

Contiguous U.S. Breaks Its Record for HOTTEST MONTH EVER, NOAA Says

By SETH BORENSTEIN AP Science Writer

KENSINGTON, Maryland (AP) — The contiguous United States sizzled to its hottest month ever last month, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

July averaged 76.89 degrees Fahrenheit (24.94 degrees Celsius) across the Lower 48 states, eclipsing the Dust Bowl's July 1936 by an eighth of a degree. Records go back to 1895.

"It's not good when you're breaking records from the Dust Bowl, which we are in this case," said meteorologist Jeff Masters of Yale Climate Connections. "And that was a crazy sort of situation where you put tens of millions of people in motion. You had this great migration because of the drought and the heat that hit the center of the U.S. — just a cataclysmic event in U. S. history. If we're exceeding records from The Dust Bowl, that says that we're in deep trouble."

Although it was unusually cool in Alaska, hotter-than-normal conditions blanketed the Lower 48, with the most excessive heat in the Mountain West, Southwest, Northern Plains and Southeast. The heat was so widespread that every one of the Lower 48 states was at least 1 degree Fahrenheit (nearly 0.6 degrees Celsius) warmer than the 20th century average, said Russ Vose, chief of monitoring at NOAA's National Center for Environmental Information.

The heat in the Dust Bowl years was more concentrated in parts of the Midwest and was aggravated by agricultural practices at the time, Vose said.

What's happening now is due to the burning of coal, oil and gas, scientists said.

"Extremely high temperatures across the continental U.S. this summer, along with intense drought and fire conditions, are absolutely consistent with the climate change signal," said Katharine Jacobs, a climate scientist at the University of Arizona.

The biggest driver of the record heat was nighttime lows that smashed the old mark for hottest minimums by 0.7 degrees, NOAA said. Hotter nights are a classic sign of human-caused climate change, according to scientists and several studies in peer-reviewed literature. NOAA's calculation is based on averaging 24 hours of temperature, not just highs or lows.

JACKIE, THE CALIFORNIA BALD EAGLE WHO BECAME AN INTERNET SENSATION, DIES AFTER ILLNESS

BIG BEAR LAKE, Calif. (AP) — Jackie, the bald eagle who became an internet sensation and a symbol of the species' recovery in California, died Monday after being treated for an illness at a veterinary facility, her caretakers announced.

For more than a decade, nature lovers watched via an online video feed as Jackie and her partner Shadow tended to their nest each year atop trees near Big Bear Lake in the San Bernardino Mountains east of Los Angeles.

The nonprofit Friends of Big Bear

Valley installed the nest camera in 2015 and documented the successes and failures of each breeding season. In 2024, Jackie diligently sat on her eggs for more than two and a half days straight after a winter storm blanketed the nest with snow.

The Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation's San Dimas Raptor Rescue team found Jackie on July 17 following reports that the bird had been involved in a fight with two other eagles and was found to be ill.

Report: Inflation 3.2% Higher Regionally over Previous Year

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - Due mainly to energy prices, inflation throughout the Riverside metropolitan area registered a 3.2% increase over the last year, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics said Wednesday.

The agency's latest report, based on metrics for western Riverside County and the cities of Ontario and San Bernardino, indicated that the Inland Empire's Consumer Price Index was up in most categories over the previous 12 months.

BLS officials said Wednesday that the principal driver behind the rise was the energy component, which reflected a 17.6% spike from July 2025 to July 2026. Retail gasoline prices in the region weighed most on the metric, jumping 23.2% during the year-over-year period.

Food costs were a significant contributor to inflationary pressures too, going up 3.1% in the last 12 months, figures showed. Shelter costs -- or property rents -- also trended higher, showing a 2.8% rise.

One of the few metrics indicating a drop was listed as "education and communication," down 6.5% in the year ending July 31.

The bimonthly report said that in June and July 2026, a one-tenth of a percentage point drop was actually recorded in the regional CPI, owing mostly to a 7.9% decline in retail gas costs during that time. The component designated general "goods and services" additionally slid 3.1% in the two-month period, along with a 1.4% contraction in apparel costs.

Most everything else was higher in the June-July time frame, according to data.

Nationwide, the overall CPI registered a .1% increase for the month of July. The impetus was shelter costs, which accounted for the largest upward move in the index. For the one-year period ending July 31, the national CPI was up 3.4%, according to the BLS.

The current rate of inflation reflects the price trajectory impacting most sectors of the economy.

Energy price shocks that began at the end of February are directly connected to commodities markets and oil trading, which turned bullish immediately after the joint U.S.-Israeli military operations against Iran, beginning with a missile attack on a girls' school,

California Nearly Achieved Universal Healthcare. NOW, MILLIONS ARE LOSING COVERAGE

By KRISTEN HWANG,
CalMatters

Two years ago, California hit a milestone decades in the making: Nearly every person in the state qualified for health insurance, regardless of immigration status and income, pushing the state's insured rate to a record 95%. Now that progress is unravelling.

Facing budget shortfalls and new federal restrictions, state leaders have begun rolling back the coverage system they built. Analysis at the UC Berkeley Labor Center and UCLA Center for Health Policy Research project California's uninsured rate could nearly double, to almost 15%, by 2030.

"I knew it was going to be bad, but seeing that doubling was shocking to me," said Miranda Dietz, director of the labor center's health-care program.

An estimated 2.2 million people could lose insurance over the next four years from combined state and federal cuts, the researchers found. The losses will fall hardest on undocumented state will bear the brunt, driven by its larger share of low-income and immigrant residents.

Many Californians remember how difficult it was to get healthcare before the state expanded and improved insurance options.

In 2008, Kandi Hill had just given birth to her third child. When she started throwing up and experiencing irregular menstrual cycles with heavy bleeding she struggled to find a doctor who would run any tests other than an STD panel. In a matter of months, she died from stage four cervical cancer. She was 31.

Cervical cancer has a 91% five-year survival rate if caught and treated early, according to the National Cancer Institute, but back then the Medi-Cal system was bare bones, and doctors didn't seem to take poor Black patients seriously, said her husband, Ramonte Means.

Means was left to raise two small children and an infant alone. He has been the sole provider for his family ever ends meet. Usually, Means said, his employers won't give him full-time hours so that they don't have to provide benefits. With multiple part-time jobs, he tries to keep his income low enough to qualify for Medi-Cal and ensure his kids stay covered too. He'd rather get insurance through an employer, but he can't afford a plan out-of-pocket.

"None of us want anything for free. I work two jobs. My kids go to school," Means said. "We're just asking for some dignity."

Today's Medi-Cal isn't perfect, Means says, but it's much better than when his wife died — patients have more benefits and can see specialists.

"I truly believe if all this happened now, she'd have been fine," Means said. "The system failed my kids more than anything — failed the whole family."

Millions gain coverage

When the Affordable Care Act passed in 2010, California quickly expanded its Medicaid program. Previously, the program was reserved for women and children, seniors, and people with disabilities. Low-income adults were excluded unless they had dependent children. The law allowed California to open enrollment to childless adults and raised the income limit to 138% of the federal poverty level — about $22,000 for an individual today.

More than 5 million Californians gained coverage, including Means, who had occasionally earned too much money before the change.

to expanding access within the existing system — transforming Medi-Cal with new benefits and a focus on high-quality primary care.

The Democratic govern-

Grace Calderon, HIV testing counselor and community health worker for St. John's Community Health, takes a blood sample from a patient at a St. John's Community Health mobile clinic in Los Angeles on Feb. 6, 2026.

"So 138% poverty is not a lot of money in terms of increasing income, but when you talk about how many people actually become eligible it has a significant impact," said Nadereh Pourat, associate director at the UCLA Center for Health Policy Research.

An additional 1.7 million middle-income Californians bought insurance through the commercial Affordable Care Act marketplace known as Covered California.

"That's a huge policy change," said Rachel Linn Gish, spokesperson for Health Access California, a consumer advocacy group. "Millions and millions and millions of Californians covered in 10 years. No other state can say that."

Still, one major group remained uninsured: undocumented immigrants. They account for about 2.3 million residents, according to the Public Policy Institute of California.

Newsom: The healthcare governor

Gov. Gavin Newsom campaigned on a promise to bring single-payer healthcare to the state. He pivoted nor's administration also launched the state's second-largest coverage expansion, phasing in Medi-Cal eligibility for low-income undocumented adults until all adults and children qualified in 2024.

"We're making sure that universal access to healthcare becomes a reality here in California," Newsom said in 2022 when the state allowed undocumented seniors to enroll in Medi-Cal.

At its peak, the state-funded expansion covered 1.4 million adults and 217,000 children and cost more than $10 billion a year.

Republican lawmakers have sharply criticized that price tag, and increasingly, so have moderate Democrats.

"We need to have cost containment," said Sen. Catherine Blakespear, a Democrat from Encinitas, when the state passed last year's budget.

Total Medi-Cal spending has more than doubled since Newsom took office in 2019, growing from about $96 billion to $217 billion this year. The nonpartisan Legislative Analyst's Office attributes

School Backpack Overload: Heavy Bags Can Strain Kids' Bodies

By CHEYANNE MUMPHREY AP Education Writer

Backpacks can be fashionable and functional, but they can also be too heavy — weighed down by digital devices, musical instruments, sports equipment and more. Some kids carry home a laptop or tablet and textbooks, too.

It's good to be prepared, but kids who walk to school or participate in extracurricular activities may be lugging more than their bodies can handle. Lockers and classroom storage aren't available everywhere — and a child carrying too much weight might not be ready to learn.

As families begin back-to-school shopping, here's how to know if your child's backpack is too heavy, and how to lighten their load.

bottles, lunch containers, workout clothes and more. Individually, those items may not seem heavy, but together they can add unnecessary strain to children's bodies.

According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, signs a backpack may be too heavy include a child leaning forward to support its weight or having difficulty walking. Straps should not dig into shoulders.

Don't wait for a child to express discomfort or pain to lighten the load, experts say.

Dr. Sadika Kendi, a physician who chairs the academy's injury-prevention efforts, says back injuries are uncommon but possible, particularly if a child falls while carrying a heavy backpack.

often cited as a backpack guideline, there isn't enough evidence to establish a one-size-fits-all approach, Kendi said. Because children vary in size, strength, physical development and daily routines, caregivers should consider their child's individual needs and, in general, keep backpacks as light as possible.

Teachers say leave this stuff at home

After families receive back-to-school checklists for classroom materials, they should take an audit of what a child really must carry every day.

Samantha Ness, a history teacher in Phoenix, said parents should focus on making sure children have basic supplies rather than getting caught up in trendy, decorative or expensive items. Her students have about 10 years.

In Fairfax County, Virginia, the school district is bringing back math textbooks after a backlash against technology. That was a win for the group Fairfax County Parents for Intentional Technology, but it also means hard decisions about weight in backpacks.

Parents should think carefully about whether a child really needs to carry both books and a laptop every day, said mom Alix Fetch, a spokesperson for the parents group. For example, a student might not always need their laptop at home. Parents of elementary school students in Fairfax County can now opt out of having the device come home in backpacks. For older students, block scheduling means they don't need every textbook every day.

Fetch said her 7-year-old typically carries lunch, a water bottle and occasionally a folder with homework or notes from the teacher. Even that can feel burdensome, she said, particularly when students move between classrooms for activities such as art or music. And the inside of the bag can still be messy.

"Kids are still kids. There's food in their backpack and water, and they're scrunching up papers," Fetch said.

As students get older, Ness said, backpacks can become more personal storage than school storage, carrying items such as makeup, nail polish and hair dryers.

"They're using their backpacks more as purses and like storage than they are actually using them for school," she said.

How to carry the load safely

Experts recommend choosing a backpack that fits the child and has two broad, padded shoulder straps, a padded back, compartments to distribute weight and a waist or chest strap to redistribute the load. The American Academy of Pediatrics also recommends teaching children to pick up and carry backpacks safely, including bending at the knees rather than the waist when lifting heavier bags to avoid strain.

Backpacks with wheels can be helpful, especially for children with injuries, but experts say they may be problematic in schools with stairs or crowded walkways, where they can pose a tripping hazard.

Children should remove their backpacks before riding in a moving vehicle, Kendi said, because wearing one can interfere with how a seat belt works during a crash or sudden stop. Instead, place the backpack beside the child, even if leaving it on seems more convenient during drop-off.

"Don't wear it in a car or any form of transportation while that car is moving," Kendi said. "It's just incredibly dangerous."

Regularly cleaning out backpacks can also help reduce unnecessary weight and keep track of notes, permission slips and assignments. Some teachers recommend doing it weekly to catch missing work, spills from leaky water bottles and accumulating crumbs.

How heavy is too heavy?

The modern school backpack has evolved, but it hasn't necessarily gotten lighter. Whether students have textbooks, digital devices or both, they often are accompanied by notebooks, water

"It's worse if, for example, they trip and fall and they have a huge, heavy backpack on their back. Then that's just more weight that could increase the severity of an injury," she said.

Although 10% to 15% of a child's body weight is said. They rely instead on their devices, which can also become distractions.

"When considering the things going into their backpacks, how is it going to help them be successful in the classroom?" said Ness, who has been teaching for

"If you're talking heat waves, that nighttime low is incredibly important for determining total heat stress," Masters said. "So if it doesn't cool off at night, your body doesn't have time to readjust to all the heat."

As nighttime temperatures increase, more people die and lose sleep, studies show.

The years 2021 and 1936 tie for America's hottest summer, which is June through August. Through July, 2026 is a shade cooler than 2021, which was powered by record heat in June.

Because of climate change, Masters said, "this may be one of the coolest years we're gonna experience for the rest of our lives."

What's needed, Masters said, is "to stop burning so many fossil fuels. We also need to be spending money to adapt to the new climate that we've put in place."

Who is expected to testify in Las Vegas trial

Prosecutors expect to call between 35 and 45 witnesses, ranging from people who saw Shakur moments before he was shot to those who were in both Shakur and Davis' orbits at the time.

The witness list includes former Las Vegas Mayor Oscar Goodman and members of Shakur's family. However, not everyone on the list will testify.

Prosecutors expect to call Denvonta Lee, who was affiliated with the South Side Crips.

In grand jury testimony, Lee said that rival gangs, the Crips and Mob Piru, were tied to dueling record labels Death Row Records and Bad Boy Records.

Though he wasn't there that night, Lee also testified that Anderson didn't have a clear shot, so Smith took the gun and did the shooting. He also said Davis was in charge and gave the gun to Anderson, who then gave it to Smith.

Davis' defense attorney is expected to call a handful of witnesses, including one expert in the area of false confessions and coercive interrogation techniques.

Celebrities could be at the Tupac trial

One of the potential witnesses is in a California prison. Knight is serving a 28-year sentence for running over and killing a Compton businessman in January 2015. He previously said he would not testify in Davis' case.

As the only other living eyewitness who was in one of the two vehicles that night, Knight's testimony could be key.

Sanft, Davis' defense attorney, told The Associated Press that Knight would be a good witness for Davis' defense if he testifies.

Fans have also speculated whether Combs will testify, but his name isn't on any witness lists. He is serving a four-year prison sentence in New Jersey following his conviction of prostitution-related charges.

In his book, Davis alleged Combs wanted Knight and Shakur dead and offered Davis money to kill them. Combs has long denied any involvement.

Some U.S. Adults Are Using AI for Financial Guidance but Few Trust It, Gallup Poll Finds

By ADRIANA MORGA
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Some U.S. adults are using artificial intelligence for financial guidance, but it's far from the most trusted source of advice, according to a new Gallup survey conducted in partnership with Edward Jones, a financial services firm.

About 1 in 5 Americans who have sought financial advice in the past year turned to AI, the survey found. But among U.S. adults overall, only about 3 in 10 have "a great deal" or "some" confidence in its expertise for managing money, according to the survey, including just 3% who trust AI "a great deal."

The poll, which was conducted in the spring and looked at the views of adults who are at least 21, found a disconnect between the resources Americans trust for financial advice and the ones they actually rely on. About 8 in 10 U.S. adults have at least "some" confidence in financial advisers. But only about one-third of U.S. adults who sought financial advice turned to a professional financial adviser, with far more, 73%, saying they relied on their own internet research.

As the use of AI increases, financial experts say consumers should be cautious about fully trusting these tools. Using AI as a tool at the start of a learning journey and then combining this knowledge with other trusted sources can be the best way to engage with new and traditional financial guidance tools, said Taha Choukhmane, associate professor at MIT's Sloan School of Management.

"I would encourage people to use AI to explain and define," Choukhmane said. "If you're interested in knowing what the stock market is, what the difference between a mutual fund and an index fund is. Using AI to explain these concepts can be very useful because it can empower people to get the most out of these methods."

Most Americans have sought financial guidance from at least one source in the past year, the survey found. In addition to those who said they used internet research, financial advisers, or AI, 35% went to a parent, sibling, or relative, while 26% got information from news, media or social media. About 2 in 10 said they turned to a friend or an author, speaker, or influencer, and fewer relied on an employer or retirement plan provider, a robo-advisor or a teacher or professor.

Younger generations are more likely to say they've used AI for financial advice, while older adults are more likely to have turned to a professional financial adviser.

Affordability can often deter younger adults from hiring a financial adviser. While doing research online, asking family and friends and using AI can have minimal costs, hiring a professional can require a bigger financial commitment. About a quarter of Gen Z and millennial adults who looked for financial advice in the past year went to AI, compared to 16% of Gen Xers and just 7% of baby boomers. But while only 14% of Gen Z adults and 21% of millennials who sought guidance turned to a professional financial adviser, that rose to 34% of Gen X adults and about half, 55%, of baby boomers.

Since AI interacts with specific user prompts, the advice can vary depending on how questions are asked. But asking general questions about personal finance can help people understand complex financial terms. Choukhmane also recommends asking AI to provide references to trusted sources to verify the information provided.

While AI can be utilized for research, some financial experts are skeptical about the legal responsibilities of the technology. Certified financial planners have a legal responsibility to give the most fitting advice while AI tools don't. Ultimately, the decisions a person makes based on AI advice are their responsibility.

"Fiduciary responsibility is very real," said Bobbi Rebell, certified financial planner and founder of Financial Wellness Strategies. "There's no AI that is a fiduciary. It doesn't really know your life; it's not asking you all the questions."

SoCalGas Introduces Updated Uniforms to Help Customers Identify Workers

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - Updated Southern California Gas Co. employee uniforms intended to make workers easier for customers to identify will be phased into service throughout the utility's service territory.

The updated uniforms feature prominent company branding and employees' first names embroidered on shirts and coveralls, according to the utility. Employees also carry company-issued photo identification badges and use marked SoCalGas vehicles.

Customers who have questions about whether someone is a SoCalGas employee can ask the worker to show a company-issued photo identification badge, officials said.

The uniforms will be phased into service throughout the company's service territory beginning this month. Among the most visible changes will be a switch from SoCalGas' traditional blue uniforms to gray.

"Our employees perform critical work every day to help safely deliver service to millions of customers across Southern California," Rodger Schwecke, interim president of SoCalGas, said in a statement. "These updated uniforms provide enhanced safety features and functionality that support employees in the field, while also helping customers in identifying SoCalGas employees serving their communities."

The uniforms are made with lightweight flame-resistant materials intended to provide additional protection while supporting mobility for employees working in various field conditions, according to the utility.

SoCalGas said the uniforms were selected following employee feedback and an evaluation of operational needs. The uniform program also includes expanded sizing options and changes to garment fits.

SoCalGas employees wearing the uniforms may be conducting inspections, maintenance, construction work, emergency response activities and other service-related work, officials said.

The utility serves more than 21 million consumers across Central and Southern California.

most of that growth to higher spending per recipient — added benefits, higher drug prices and some demographic changes — rather than enrollment alone. People are seeing doctors more, and each visit is more expensive.

Medi-Cal cuts loom

Orlando and Lourdes are immigrants from El Salvador. CalMatters is using only their middle names because they fear being identified by immigration officials. Orlando has lived in Los Angeles for more than 20 years and works in construction with a work permit. Lourdes manages a store and is undocumented.

Recent federal immigration raids have already upended their lives. They've had to counsel their 6-year-old daughter that there are "good police" and "bad police." Now Lourdes, who needs radiation therapy for cancer, worries about losing her Medi-Cal insurance.

To slow Medi-Cal's growth, the state froze enrollment for undocumented adults starting in January; roughly 86,000 fewer undocumented immigrants are covered.

Starting next summer, immigrants without legal status will lose dental benefits and face new monthly premiums. These and cuts to coverage for some legal immigrants are expected to push about 800,000 people off insurance, according to the UC Berkeley Labor Center.

"We pay taxes every year. We deserve to have health insurance," Orlando said.

Services have also been curtailed more broadly. Last year, the state dropped coverage of weight-loss drugs like Ozempic for people who are simply overweight, keeping them only for more serious diagnoses like diabetes. This year, lawmakers scaled back wraparound services, including case management and medical meal-delivery services for low-income patients. They also reinstated a wealth test that caps how much savings an enrollee can have, regardless of their income, which advocates say punishes people for building a financial cushion.

The cuts have stirred outcry from lawmakers on the left, some of whom want the state to raise revenue through corporate taxes or other means rather than shrink Medi-Cal.

Sen. Lena Gonzalez, a Democrat from Long Beach and chair of the Latino Caucus, said she pressed Newsom and his team twice to save benefits for undocumented people.

"I said this is legacy work for you, and I don't want you to ever forget that," Gonzalez said. "For this to happen was just really surprising."

Linn Gish credited Newsom with supporting healthcare access "from day one" but called the recent rollbacks disappointing: "We hoped he would be a champion until the end."

Newsom's office declined an interview request. In a statement, the Department of Health Care Services emphasized that the Legislature voted to approve the budget that included the cuts and said Newsom remains committed to "responsibly" supporting universal coverage.

"Gov. Newsom has consistently highlighted California's coverage gains as central to his broader commitment to universal healthcare coverage and a more inclusive safety net," the statement said.

Federal challenges

Many Democrats, Newsom chief among them, blame President Donald Trump, whose One Big Beautiful Bill tax reform law rewrote Medi-Cal rules and cut federal funding to California. The law also let enhanced Affordable Care Act subsidies expire, contributing to a 140,000-person drop in Covered California enrollment. State officials estimate the Medi-Cal program could lose more than $30 billion annually once federal changes fully take effect in 2027.

The biggest change: Many adults must now prove they're working or volunteering at least 80 hours each month. Research has shown most low-income adults already meet requirements but lose coverage anyway because of bureaucratic errors.

"All it takes is one piece of lost mail and all of a sudden you lose coverage ... and things can snowball," said Dylan Roby, a health policy researcher and professor at UC Irvine.

Combined with shorter eligibility periods, the state estimates this will cause 1.3 million people to lose insurance in the next four years.

Those losses won't be spread evenly. Los Angeles and other parts of Southern California could see the steepest declines, according to the Labor Center, which also projects that Latino Californians will lose coverage faster than other groups.

Linnea Koopmans, CEO of Local Health Plans of California, which represents Medi-Cal insurers, said the combined cuts will create a two-tiered system of haves and have-nots.

"There's a lot at stake and a lot to be lost," Koopmans said.

But some Republican lawmakers counter that blaming Washington, D.C. is disingenuous. California has run deficits for four straight years, predating most federal restrictions, which haven't even taken effect yet.

Kellogg Says It's Removing Artificial Dyes From Cereals by the End of This Year

By DEE-ANN DURBIN AP Business Writer

WK Kellogg said Thursday that it will remove artificial colors from all its cereals by the end of this year.

The change comes a year ahead of schedule. Kellogg said last August that it would remove synthetic dyes from its cereals by the end of 2027.

But the company said Thursday it has identified fruit-and vegetable-based juices that will give cereals like Froot Loops and Apple Jacks their distinctive colors. The Battle Creek, Michigan-based company said it has also invested in equipment that will allow it to transition to natural colors.

The company said it is also removing BHT, an artificial preservative, from the small number of cereals that still contain it.

"More and more consumers are looking for foods made with simple, recognizable ingredients and we are proud to meet those expectations even sooner than planned," Kellogg's Chief Growth Officer Doug VanDeVelde said in a statement.

Kellogg has faced pressure for years to remove artificial ingredients from its cereals, which it has already done in other countries like Canada. In 2024, dozens of people rallied outside Kellogg's headquarters and delivered petitions with 400,000 signatures asking the company to remove artificial dyes and BHT.

That pressure has grown under President Donald Trump's health secretary, Robert F. Kennedy Jr., who has urged food companies to phase out petroleum-based artificial dyes. Last August, Kellogg also signed an agreement with Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton saying it would "permanently remove toxic dyes" from its cereals by the end of 2027.

Retailers are also forcing companies to act. Earlier this year, Target said it would stop selling cereals that contain artificial colors by the end of May. Walmart has also said it will remove artificial colors from its store brands by January 2027.

vice chair of the budget committee, put the current impact of federal healthcare restrictions at $3 billion out of a $351 billion state budget.

"It's difficult (to argue) that the woes are being caused by the federal government," Niello said, calling the state's spending problem structural. Revenues have grown, but spending has grown faster.

The current budget leaves the toughest healthcare decisions to the next governor.

"Gov. Newsom says he solved the deficit for the next governor. He hasn't," Niello said.

By CONNOR FORBES

Using all the tomatoes growing in my garden this year has been a challenge. I have been fortunate to have an absolute banner year, having harvested over 100 lbs to date. It's crazy over here. Because of so much tomato plenty, I have been looking for ways to use them in just about every meal. This recipe was a smash hit in my family. So good.

Feeds a family of 5

Ingredients

- 1.5 lb shrimp
- 1/2 red onion, chopped or 1/4 moons
- 2 cloves garlic, finely diced
- 16 oz cherry tomato
- 2 tbsp oil, split
- 1/2 cup basil chopped
- 16oz pasta
- 1/2 cup starchy pasta water
- ½ lemon squeezed for juice
- Salt and pepper to taste. Don't skimp on salt.

To Make

Cook pasta to directions on package. In a large sauté pan over medium heat add 1tbsp oil, onions, tomatoes, salt and pepper to taste. Cook 3-5 minutes stirring occasionally. Tomatoes should pop. Add garlic, cook 2 minutes. Remove all from pan and set aside. Add 1 tbsp oil and add shrimp. Cook until just barely pink. Add tomato, onion, garlic mix back in, add pasta water, and basil. Turn heat down to medium low. Simmer 5 minutes. Add cooked pasta in and mix thoroughly. Finish with basil and parmesan. EAT!

A SIMPLE NO-COOK FOR Tomato Sauce PEAK SUMMER HEAT, FROM MERYL FEINSTEIN

By MERYL FEINSTEIN
Voracious

When tomatoes are at their peak — and it's too hot to turn on the oven — this simple, no-cook sauce from my cookbook "Pasta Every Day" is what I come back to time and again. It's often called pomodoro crudo and served with very thin spaghetti, though you'll find many variations, including those with onions, capers, olives and local cheese.

In that spirit, don't hesitate to make this your own.

You can use any flavorful tomato here, from heirloom to plum to cherry. Remove the skins and seeds of the larger varieties if you'd like, or keep it rustic and leave them intact (I prefer the latter). The pasta will soak up the garlicky tomato juices over time, meaning it makes for great (dare I say better?) leftovers and picnic fare.

NO-COOK TOMATO & BASIL SAUCE

Serves 4 (enough for about 22 ounces of fresh pasta or 16 ounces of dried pasta)

Ingredients

2¼ pounds ripe, small tomatoes

4 garlic cloves, finely chopped

1½ loosely packed cups fresh basil leaves, roughly torn, plus more for serving

Kosher salt

1/3 to 1/2 cup high quality extra-virgin olive oil, plus more for serving

Finely grated Parmigiano-Reggiano or Pecorino Romano, for serving (optional)

Prepare the Sauce

Halve or quarter the tomatoes and combine with the garlic and basil in a large serving bowl. Season generously with salt, then drizzle in the oil. Stir to combine. Leave the sauce to sit, covered, for at least 1 hour, ideally in a warm, sunny place.

To Serve

Cook your pasta of choice to your liking — this is not a time for undercooking and finishing in the sauce. Add the pasta to the sauce and stir to combine. Finish with another drizzle of oil, more basil and a shower of cheese if you'd like. If you can bear it, let the pasta marinate in the sauce for 15 minutes before serving.

Tip

If using larger tomatoes, I often peel and seed them before chopping. To do so, bring a pot of water to a boil and fill a large bowl with ice water. With a paring knife, score the bottoms of the tomatoes with a small X, just piercing the skin. Drop them into the water and cook until the skin near the X starts to loosen, about 2 minutes. Use a slotted spoon to transfer them to the ice bath. When the tomatoes are cool, peel away the skins. Remove the pulp and seeds and roughly chop the flesh.

"ONE NIGHT ONLY"

By BOB GARVER

It takes a very generous suspension of disbelief to enjoy "One Night Only." The film is set in a not-too-distant future where premarital sex is outlawed, save for one night a year. Comparisons to "The Purge" are inevitable, which to me raises an interesting question: Which would lead to more violent crime in this country – one night of legalized violent crime, or gradually-building sexual frustration on all but one night?

Never mind that such laws would never in a million years be passed, enforced, or obeyed. The characters in this film – which takes place in a fully-recognizable New York City and not some bleak dystopian fantasy world – accept that the law is set in stone, and occasionally complain about it, but we never see any serious resistance. That's a big strike against the film right off the bat – it's hard to identify with anyone in this world because everybody is inherently ridiculous enough to go along with this law.

To be fair, this film is not about the 364 days a year where this law wouldn't work, it's about the one upside, the lone night where all the single people are allowed to go crazy. And go crazy they do, with almost every shot in the movie showing people hooking up, in at least the background. Of course, it's all in a tame R-rated way with the naughtiest bits out of view of the camera. I shudder to think what this movie would have looked like if it took the X-rated approach, though that movie would have at least been memorable. As it is, I probably won't forget the weird premise anytime soon, but I'll probably have forgotten the title of this movie by year's end.

The movie follows traditional rom-com characters Owen (Callum Turner) and Allie (Monica Barbaro). He's a pizza cook who works too hard. She's a singer who has stage fright. He has a girlfriend (Maya Hawke) who treats him badly and tells him he's on his own for finding a partner for tonight. She's not that serious about finding someone. Both have friends and family who tell them that they need to lighten up and have some fun. They bump into each other a few times while on separate adventures, initially having animosity that turns into a enough leads. I was digging their chemistry and interactions with one another. They're basically having a PG-13 relationship while to what else the movie has to offer.

The bad news about "One Night Only" is pretty much everything else about the movie. I can poke holes in the premise all day, but the real problem is that the film wants to be both raunchy and edgy, but it can only manage the former. Sex gags permeate the movie (let's just say it's really hard to procure protection at the last minute in this world), but they're oddly toothless. Director Will Gluck previously made "Anyone But You," an R-rated romantic comedy that I thought would have worked better without its cruder elements. This movie doesn't work because it doesn't have much cruder elements. Even though I champion the film's cleaner moments, they would mean more if they were contrasted with dirty moments that were actually good at being dirty.

Grade: C-

rivalry before considering that maybe they should be together. Will they become a couple, physically or otherwise?

The good news is that Turner and Barbaro are sweet the world around them is super R-rated (though not as "hard-R" as it probably wants to be). It's all corny, in traditional rom-com fashion, but mildly engaging, especially when compared

"One Night Only" is rated R for sexual material, language, and brief nudity. Its running time is 102 minutes.

'Spider-Man: Brand New Day' Grosses $145M in Second Weekend

LOS ANGELES (CNS) – "Spider-Man: Brand New Day" raked in $145 million in its second weekend in North American theaters to easily retain the No. 1 spot at the box office, according to industry estimates released Sunday.

The Sony/Columbia Pictures/Marvel Studios release, which stars Tom

Holland and Zendaya and was directed by Destin Daniel Cretton, has already made about $1.66 billion in worldwide ticket sales, and claimed the third-best second weekend domestically behind 2015's "Star Wars: The Force Awakens" and 2019's "Avengers: Endgame." "The Odyssey" was second with $31.5 million in its fourth weekend, and has made $461 million domestically and $1.1 billion worldwide.

The romantic comedy "One Night Only" opened with $5.7 million for a distant third place, Rentrak reported.

The comedy "Super Troopers 3" opened with $4 million, followed by "Toy Story 5," which grossed $3.9 million Friday through Sunday in its eighth weekend in theaters.

"Minions & Monsters" was sixth with $3.5 million in its sixth week.

Rounding out the top 10 releases were "Moana" ($2.8 million), "Ice Cream Man" ($2 million), "The Invite" ($717,568) and "Cat-VideoFest 2026" ($568,414).

This weekend's overall three-day box office haul was estimated at $203 million. The year-to-date total is $6.608 billion -- up 18.5% from the figure at this time last year, according to Rentrak.

HOW TO PROTECT YOUR ROSES FROM BLACK SPOT DISEASE

By JESSICA DAMIANO
Associated Press

Few garden plants attract as much admiration as roses. They're as beautiful in the garden as they are in a vase, and their flowers are almost universally a symbol of love.

Unfortunately, they don't always grow without challenges. Wilting, infestations and infections are not uncommon. And none are more dreaded than the often-deadly black spot disease.

Although there is no cure for black spot, it can be effectively managed — and future growth protected — with a bit of vigilance.

What to do if you see those telltale black spots

Caused by the fungus Diplocarpon rosae, black spot disease causes telltale black spots on foliage. Left unchecked, the often-fatal infection will diminish blooms and severely weaken plants, which increases their susceptibility to other diseases, pest infestations and winter injury.

If your plant is affected, prune away all infected leaves and branches and rake all fallen plant parts from the soil. Then, place the debris in a sealed bag and dispose of it in the trash; leaving it on the soil will lead to reinfection. Avoid doing this when the weather is humid, as spores spread rapidly when exposed to moisture.

There are many fungicides indicated for the prevention and treatment of black spot.

The most effective contain the chemical mancozeb. After cleaning up around the plants, apply the fungicide according to the package directions (probably three applications spaced 10 days apart). The fungicide should stop disease progression, and keeping the ground clear of affected leaves will prevent spores from making themselves at home in the soil, where they would otherwise reinfect the plants.

Alternatively, Neem oil and copper fungicide are among the most environmentally friendly treatments for black spot. Apply after cleaning up around plants, as above, and take care to follow package directions carefully.

Next spring, when leaf buds begin to open, apply a preventive fungicide, such as Neem oil, copper or one containing the active ingredient potassium bicarbonate.

Spraying a solution of 1 tablespoon each of baking soda and ultrafine horticultural oil diluted in a gallon of water can also be a preventive against black spot and other fungal and mildew diseases. Don't be tempted to use more baking soda than recommended, however. Its salt content can injure plants if overused.

Planting onions or tomatoes near roses will also help discourage black spot fungal infections.

Following best practices can go a long way, too: Space plants sufficiently to allow light and air to circulate between plants and into inner branches. Water deeply only to black spot.

Selecting resistant varieties, especially in humid conditions, is the best way to avoid the disease. Shrub roses such as those in the Knockout and Oso Easy families, are among once a week (less during rainy periods) using a soaker hose, which directs water straight to roots and keeps foliage dry. Overhead sprinklers and other methods that wet leaves encourage the growth of fungal diseases such as powdery mildew, in addition the most immune, but there are some cultivars of other species that offer varying degrees of resistance, too. When shopping for plants, you'll find resistance information on labels and catalog descriptions.

Citrus-Stamped Tote Bags — From Kitchen Counter to Tote Bag

By MIA ROTELL and LAUREN ROTELL

Citrus isn't just for the fruit bowl anymore — take any lemons, limes, or oranges that have been sitting for a while and use them in a new, fun way! Stamped tote bags are a great way to end summer with a bang. Simply stamp your painted citrus onto the tote — and watch citrus become your new favorite accessory.

What you need:

- At least one lemon or orange
- Paint

- A paintbrush
- A tote bag
- Two paper grocery bags
- A cutting board
- A knife
- About five paper towels

How to make it:

Step 1: Cut your lemon or orange in half.

Step 2: Over the sink, gently squeeze the lemon half to get some of the juice out. Rinse the lemon as you go and pat it dry with a paper towel. You'll know the half is ready when it isn't as flat and has uneven ridges where the juice was.

Step 3: Slide a flat paper bag into the tote bag. Set the other one next to you.

Step 4: Pour paint onto the paper bag next to you. The amount you use depends on the size of your project.

Step 5: Take the prepped half and stamp it evenly in the paint.

Step 6: Place it in the desired spot on the bag. Push down on all sides of the citrus to evenly disperse the paint.

Step 7: Pull the citrus up and place it peel-side up on the bag next to you.

Step 8: If any parts aren't connecting or aren't filled in the way you want, dip your brush in the paint to make the lines thicker or connect some of the thinner lines.

Step 9: Repeat steps five through eight until you have your desired look!

Tip: To get a thinner look like the yellow one in the picture, while prepping the citrus slice, dig out the juicy parts with your finger, but leave the thin white pieces that connect to the center. Never place the halves on their side — the paint will go into the slice, and the stamp won't be as strong!

Jackie had been receiving medical treatment for three weeks at the Ojai Raptor Center, where she was treated for a variety of ailments including anemia. Despite undergoing a blood transfusion and oxygen therapy, her condition worsened and the center announced the animal's death Monday.

"We know this news will be deeply felt by the many thousands of people around the world who have followed her journey, hoped alongside us, prayed for her, and supported the people caring for her," the center's statement said. "Our team is heartbroken. It has been an extraordinary privilege to care for her."

The California Department of Fish and Wildlife is caring for the remains.

Among those who enjoyed monitoring Jackie's nests from afar was biologist Kelly Sorenson, executive director of the Ventana Wildlife Society in central California. While his group was not involved with the Big Bear eagles, he sees their breeding as emblematic of the comeback the species has made in the state over the past decades.

American bald eagles teetered on the brink of extinction until the pesticide DDT was banned in the 1970s and other protections were established, leading the species to rebound and be removed from the federal endangered list.

"You want to see a success story like that," Sorenson said Monday. "Having access to a live cam to see the nesting first hand is very powerful. It brings people in on an emotional level."

Former Gang Leader Accused of Ordering Tupac Shakur’s Killing Goes on Trial.

By JESSICA HILL Associated Press

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The trial of a man accused of orchestrating the killing of Tupac Shakur started this week with jury selection, almost 30 years after the rap legend was gunned down near the Las Vegas Strip.

Attorneys began vetting potential jurors Monday for the case, which centers on one of the hip-hop world’s defining moments and enduring mysteries. Seven potential jurors were asked to return Thursday afternoon as attorneys continue the selection process Tuesday and Wednesday. A total of 16 jurors will be selected for the monthlong trial.

Duane “Keffe D” Davis, 63, has pleaded not guilty to murder with a deadly weapon with the intent to promote, further or assist a criminal gang in the rapper’s death. At the time, Davis was a leader of the South Side Compton Crips in California.

Family members of Shakur were among those who gathered at a Las Vegas courthouse for the beginning of jury selection, which could continue through much of this week.

“Whoever had anything to do with it, whoever set it up, whoever had any hand in it should be locked up in prison,” said Shakur’s cousin, Kendrick Lesane.

Thirty years after his death, Shakur remains a cultural icon and is considered one of the most influential and versatile rappers of all time.

Shakur’s death at age 25 came as his fourth solo album had sold 5 million copies.

He was in a BMW on Sept. 7, 1996, with music mogul Marion “Suge” Knight when a white Cadillac pulled up at a red light. Shakur, who was in the passenger seat, was shot multiple times and died six days later, while Knight survived.

The case went cold until recent years, when public statements and a tell-all memoir from Davis in 2019 revived it. He was arrested in 2023.

Trial is unlikely to answer who killed Tupac Shakur

Davis sat next to his attorney during the trial in Clark County District Court while Nevada Judge Carli Kierny asked a group of 75 potential jurors whether they have any medical issues, language barriers or conflicts with serving in a trial scheduled to last about a month.

Binu Palal, the county’s chief deputy district attorney, listed names of people involved in the case to see if potential jurors were familiar with them, including Knight and Sean “Diddy” Combs.

Questions posed to the potential jurors included their favorite books and movies, if they had any connections to a gang, and whether they had listened to Shakur’s music. One man said he used to.

Meanwhile, Davis sat quietly and appeared calm, occasionally whispering to his defense attorney, Michael Sanft, as jurors responded to questions.

Davis said that if he’s convicted, he wants the judge to decide his sentence, not the jury.

Prosecutors are not accusing Davis of pulling the trigger that night, and the trial likely won’t confirm who did. Instead, prosecutors plan to show that Davis made the calls that led to Shakur’s death and provided the gun.

Davis co-wrote the memoir “Compton Street Legends,” which vividly describes the shooting. The book says

Davis obtained a handgun from an associate and tossed it into the back seat of the Cadillac but did not say who fired the fatal shots.

Orlando “Baby Lane” Anderson, Davis’ nephew, has long been considered the suspect who pulled the trigger, but charges were never brought against him. He died two years after Shakur in an unrelated gang shootout in Compton.

The street address and other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 13458 ASPEN GROVE ROAD, CORONA, CA 92880 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. Said sale will be held, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession, condition, or encumbrances, including fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust, to pay the remaining principal sums of the note(s) secured by said Deed of Trust. The undersigned or its predecessor caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (855) 313-3319 or visit this Internet website www.clearreconcorp.com, using the file number assigned to this case 127423-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: Effective January 1, 2021, you may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (855) 313-3319, or visit this internet website www.clearreconcorp.com, using the file number assigned to this case 127423-CA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the WILL or estate, or both of RONALD LEE HARBER.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by SHANNON DAVIS in the Superior Court of California, County of RIVERSIDE.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that SHANNON DAVIS be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 09/02/26 at 8:30AM in Dept. 11 located at 4050 MAIN STREET, RIVERSIDE, CA 92501

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property.
NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (855) 313-3319 or visit this Internet website www.clearrecon-corp.com, using the file number assigned to this case 149020-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: Effective January 1, 2021, you may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction.
There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (855) 313-3319, or visit this internet website www.
clearreconcorp.com, using the file number assigned to this case 149020-CA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. FOR SALES

The property offered for sale excludes all funds held on account by the property receiver, if applicable. If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. Notice to Potential Bidders If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a Trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a Trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same Lender may hold more than one mortgage or Deed of Trust on the property. Notice to Property Owner The sale date shown on this Notice of Sale may be postponed one or more times by the Mortgagee, Beneficiary, Trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about Trustee Sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may visit the Internet Website address www.insourcelogic.com or call In Source Logic LLC at 702-659-7766 for information regarding the Trustee's Sale for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case, CA08000281-26-1. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. Notice to Tenant NOTICE TO TENANT FOR FORECLOSURES AFTER JANUARY 1, 2021 You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 702-659-7766, or visit this internet website www.insourcelogic.com, using the file number assigned to this case CA08000281-26-1 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. As AI Grips World, the Thrill of Collecting Vintage Computers Is GROWING

By TERRY CHEA Associated Press

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Software engineer Josh Dersch loves old computers. He spends countless hours tinkering in his garage, trying to coax decades-old machines back to life. He estimates he owns more than 200 vintage computers and devices in his Seattle home.

"It's always been fascinating to me to see the origins of things," Dersch said. "It's a fun challenge to debug and repair. You can understand the entire system from top to bottom."

Dersch is part of a growing community of vintage computer collectors who are preserving the classic machines that helped launch the digital revolution. While Silicon Valley has since moved on to shaping the future of artificial intelligence, these hardware enthusiasts up a low-def game of "Pong" or "Space Invaders."

"The enthusiasm for the history of computers and all the stuff around it is growing," said Erik Klein, president of the Vintage Computer Federation, which organizes an annual festival at the Computer History Museum in Mountain View in the heart of Silicon Valley.

Vintage computer festivals bring collectors together

This year more than 3,500 people attended the two-day Vintage Computer Festival in early August that celebrated the 50th anniversary of Apple, founded in 1976 in nearby Cupertino, Calif. It featured a panel with co-founders Steve Wozniak and Ronald Wayne reminiscing about the company's early days as a scrappy start-up led by the late Steve Jobs.

More than a dozen such gatherings have since sprung up in cities across North computer systems that they have painstakingly restored to their original working condition, allowing attendees to play with the computers built long before the internet, social media and AI transformed the world.

Restoring the 'grandfather of the modern computer'

Dersch drove down from Seattle to showcase the pride of his collection: the Xerox Alto. He spent years restoring what's considered "the grandfather of the modern computer," which was developed at the pioneering Xerox Palo Alto Research Center in the 1970s.

The Alto was one of the earliest computers to move beyond text on screen and use the mouse and graphical user interface — such as windows, icons and cursors — that became the industry standard. The model famously inspired Jobs and Bill Gates to incorporate the technologies in their early products.

Dersch's exhibit featured a fully functioning Xerox Alto workstation with its boxy vertical monitor, chunky keyboard and mouse, as well as pizza-sized spinning disks that store tiny amounts of data by modern standards.

"It's fun to share what I've done with people. It's fun to share in what other people have done," Dersch said. "Also, there's a consignment area where I can buy more junk to take home with me, so that's always fun."

Klein, a Silicon Valley software engineering manager, was a passionate collector until his hobby overwhelmed his home and family life. He had as many as 150 computer systems — complete with accessories, documents and packaging — crammed into his closets and garage.

He said his beloved collection had become an "albatross" and he worried about burdening his family. So he started selling and giving away his machines until he only had a few favorites left at home.

Similar events for collectors spread around the world

Now Klein channels his passion for vintage computers into organizing festivals, repair workshops, swap meets and other events as president of the Vintage Computer Federation.

"So it's really about evangelizing that history and evangelizing this hobby of maintaining, collecting and enjoying this vintage technology," Klein said.

Sellam Ismail is thrilled to see the collector community develop and mature since he organized the first festival in 1997, drawing about 150 hobbyists to a venue east of San Francisco. He ran the events for a decade.
