if this decision made Part D coverage less affordable, just as we're beginning to see billions in savings from Medicare drug price negotiation," she said in a statement.

Juliette Cubanski, vice president and director of the program on Medicare policy at KFF, said the price increases may be marginal for some consumers but impactful for others when combined with higher prices in other areas, like groceries, gas and housing.

"What's going to matter most for consumers is how much more or less they have to pay at the end of a month, and how much they have left after the bills are paid," she said. "This could just make it more challenging for some people to make that math work."

Washi Tape Paper Clips - Organize in Style

By MIA ROTELL and
LAUREN ROTELL

Millions of teachers, professors, and students are preparing for the back-to-school season, and many aren't thrilled about trading sunshine-filled pool days for heavy backpacks and even heavier homework loads. It can be difficult to muster the motivation, but cute stationery is a great way to boost productivity and stay organized—whether you're heading back to school or simply giving your everyday stationery a glow-up.

What You'll Need:

- A paper clip
- A pair of scissors
- A roll of washi tape

How to Make It:

Step 1: Place the paper clip in front of you.

Step 2: Roll out a strip of washi tape that's the same length as the paper clip, then cut it.

Step 3: Carefully thread the washi tape through the top opening of the paper clip.

Step 4: Fold the washi tape in half so the top of the paper clip is centered between the two sides.

Step 5: Cut an angled notch into the end of the washi tape to create a banner shape. The tape will be longest at the two corners and shortest in the center.

Tip: Washi tape can be found at most craft stores and at Walmart.

Cárdenas' leadership earned him an appointment in 2001 by President George W. Bush to the President's Commission on White House Fellows. In 2008, Bush also named him to another commission to explore a potential National Museum of the American Latino.

Cárdenas was also on the board of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund from 1993 to 2012.

In a statement, Thomas

Saenz, president and general counsel of MALDEF, called Cárdenas "a quiet icon of the Chicano movement, never adequately appreciated for all he did."

Cárdenas retired from Notre Dame about a decade ago, Flores said. He was still active in the art world and occasionally gave talks on his collection as well as socioeconomic issues.

He is survived by his wife, two sons, three stepchildren and nine grandchildren.

A funeral mass is scheduled for Saturday at St. Ignatius Martyr Catholic Church in Austin.

BLOSSOM OF SNOW: A Starry Symbol of the Alps Makes an Unusual Addition to Rock Gardens

By JESSICA DAMIANO
Associated Press

If you're looking to plant a rare flower with a storied past that's had a well-known song written about it, edelweiss will check all your boxes.

My mother grew up in northeastern Italy, just over the Austrian border near the Alps, where edelweiss grow wild along steep rocky ledges. When I was a child, she told me stories about the elusive white flowers, and about local legends of young men dying after climbing and falling from the cliffs while trying to pick edelweiss for their beloveds.

I know that's pretty dark territory for a gardening column to veer into — and probably for a child's bedtime story, too — but the good news is you can try growing the star-shaped, velvety flowers without risking life, limb or nightmares.

Edelweiss might grow nicely in a rock garden

Edelweiss (Leontopodium alpinum), which translates as "noble white" from German, has some very specific requirements endemic to its native range: alkaline rocky or sandy soil that drains well, low soil fertility, full sunlight and cold winter temperatures. If you can replicate those — and you likely can in the lower-humidity areas of horticultural zones 4-7, you can grow edelweiss. The plant gives bonus points to gardeners at high elevations.

Sow seeds outdoors in late fall to provide the stratification — or winter chill — that they require for germination. Or plant pre-chilled seeds in early spring (the package label will tell you whether seeds have been stratified). Either way, press the seeds into the soil to ensure contact, but don't bury them. They will sprout in spring and begin blooming in spring and summer of their second year.

as their roots become established. After that, they will seldom need supplemental watering.

The plants, which can survive temperatures as low as minus 20 degrees Fahrenheit, thrive in barren, nutrient-poor soil, so don't fertilize them unless they're growing in a container, and even then, only minimally.

Even if you never grow edelweiss, chances are you've made its acquaintance through its namesake song by Rodgers and Hammerstein in the 1965 movie "The Sound of Music," which cemented it into pop culture.

"Blossom of snow, may you

Edelweiss Perennials via AP

Alternatively, you can purchase starter plants, if you can find them, for transplanting into the garden right after the last frost date in spring. They should bloom after planting.

Water the plants regularly throughout their first year bloom and grow," the song says.

And, despite luring young men to attempt foolish feats of bravery, the tiny flower has inspired generations of gardeners, hikers and movie lovers.

Stuffed Tomatoes

By CONNOR FORBES

Summer = tomatoes. And if you aren't trying to work them into every meal, what are you even doing? I kid cuz store tomatoes are just lacking. But if you grow your own, you will never eat a store tomato willingly again.

This recipe works with store bought tomatoes or home-grown. The key is a large beefsteak or heirloom to be your vessel. Let's stuff some tomatoes.

Serves 4

Ingredients

- 4 large beefsteak tomatoes
- 1.5 lbs ground beef
- 1 cup rice, cooked
- 1 tbsp Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tbsp powdered garlic
- 1/3 cup chopped parsley
- 1/4 cup chopped basil
- 1/4 cup chopped tarragon (optional)
- 1 tsp salt
- Shredded parmesan

To Make

Cut a hole around the top of the tomato and remove. Scoop out inside to make a bowl. Save the scooped-out tomato and chop roughly.

Set tomatoes aside. In a large sauté pan over medium heat, add ground beef, salt, garlic powder and Worcestershire. Chop gently to break up beef. Once beef is cooked, add the chopped tomato innards, parsley, basil, and tarragon. Lower heat to low and let simmer until tomatoes soften.

Precook the bowled tomatoes in an air fryer or oven at 400 degrees for 5 minutes.

Add cooked rice to ground beef and mix in. Scoop ground beef and rice combo into the precooked tomato bowls. Top with parmesan cheese. Cook in air fryer or over at 400 degrees for 10 minutes or until cheese is a bit browned and edges are crispy.

Garnish with a sprinkle of fresh basil and EAT!

Kat Lieu USES Black Sesame AND Miso FOR AN Asian Spin ON rice krispie treats

By KAT LIEU Voracious

I make these Black Sesame-Brown Butter Rice Krispies Treats, excerpted from my book "108 Asian Cookies," with my mother in mind.

Growing up, I ate my fair share of Rice Krispie Treats because they were one of the few Western sweets my mom made over and over again. Maybe it was because they were so easy to make and helped her feel a little closer to the typical mothers we saw on American sitcoms and primetime TV. Or maybe she just liked their chewiness.

But for whatever reason, my mom never gave her Rice Krispies Treats an Asian spin. She always followed the recipe directions on the cereal box to a T.

But she loves black sesame desserts, especially sweet black sesame soup. As a child, I remember her telling me how black sesame would keep our Chinese hair black and long. We both have short hair peppered with gray now, but we still have a thing for desserts that sport a lovely shade of gray or black.

BLACK SESAME AND BROWN BUTTER

RICE KRISPIE TREATS

Makes 12 to 16 Rice Krispie Treats

Start to Finish 55 minutes

Ingredients

6 tablespoons unsalted butter

One 12-ounce bag mini marshmallows

1/4 cup black sesame seeds

2 1/2 tablespoons black sesame paste

1 teaspoon red miso

6 cups Rice Krispies cereal

1/3 cup freeze-dried strawberry slices or haw flakes (optional)

Directions

1. Crumple, then uncrumple a large sheet of parchment paper and use it to line a 9-inch-square cake pan with some overhang. Smooth and press down the parchment paper with your hands. Alternatively, generously grease the baking dish with butter or toasted sesame oil.

2. To make the brown butter, melt the butter in a heavy saucepan or pot over medium heat while whisking continuously until the butter foams, the foam subsides, the butter is golden, and brown (not black) bits form on the bottom, at least 5 minutes. You're looking for a nutty aroma and not a burnt smell. Reduce the heat to low and add the marshmallows. Stir until the marshmallows have melted into one thick fluff, like foamy, melty mozzarella cheese, a few minutes. There should be no lumps of marshmallow. Add the black sesame seeds, black sesame paste, and miso and mix to combine. Turn off the heat and dump in the cereal, about 2 cups at a time, while stirring; if you like, add the freeze-dried strawberries or haw flakes as well. Stir and mix with a spatula or wooden spoon until all the ingredients are thoroughly coated with gray-black melted marshmallows.

3. Transfer the mixture to the prepared pan and flatten into a leveled square. I find it easier to do this with a layer of parchment paper on top and pressing down with a fondant smoother. You can also use a greased spatula or your clean hands when the mixture is cool enough to touch.

4. Cover and let it rest on the counter at room temperature for about 30 minutes to let the mixture set. Then, use a sharp knife to cut into 12 to 16 equal pieces.

"SPIDER-MAN: BRAND NEW DAY"

By BOB GARVER

When we last left Peter Parker aka Spider-Man (Tom Holland) back in 2021, he had to submit to a spell from Doctor Strange that would make the world forget he ever existed. His Aunt May (Marissa Tomei) had died, so he had no family left, but he had to watch his friends Ned (Jacob Batalon) and MJ (Zendaya), go off to college without him, blissfully unaware of what they meant to him.

As we rejoin Peter in "Spider-Man: Brand New Day," he's mostly turned himself over to superhero work full-time. There are plenty of dangers around New York City, from minor thugs to supervillains like Scorpion (Michael Mando) to people that just need rescuing. Peter is always happy to swing in and save the day as Spider-Man, but the years of anonymity are taking their toll on the human side of him.

Peter has some help. He coordinates with Detective Jean DeWolff (Liza Colón-Zayas), as a liaison to the NYPD. A supposedly-benevolent organization called Damage Control, led by Bill Metzger (Tramell Tillman) deals in superhero affairs. Fellow vigilante Frank "The Punisher" Castle (Jon Bernthal) keeps an eye on things, though Peter disagrees with his violent tactics. If he gets really desperate, he can call upon Yelena "Black Widow" Belova, the leader of the New Avengers. Even Bruce "The Incredible Hulk" Banner (Mark Ruffalo) is still in play, wearing a device that prevents him Hulk-ing up, though it can be disabled. But these people are "allies" at best, Peter misses having friends.

Eventually a threat presents itself that stumps Peter, his allies, and even his enemies. Somebody is possessing the bodies of whoever they please – often average citizens, though it can be a familiar face if specific deception is required – and wreaking havoc throughout the city. Their ultimate target seems to be Damage Control, which itself may not be on the up-and-up, as if Spider-Man battling the company's ninja security team in all the film's advertising wasn't enough of a giveaway. The person behind the possessions is a shadowy figure, and it's little secret that Sadie Sink of "Stranger Things" has been cast in a shadowy role, so the real question is, who is this character beyond someone played by Sadie Sink?

Peter tries to keep from becoming possessed himself, but his biology betrays him and soon the villain learns that he's still pining after MJ. He tries saving her impersonally as Spider-Man, but it soon becomes apparent that Peter Parker can't stay out of her life forever. And this leads to some good conversations about what these characters are, what they've been, and what they can and can't be going forward. It's some of the best acting I've seen from the MCU in a long time. Also, Bernthal with his jaded attitude is everything you could want in a perfectly-cast Punisher.

And yet, I'm not recommending "Spider-Man: Brand New Day." It's an apologetic sort of non-recommendation, as the movie does a lot right, especially with its three(!) carryovers from "The Odyssey." But for every scene where the movie admirably lets the actors and dialogue breathe, there are too many more that are just dull MCU retreads. Like how Damage Control is just the latest corrupt human organization to think that they can get away with crimes against superpowered individuals. Or how the villain is temporarily stopped the way most MCU villains are stopped in this era. Or how characters like (the new) Black Widow and The Hulk are wedged into the film to remind fans that they're still a part of this franchise despite the story not needing them. Or, perhaps worst of all, how the film seems preoccupied with setting up more MCU installments down the road than making this installment particularly memorable. Compared to the satisfaction I got from 2021's "Spider-Man: No Way Home," this movie... I won't say "doesn't have legs," but is maybe a few legs short of an arachnid.

Grade: C

"Spider-Man: Brand New Day" is rated PG-13 for sequences of action/violence and some language. Its running time is 145 minutes.

'Spider-Man: Brand New Day' Has 2nd-Biggest Opening Weekend with $355M

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - "Spider-Man: Brand New Day" raked in $355 million this weekend to post the second-best opening ever in North America, according to industry estimates released Sunday.

The Columbia Pictures/Marvel Studios release is the fourth Spider-Man film to star Tom Holland, who took over the role previously played by Andrew Garfield and Tobey Maquire. It was directed by Destin Daniel Cretton, and also stars Holland's real-life wife Zendaya.

The crown for all-time best domestic opening still belongs to 2019's "Avengers: Endgame," however, which took in $357 million in its first weekend in theaters in the United States and Canada. "Spider-Man: Brand

New Day" took in $927 million worldwide, also the second-best opening weekend behind "Avengers: Endgame," which made $1.2 billion.

"The Odyssey" was second with $51 million in its third weekend and has now grossed a little shy of $400 million domestically, Rentrak reported. "Toy Story 5" was third with $6.3 million Friday through Sunday in its seventh weekend.

"Minions & Monsters" was fourth with $5.8 million in its fifth week, followed by "Moana," which grossed $5.3 million in its fourth weekend.

Sixth place went to "Hometown: The Musical," a filmed recording of the Broadway sensation by Anais Mitchell, which made $2 million in its second weekend.

Rounding out the top 10 releases were "The Invite" ($1.2 million), "I Want Your Sex" ($600,000), "Young Washington" ($477,727) and "Obsession" ($470,000).

This weekend's overall three-day box office haul was estimated at $429 million. The year-to-date total is $6.195 billion -- up 15.23% from the figure at this time last year, according to Rentrak.

Flock

“By default, sharing with federal agencies is disabled,” the company wrote. “ICE does not have direct access to Flock cameras, systems or data.”

Why police are opposed

At least 39 police agencies and officers' unions oppose Senate Bill 1013. Combined, they have spent at least $5.6 million on legislative campaigns since 2000, according to the CalMatters

Larry Valenzuela,
CalMatters

Digital Democracy database. Police say the technology has proven invaluable at helping them solve crimes. Tustin Police Chief Sean Thuilliez, president of the California Police Chiefs Association, said the technology helped clear an innocent man. It also identified a suspected killer when a woman was shot and killed on a street in the Orange County city in May. The woman had just testified against her ex-husband in a restraining order case, making him a prime suspect, Thuilliez said. But Thuilliez said that thanks to the city's 102 license plate readers, eight of which are from Flock, detectives quickly ruled out her ex-husband and were able to apprehend her former boyfriend at the Mexico border. He's now charged with first-degree murder.

“It's technology mixed with good investigative work,” he said in an interview. “But within one weekend, we were able to arrest the suspect for this person's murder.”

The Berkeley Police Department noted similar successes after 52 Flock cameras were installed last year. In a report to the Berkeley City Council, the department noted license plate readers had been used in 121 cases, contributed to 58 arrests and led to the recovery of 37 stolen vehicles.

The department noted its rate for solving robbery cases climbed from 34% in 2024 to 49% the following year, thanks in part to the license plate data.

“The technology has fundamentally improved how officers patrol and how detectives investigate crimes spanning a range of serious offenses including robbery, kidnapping, carjacking, burglary, weapons violations, organized retail theft, stolen property and DUI,” the report said.

Why Newsom vetoed last year's bill

Such investigative success stories may have helped persuade Newsom to veto last year's bill, which would have required police to dump their license plate data within 60 days.

In his veto message, he said the restrictions on sharing data and forcing departments to purge it could hinder officers' ability to solve cold cases and find missing people.

Newsom also said there was no money in the budget to pay for the mandatory California Department of Justice audits last year's bill would have required.

To address Newsom's concerns, this year's proposal allows police to retain data to locate missing people and it makes a state audit program contingent on future funding.

Newsom's press office declined to say whether he has a position on the latest bill, which has advanced through the Legislature with only Republicans voting against it. The measure is now pending before the Assembly Appropriations Committee.

Meanwhile, at least one Republican lawmaker is taking the issue to Congress. U.S. Rep. Thomas Massie of Kentucky recently shared a meme of a “Don't Tread on Me” snake wrapped around a camera. The riff on the yellow Gadsden flag says, “Don't Flock me.”

“I'll soon be sponsoring a bill to withhold federal money from municipalities and police departments that deploy Flock (and other style) cameras to surveil law-abiding citizens,” Massie wrote on Facebook.

Rosenberg of Oakland Privacy said she understands the cameras' usefulness to California police, but she thinks they've become ubiquitous. Police, she said, also shouldn't have a permanent pass to keep “mountains” of data for as long as they want.

“There is kind of a balancing act. We as human beings also need some camera-free space,” she said. “We don't want to be on camera every minute of every single day.”

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Peter Holzworth be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held on 8/26/2026 at 8:30am in Department 12 located at 4050 Main St, Riverside, CA 92501. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

The Director of the Department of Industrial Relations (“DIR”) has determined the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which this work is to be performed for each craft or type of worker needed to execute the Contract which will be awarded to the successful bidder, copies of which are on file and will be made available to any interested party upon request at Owners office or online at <http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlsr>. A copy of these rates shall be posted by the successful bidder at the Project site.

Pursuant to SB 854, which amended the Prevailing Wage Laws, this Contract is subject to compliance monitoring and enforcement by the DIR. Beginning March 1, 2015, with very limited exceptions no contractor or subcontractor may be listed on a bid proposal for this Contract unless registered with the DIR pursuant to Labor Code section 1725.5. Beginning April 1, 2015, no contractor or subcontractor may be awarded this Contract unless registered with the DIR pursuant to Labor Code section 1725.5. The DIR registration number for each contractor and subcontractor must be identified on the bid proposal - failure to identify this number could result in the bid being rejected as non-responsive. It is each bidder’s responsibility to ensure that they have fully complied with SB 854. The City will report all necessary contracts to the DIR as required by the Prevailing Wage Laws.

The successful bidder and their subcontractor(s) shall comply with all applicable Prevailing Wage Laws, which include, but are not limited to the payment of not less than the required prevailing rates to all workers employed by them in the execution of the Contract, the employment of apprentices, the hours of labor, the payment of overtime, and the debarmment of contractors and subcontractors. The successful bidder and all subcontractor(s) under him shall also be responsible for any and all violations and fines imposed on them pursuant to the Prevailing Wage Laws.

The successful bidder must fully comply with all applicable laws, rules and regulations in furnishing or using equipment and/or providing services, including, but not limited to, emissions limits and permitting requirements imposed by the South Coast Air Quality Management District (SCAQMD) and/or California Air Resources Board (CARB). Although the SCAQMD and CARB limits and requirements are broader, the successful bidder shall specifically be aware of their application to “portable equipment”, which definition is considered by SCAQMD and CARB to include any item of equipment with a fuelpowered engine. The successful bidder will be required to indemnify City against any fines or penalties imposed by SCAQMD, CARB, or any other governmental or regulatory agency for violations of applicable laws, rules and/or regulations by the successful bidder, its subcontractors, or others for whom the successful bidder is responsible under its indemnity obligations.

CARB implemented amendments to the InUse OffRoad DieselFueled Fleets Regulations (“Regulation”) which are effective on January 1, 2024 and apply broadly to all selfpropelled off road diesel vehicles 25 horsepower or greater and other forms of equipment used in California. A copy of the Regulation is available at:

<https://ww2.arb.ca.gov/sites/default/files/barcu/regact/2022/offroaddiesel/appa-1.pdf>. LEAVE IT: Dog Trainers Help Pets Avoid Venomous Snakes

By ANITA SNOW Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Ripley, a medium-sized dog with a strong prey drive, curiously approached Brian, a large western diamondback rattlesnake, until she got a quick zap on the neck meant to simulate a venomous viper's bite.

Suddenly, the 2-year-old blue heeler mix wanted nothing to do with Brian's textured brown skin or furiously rattling tail. Ripley was never in danger because Brian had his venom glands removed years ago.

Dog trainer J.J. Belcher of Sublime Canine in Tucson, Arizona, said the single shock delivered one recent morning from an electronic training collar should be sufficient to keep Ripley away from venomous snakes that can sicken or even kill a dog. Belcher said Ripley can come back in a year for a free training session to make sure the lesson stuck.

Ripley's owners, Amber Schneider and Wendy Timm, said they opted for the training because the dog regularly hunts small animals.

"We have an acre of natural desert and respect all the snakes, but she's very curious about wildlife," said

Timm. "We are doing this because we want to keep our dog safe."

How common are dog-snake interactions?

The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals says as many as 150,000 dogs are bitten by venomous snakes each year in the United States. In the rattlesnake hot spot of Arizona, emergency veterinarian Dr. Sarah Carotenuto says the Veterinary Specialty Center of Tucson treats four to six dogs daily for rattlesnake bites, along with an occasional cat.

Training programs to protect canines from poisonous snakes are offered around the U.S., especially in the Western deserts, woods and grasslands that are home to western diamondbacks. The snakes can reach over 5 feet long (1.5 meters) and strike in less than a second when they feel threatened.

There are also classes from Illinois to Florida to guard animals against eastern diamondbacks, timber rattlers and other venomous snakes.

Carotenuto said the snake-bite survival rate for pets is 94% with quick treatment, which can cost thousands of dollars depending on how much antivenom and hospitalization is needed.

"Do bring us your dog quickly, but please don't bring us the snake!" emphasized Carotenuto. Some people have brought in the guilty snake, but it's unnecessary to identify the exact species before administering antivenom effective against all kinds of rattlers. Which method is best?

Carotenuto, who teaches at the University of Arizona's College of Veterinary Medicine, said she's participating in a research study there into whether rattlesnake-aversion training works, and which method is most effective.

Like Belcher, most trainers insist that the use of the electronic collar is necessary to ensure a dog will avoid poisonous snakes.

"It's a very fast and effective form of training," said Belcher, who has traveled around the Western U.S. for more than two decades teaching rattlesnake avoidance to thousands of pet and working dogs, including search-and-rescue animals and the occasional police dog.

He acknowledged the growing debate about the use of electronic training collars, a method that the American Humane Society has opposed as cruel.

The ASPCA doesn't explicitly oppose electronic collars, but insists they be used correctly.

"This type of training can be highly effective — however, we recommend that such training be conducted only under the guidance of a trainer knowledgeable in the principles of avoidance learning," said Pamela Reid, vice president of ASPCA's behavioral sciences team.

"It is imperative to weigh the dog's risk of a snakebite against the potential fallout from using an electronic collar," she said.

Training a dog to come reliably when it's called and to "leave it" when it is interested in something dangerous "can go a long way toward keeping a dog safe," she said.

Belcher said he has developed an alternative positive-reinforcement program for clients who are squeamish about electronic collars, but nobody has wanted to pay the $2,500 he would charge for the multiple sessions. A single visit with the collar costs $125.

Another trainer, Mike Parmley in Salt Lake City, teaches as many as 500 dogs every year, usually in small classes of four to six. He uses an electronic collar set on a low level, emphasizing, "You don't have to shock the hell out of the dog."

He aims to help dogs steer clear of the Salt Lake area's Great Basin rattlesnakes.

"They are a pretty big problem up here in the foothills," said Parmley, who owns Barley's Canine Recreation Center. "They came out a lot earlier this year because of a trend of warmer weather, and we had more than 100 dogs signed up by early June."

Other steps to prevent encounters with snakes

Here are some tips from trainers and veterinarians for protecting your dog:

— Learn about snakes in your area. Venomous snakes exist across the U.S., with various rattler species not only in the West but as far east as New York and North Carolina.

— Clear your yard of long grass and other foliage or debris that can attract small rodents hunted by snakes. Trimming back growth can eliminate hiding places.

— Stay on well-worn trails while hiking and keep your dog on a leash.

— Don't let your guard down even if your dog has had avoidance training. A viper can surprise and attack a person or pet without warning.

— Seek emergency care immediately if your dog is bitten because the venom will move quickly through its body, destroying tissue.
