

ONE ATTACK, MANY AMERICAS: Why 9/11 and Its Many Grievs Land Differently 25 Years Later

By DEEPTI HAJELA Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — When the planes crashed and the buildings fell on that sunny September morning 25 years ago, the shock waves of dismay and grief went far past downtown New York City, rural western Pennsylvania and just outside Washington, D.C.

They radiated through every part of the United States in communities large and small, tearing at Americans' sense of safety and their place in the world. Hearts were broken across the nation, not just of those who lost their loved ones but among strangers who mourned for them, the Sept. 11 attacks leaving no one unaffected in an unwanted moment of horrifying togetherness.

A quarter of a century later, the effects linger. We all live in a post-9/11 world, with its security strictures and surveillance. But here's the thing: Americans don't all live in the SAME one. What the attacks and their aftermath have come to mean isn't a single viewpoint shared by everyone, for reasons chronological, political and personal.

It's a tapestry of meaning and grief as varied as the nation in which 9/11 took place.

So many things affect our understanding

It's somewhat inevitable. After all, the mere passage of time means tens of millions of young Americans have been born since then. For them, 9/11 is something to learn about in history lessons.

But people's views of 9/11 and its aftermath have also been shaped by human factors like policies and actions taken by those in power. And the America that was attacked was already a nation with its own history and tensions, with stress points of dispute and disagreement put under additional strain by the catastrophic event.

"The same event, whether it's a disaster or a shock or even the recovery process is completely different depending on your network," says Daniel Aldrich, a professor at Northeastern University who studies communities and resilience.

Those networks can exist in a range of ways and layers. Among them: those who lost loved ones; those who spent months clearing the rubble and debris from ground zero; those who were motivated to join the military; those who lost jobs in hard-hit industries like tourism and air transportation; those who came from certain countries and communities viewed with heightened suspicion after the attacks.

Why a Bill to Juice Condo Construction Died Even Though California Lawmakers Voted for It

BY BEN CHRISTOPHER, Calmatters

A bill that supporters hoped would kickstart California's moribund condo industry and boost the scarce number of entry-level homeownership opportunities, died under mysterious circumstances at the stroke of midnight on Tuesday after failing to get a final vote before the end of the legislative session.

Assembly Bill 1903 by Oakland Democratic lawmaker Buffy Wicks would have changed the way that disputes between homeowners and builders over purportedly shoddy construction are resolved in a way the bill's author hoped would result in fewer defect lawsuits and less developer skittishness around building condos.

Backed by real estate interests, "Yes In My Backyard" advocates and a bevy of city governments, the bill sailed through the Senate without objection on Monday after 11:15 p.m.

But in a legislative mystery with weighty implications for California's dysfunctional housing market, it never made its way back to the Assembly. At midnight, the legislative session officially came to a close. The bill had already passed the Assembly the prior week. But lacking an obligatory "concurrence" vote needed to lock in the final amendments, the bill died quietly without facing a single "no" vote in either chamber.

In a statement released on Tuesday afternoon, Wicks said that she was "incredibly disappointed and frustrated" that the bill "was ultimately held by the

How a Library Card Can Take You Beyond the Pages

By MIA ROTELL

Owning a library card means access to books, movies, Wi-Fi and so much more. But one perk of having a library card goes much deeper than the shelves.

Did you know that public libraries across California can offer their cardholders access to free passes for California state parks — all through a library card?

“Something we offer here (at the City of Perris Public Library) is the park pass,” said Ashley Horton, a librarian at the Perris Public Library.

Horton said library cardholders can check out a

California State Library Parks Pass, which provides free vehicle day-use entry at more than 200 participating California State Park units throughout California.

The program was established as part of California's 2021–22 state budget and is part of Governor Gavin Newsom's “Outdoors for All” initiative, which aims to make California's parks and open spaces more accessible to people — regardless of their ZIP code or income.

The pass can be used at participating parks throughout the state, including San Clemente State Beach, California Citrus State Historic Park and Salton Sea State Recreation Area.

However, the pass does not provide free camping. It is specifically for vehicle day-use entry and also does not cover certain additional fees, such as special events, tours, boat use or other supplemental charges.

The pass can also be used for multiple day-use visits to participating state parks while it is checked out — which is subject to the specific library's checkout period and the program's rules.

For library cardholders, the program offers another way to turn a simple library card into a gateway to the outdoors. It provides opportunities to explore beaches, mountains, deserts, historic sites and other state park destinations — without paying the regular vehicle day-use fee!

Port of LA Caps Busiest Three Months with High Cargo Volume in August

(WILMINGTON) - Waterfront workers processed 955,907 twenty-foot equivalent units in August at the Port of Los Angeles, capping what officials have described as the busiest three-month period in the port's history.

The port's executive director, Gene Seroka, announced Wednesday that workers processed more than 2.9 million TEUs across docks throughout June, July and August. August volume was 6% above the port's five-year average for the month and on par with figures from last year.

“We've put together an exceptionally strong summer in Los Angeles,” Seroka said during his monthly virtual briefing.

CALIFORNIA KILLS BILL REGULATING FLOCK CAMERAS EVEN AS PUBLIC RAGE GROWS

California lawmakers have tried and failed five times since 2022 to regulate technology that tracks license plates. Meanwhile, a national backlash against the tech has gained momentum. A protester holds a sign while demonstrating on the corner of Broadway and 14th Street in Oakland on Aug. 20, 2026. Protesters gathered to call for a ban on automated license plate reader technology.

BY KHARI JOHNSON, CalMatters

Amid a growing nationwide backlash against license-plate cameras, California this week, for the fifth year running, failed to enact regulations on the technology.

A bill in the Legislature would have strengthened privacy protections on how license plate data is collected and shared. It also would have guarded against misuse of automated license plate readers by law enforcement officers.

But after clearing the state senate the bill was stopped in the Assembly by majority leader Cecilia Aguiar-Curry on Monday, the final day the Legislature meets this year, before it could be introduced for a floor vote. It was one of a handful of bills that enjoyed strong support from lawmakers and looked poised to pass but died under mysterious circumstances.

All the bills California lawmakers have proposed since 2022 to reform or update regulations on license plate tracking by law enforcement agencies have failed to pass or become law. A similar bill passed last year but was vetoed by Gov. Gavin Newsom.

“It's a really disappointing outcome at a time when there is bipartisan concern about this mass surveillance tool,” UC Berkeley Center for Law & Technology codirector Catherine Crump told CalMatters. Crump testified in support of the bill in July.

Lawmakers pushing for more regulation of the readers point to police misuse of the data they collect, including illegally using it to help federal immigration enforcers and stalking people.

But law enforcement agencies say many of the proposed regulations would cripple a tool they say has helped solve a wide range of crimes.

“We were concerned that this bill was going to limit the utility of ALPR data to solve crimes, find missing persons, exonerate innocent individuals, and so the fact that it did not pass, we're glad for that,” California State Sheriff's Association legislative director Cory Salzillo told CalMatters.

locate criminal suspects or missing persons, but it's also been tied to police misconduct and immigration enforcement in violation of state law. More than 230 California police or sheriff's departments currently use license plate readers, according to bill author Senator Sabrina Cervantes, a Democrat from Riverside.

“It's a really disappointing outcome at a time when there is bipartisan concern about this mass surveillance tool.”

~ CATHERINE CRUMP, UC BERKELEY CENTER FOR LAW & TECHNOLOGY

Mounting privacy concerns

Failure to pass the bill or even bring it up for a final vote comes at a time when opposition to license plate readers is growing in and beyond California. Police in Los Angeles and Redwood City and elected officials in California localities like El Cerrito and Campbell have ended contracts with the license plate reader company Flock Safety in recent weeks. Nationwide, more than 200 cities or law enforcement agencies ended license plate reader contracts in August, more than any other month since 2021, according to Secure Justice, a group led by Brian Hofer, a Bay Area privacy advocate who was held at gunpoint after a license plate reader incorrectly told sheriff's deputies he was driving a stolen car.

License plate readers use cameras and artificial intelligence to log the plate numbers of passing cars. The readers are joined into networks used by law enforcement and information from them can be shared locally or nationwide. The tech can “It's unfortunate that Senate Bill 1013 did not get the chance to be voted on before the deadline passed, but I look forward to continuing to fight for the privacy rights of Californians next year,” she wrote in a statement shared with CalMatters.

Cervantes argued in July that protections in the bill are necessary to prevent unlawful data sharing, because license plate readers routinely collect information about the movement of millions of law-abiding Californians, and to stop other forms of police misconduct. Lawmakers say license plate readers were unlawfully used by law enforcement officers to stalk or harass private citizens in Los Angeles, Marin, Orange, Riverside, Sacramento, San Diego, and Shasta counties.

Enforcement agencies outside of California have put the technology to even more controversial use. Oakland activist Crystal Zermeno, who attended a protest against the technology outside City Hall last month, said she's concerned about the tech being used to track women who get abortions or by federal authorities. After Cervantes' bill died, she asked, “How could we not as a state have the political will to do this in a moment when all of these [federal immigration enforcement] attacks are happening and we have limited

Community Colleges Suddenly Oppose Plan to Let Them Offer More Bachelor's Degrees

BY MIKHAIL ZINSHTEYN,
CalMatters

California's community colleges have been trying for several years to offer more bachelor's degrees. This year, they put their hopes in two sweeping bills designed to help them do that. But lawmakers made massive, last-minute changes that prompted the state's community colleges to now oppose the legislation.

The abrupt change of heart, spurred by new limits on how much the colleges could grow their bachelor's programs, didn't influence the outcomes of the bills, Senate Bill 960 by Sen. Christopher Cabaldon, a Democrat from Napa, and Assembly Bill 2694 by David Alvarez, also a Democrat from Chula Vista. Both passed this week by wide margins in the Legislature and now head to Gov. Gavin Newsom's desk.

In recent years, Newsom vetoed — colleges would be able to offer an additional two to 12 bachelor's degrees starting in 2028 depending on their students' certificate, degree and transfer completion rates. No college district could propose more than three new degrees per year and districts would need to prove that there's a workforce need in their region to justify the creation of a bachelor's degree. That's a claim the state's labor secretary would step in to validate if the California State University system objects, as has regularly occurred in the pitched policy disputes between the community colleges and the university.

The rules would apply to new degrees offered after 2028; existing community college bachelor's degrees are grandfathered in. Today, 49 colleges either offer or will soon offer 66 bachelor's degrees.

Cabaldon called the bills a support a process that is not completely understood or vetted at the last minute, and so that's just not great policymaking," said Larry Galizio, president and CEO of the Community College League of California, an association representing community college presidents and board leaders.

Why bachelor's degrees have been so contentious

The community colleges' sudden shift is another turn in an effort that has produced near-constant turmoil.

Historically, the community colleges and Cal State have clashed over which bachelor's degrees the colleges can teach. A 2021 state law was supposed to establish peace in the realm, but the colleges and Cal State regularly disagreed on a key concept — degree duplication. That law said the colleges couldn't create bachelor's degrees that are already offered by any Cal State or University of California campus, even if a community college is hundreds of miles from the nearest public university.

Colleges

and several lawmakers called that an unfair arrangement, since many community college students can't relocate to a distant university. In some instances, community colleges created those degrees anyway, over the objections of the Cal State system, EdSource reported.

Backers and foes of more bachelor's degrees at community colleges point to competing data.

A recent report found that 29 of the state's 116 community colleges are located at least 25 miles from a public university.

Their students are "place-bound" or can't easily move from the area their community colleges serve. Roughly 157,000 students attend these colleges.

Some students say they need their local community colleges to offer bachelor's degrees because local employers want those — certificates or associate degrees aren't enough. But under existing law, those colleges cannot provide them because a Cal State 500 miles away offers that degree already.

On the other hand, community colleges post low transfer rates — just 21% of students who wanted to transfer do so after four years, the state auditor reported. This may indicate a broken transfer system that could be remedied if more colleges could offer bachelor's. Or it may demonstrate that colleges aren't ready to widen their academic offerings because most also post low certificate and associate degree completion rates.

How the bills address duplication

In response, Alvarez and Cabaldon wrote comprehensive bills this year to allow colleges to create bachelor's degrees, even if they resemble degrees already offered by Cal State campuses. The community colleges were on board with those versions while the Cal State system was opposed; the system instead wanted more streamlined pathways for students to start their studies at a community college and earn a bachelor's at a Cal State campus. Others in the system have feared that an expansion of community college bachelor's degrees would siphon away students and crucial tuition revenue at a time when some Cal States are battling enrollment declines.

The new combined bills allow community colleges to propose bachelor's degrees even if a nearby Cal State offers a similar program, but only if that Cal State program admits fewer than 75% of applicants from that nearby community college three consecutive years. The community college would still need to submit a workforce needs report and be governed by the degree caps also spelled out in the bills. That workforce need could be that employers are having difficulty filling positions that require a bachelor's degree, the two bills say.

And unlike the current policy, in which there's no arbiter to settle an impasse between community colleges and the Cal States over duplication, a review by the state's secretary of labor siding with the colleges would remove the Cal State system's challenge to the degree. But districts face consequences for being wrong: If the labor secretary sides with Cal State, the district is barred from submitting an application for a similar program for five years.

The community colleges are generally barred from duplicating a degree a UC campus offers. Only written consent from a UC would clear the way for duplication, the bills say.

Why community colleges are now opposed

The newly created caps on the number of degrees community college districts can offer are a problem for the community college system. Districts will be judged by their student completion rates and how those rates compare to the statewide average.

The bills "would make a district's eligibility depend partly on how its performance compares with every other district in the state," a letter of opposition to Cabaldon reads from Sonya Christian, chancellor of California Community Colleges. "A district could improve its own student outcomes" but still have the same caps apply to them, "or even see its eligibility change simply because the statewide average changed," she wrote.

Galizio of the Community College League also takes issue with the caps on degree creation. He said in an interview that campuses with low graduation rates typically serve more low-income students, the same students who need more bachelor's degrees to get a leg up in the bills that sought to expand the community colleges' ability to issue more bachelor's degrees. Still, Newsom's office was involved in the revision of the latest bills, Cabaldon said in a Senate floor speech Monday.

"This is the first time that we've been able to engage in productive conversation between the houses and the executive branch," he said.

Combined, the bills introduce new mechanisms for determining when colleges can create bachelor's degrees and how many they can offer. The new approach has accountability metrics breakthrough that would bring long-sought clarity.

"This will give us peace," he said in a phone interview. "That doesn't mean everybody's going to agree all of the time, but it does mean the endless war and bickering and fighting and more and more legislation will come to an end."

Community college leaders said the amendments are too last-minute, too unclear and too complicated, even if they appreciate the effort by the Legislature to wrangle the thorny issues.

"We're being asked to ...

Today in History

On Sept. 11, 2001, nearly 3,000 people were killed as 19 al-Qaida hijackers seized control of four jetliners, sending two of the planes into New York's World Trade Center, one into the Pentagon in Arlington, Virginia, and the fourth into a field in western Pennsylvania. It remains the deadliest terror attack in history.

In 2008, presidential candidates John McCain and Barack Obama put aside politics as they visited ground zero together on the anniversary of 9/11 to honor its victims.

In 2012, a mob armed with guns and grenades launched a nightlong attack on a U.S. diplomatic outpost and a CIA annex in Benghazi, Libya, killing U.S. Ambassador Chris Stevens and three other Americans.

In 2023, over 4,000 people died and thousands more were missing after heavy rain from Mediterranean Storm Daniel caused two dams to collapse, flooding the city of Derna, Libya.

Different networks overlap in Jenna McPartland's family. She was expecting her first child with her husband, Ariel Jacobs, who was killed at the World Trade Center. She gave birth days later to their son, Gabriel, whose life was irrevocably altered by an event he didn't experience.

In the years since, McPartland remarried twice, had two younger sons with no biological tie to their older brother's dad and has been a stepmom to two teenagers for the last decade. Even as she added new chapters to her life, she made sure Gabi was connected to his father's family, and that her younger sons also knew that Sept. 11 was part of their larger family story.

"My middle boy wrote his college entrance essay on being the child of a 9/11 family, but not being the 9/11 kid. And how he wouldn't exist had his brother's dad not died," says McPartland, 52, a chef and restaurant owner in Fairfield, Connecticut. "They all acknowledge it in different ways, they feel it in different ways, they sense it in their lives in different ways."

Varied events play a role in the impact on people

Also playing a role in the impact, and even grief, caused by 9/11: choices that were made after the attacks by the U.S. government like the restructuring of government agencies and the creation of the Department of Homeland Security, along with foreign policy decisions like the invasion of Afghanistan.

Immigration had already been a contentious issue before the attack: Who should be allowed to come? Who could stay? What did it mean to be American, and who could claim it? After Sept. 11, it took on another dimension of added fear and suspicion. And much of it fell on people of Muslim faith or coming from Muslim-majority parts of the world.

For example, in 2002, the federal government implemented the National Security Entry-Exit Registration System, which required non-U.S. citizen males over 16 from 25 countries, almost all of them Muslim-majority, to register at certain ports of entry or at immigration offices if they were already in the country. Critics condemned it as racial and religious profiling, and it was dismantled in the following decade.

"The idea that there's this outside threat in the form of people who look like this or from particular countries really fueled the reorganization of the Department of Homeland Security and has continued to fuel the ways in which we've funded and contributed to the securitization of our immigration system and society more broadly," says Jayesh Rathod, a professor at Georgetown Law.

That lingers in the existence of the Transportation Security Administration and the general hardening of security measures in society overall.

"The idea that we need to do everything possible to protect ourselves from whatever this threat is, amorphous threat, has become totally normalized," Rathod says.

The post-9/11 environment also saw the creation of Immigration and Customs Enforcement, which is now part of the public's awareness as the agency carrying out aggressive and highly controversial immigration crackdowns under the Trump administration.

And in a land where racism, xenophobia and stereotypes were part of the landscape, people in other communities felt it too, like Balbir Singh Sodhi, the Arizona gas station owner shot and killed four days after the 9/11 attacks. His assailant killed Sodhi, a bearded and turbaned member of the Sikh faith, assuming he was Arab.

The impact felt by Muslim Americans and others has been part of what Vida Lashgari has learned about the attacks that took place a few years before she was born. Raised in California, her mom Mexican and her dad Persian, the 21-year-old says she "grew up learning about how 9/11 particularly impacted Middle Easterners, Sikhs, brown people as a whole and how that kind of changed their everyday life."

Her father, she says, and "many Middle Easterners, became more hyper-aware of their appearance, their difference in the way they spoke and dressed in the U.S. after 9/11. And that kind of fear, I think, has carried throughout the Middle Eastern community since then."

Time passes, and new events take place

While she heard about her father's experiences and those in her communities, it's still been history for Lashgari and others like her, born in the years since 2001.

They're a generation that can't believe people used to be able to meet visitors inside at airport gates instead of being kept outside. They learned about it in school, the way they did about Pearl Harbor or the Civil War, but didn't quite know how something could divide life into before and after.

But another seismic event in American culture gave some of them a way to understand the starkness of before and after: the COVID-19 pandemic.

"The pandemic shook up so many lives, especially in my generation who had not experienced some sort of drastic change like that ... I think it definitely gave me perspective that there are some things that we can't be protected from," Lashgari says.

COVID "was, to this day, the closest I've ever felt to my world changing overnight and knowing I had no control over it," she says.

That an event, no matter how catastrophic and impactful, takes up less space in public memory and is supplanted by new ones is, after all, how history works. That reality is part of what drives efforts to create memorials and museums, says Amy Sodaro, a sociology professor at the Borough of Manhattan Community College, who studies them.

Having experienced 9/11, she herself initially thought it "would shape the rest of my life and the society that we live in," she says. But other events, political shifts, and major changes that have taken place in the years since made a difference as well.

It's "these other geopolitical events and changes to our world," she says, "that have changed the face of 9/11 in historical memory at the collective level — and I think also at the level of individuals."

Cyclospora Outbreak Followed Years of Declining FDA Foreign Inspections

By MATTHEW PERRONE
AP Health Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide outbreak of cyclospora tied to contaminated lettuce has heightened safety concerns about imported food, while underscoring a longer-term trend: U.S. regulators are conducting fewer international inspections to catch contaminated produce the FDA — in terms of all the firms domestically and internationally under its oversight — the agency just can't achieve what is required," said Michael Rogers, who spent nearly 35 years in various inspection roles within the agency. He added that FDA continues to do many things "very well with limited resources."

The Trump administration has proposed new approaches to stretch agency resources — including a pilot program of one-day inspections. Rogers and other officials say the abbreviated inspections are not equivalent to traditional ones, which can take a week or more to document serious problems.

FDA officials have long made the case that inspections are only one tool to oversee safety. "Inspections will never be the only way to ensure the safety of imported products given the massive volume coming into the country," said Susan Mayne, FDA's former food director who is now at Yale University. "That's why FDA uses border inspections, importer inspections, sampling and other tools."

But the outbreak in iceberg lettuce has also laid bare the potential downsides of those approaches.

In July, regulators were forced to retract a faulty test result that they claimed found cyclospora on a sample of Taylor Farms' lettuce obtained at the border. Despite the error, FDA officials say they are confident the company's farm is the source of the diarrhea-causing parasite. Mexican food authorities, however, say they have not found any positive samples or other red flags there.

A spokesperson for the Department of Health and Human Services, which oversees FDA, said the agency's investigation is ongoing. Additionally, FDA officials are studying how many foreign inspections should be conducted annually "to ensure oversight comparable" to the U.S. food supply.

FDA inspectors took a month to arrive at Mexican farm

FDA inspectors arrived at the Taylor Farms site in Guajuato, Mexico, in mid-August, about one month after the recall was announced July 17.

It was their first visit there since 2019. That year marked an all-time high for foreign food inspections before the FDA pulled most of its staff from the field during the pandemic.

Inspections for food — along with drugs, medical devices and other products — still haven't recovered. And foreign food inspections actually fell further behind last year, down 17% to 1,140 in fiscal year 2025 from the prior year.

While inspectors were not among the 3,500 jobs targeted for termination by the Trump administration, the agency did eliminate more than half the staffers who handle travel bookings. That's left inspectors to handle most of their own flights, lodging and other logistics.

Food experts say it shouldn't have taken four weeks to get inspectors on-site in Mexico, considering the scale and number of people sickened.

"It took us too long to get boots on the ground," said Frank Yiannas, the former top food safety official at FDA. "When these outbreaks happen in fresh produce, you have to respond quickly because these are very complex and changing ecosystems."

The Taylor Farms recall involved thousands of packaged salad products combining iceberg lettuce with other vegetables. The products were shipped to major U.S. restaurant chains, including Yum Brands, which owns Taco Bell, Pizza Hut and KFC.

According to FDA figures, companies have announced more than 480 food recalls in the current fiscal year, already surpassing four out of the five previous years.

Food inspection targets have gone unmet for over a decade. Washington has tried before to overhaul the U.S. food safety system.

A string of deadly outbreaks involving spinach, cantaloupe and other produce led Congress to pass the Food Safety Modernization Act of 2011, which required additional testing, training and monitoring of hygiene conditions at farms. The legislation also set aggressive goals for FDA foreign inspections — targets the agency has never met.

Under the law, the FDA is supposed to inspect more than 19,000 international food sites annually. The agency hit an all-time high of 1,700 in 2019 — less than one-tenth of the target, according to the Government Accountability Office.

Former FDA regulators say the 19,000 target is unachievable and has never been properly funded by Congress — which has left FDA's food budget essentially flat for years. Still, the FDA "has not identified an appropriate annual target," GAO noted.

Perhaps the biggest challenge to boosting inspections is recruiting new inspectors, and retaining those FDA already has.

The FDA's food inspection workforce includes more than 420 staffers, although 10% to 15% of its positions have been chronically unfilled, according to the GAO and former staffers.

Inspectors who work internationally can spend 50% or more of their working time traveling, a grueling schedule that has long caused turnover among FDA staff.

"Until you can better incentivize people to stay in those positions, I think the agency is going to continue to see high attrition, younger and less experienced investigators," said Rogers. "That ultimately may impact FDA's ability to enhance and increase inspections."

Many experts say new approaches, including machine learning and remote monitoring of supplier practices, could help alleviate some of the need for inspections.

"We have to rethink how we oversee the safety of foreign producers," Yiannas said. "We can't use the same approaches and limited tools that we've used for the past 30 years."

The 2011 food safety law called on manufacturers to place bar codes on each batch of produce, so that it can be quickly traced in the event of contamination. The rule was supposed to take effect in January, following years of discussions and revisions with produce companies. But the FDA again delayed its implementation after pushback from industry.

"There's widespread acknowledgment that these are complex issues, but when you have 17 years to prepare for a final exam you should be able to pass it," said Brian Ronholm, a former Department of Agriculture official who is now with Consumer Reports.

mean it's not a problem for the system.

"For some of us this is workable," he said. For other colleges, "this is going to bring some additional challenges."

before it lands on American plates.

Food and Drug Administration inspections of foreign food sites — including the Mexican farm linked to the ongoing outbreak — are down nearly 35% since 2019, the year before the COVID-19 pandemic, according to agency records reviewed by The Associated Press. The pandemic kicked off a wave of retirements and departures among FDA inspectors that continues to this day.

Even before COVID-19, the agency had long failed to hit its congressionally mandated targets for international inspections. And recent staffing cuts, reorganizations and other upheavals under President Donald Trump could mean even fewer inspections in the years ahead, according to former senior FDA officials.

"When you look at the numbers of inspections balanced against the responsibility of for their campuses, including Jose Fierro, president/superintendent of the Cerritos Community College District. Based on his college's completion rates, he thinks he'll be permitted to add a total of six to eight new bachelor's degrees starting in 2028. That's plenty for now, he said. The school has two now and plans to launch more in 2027.

"We are not trying to become a university. It's not our mission.

We're trying to align with industry and provide pathways for social and economic mobility for our students," he said in an interview.

But just because the bills aren't a problem for him doesn't

These Bulbs Have Evolved to Avoid Being Eaten. You Can Take Advantage of That

By JESSICA DAMIANO Associated Press

There's little worse in a gardener's mind than watching their careful planning and hard work go up in a cloud of teeth, thanks to every four-legged freeloader within chewing distance.

So if you're planting bulbs this fall, select the rights to avoid planting dinner.

Although no plant is 100% animal-proof, some spring-blooming bulbs have toxic or unpalatable self-defenses that deer, rabbits and rodents tend to avoid.

Pet owners and parents, however, should exercise caution when deciding to grow these within reach of children or furry family members.

Let's start with the most offensive bulbs

Crown imperials aren't referred to as "stink lilies" for nothing. One whiff of the malodorous, tufted, downward-facing, bell-shaped flowers will transport you to a skunk sanctuary — or a sweaty locker room. No self-respecting living thing would deliberately sniff, let alone eat, any part of the plant, which also contains highly toxic steroidal alkaloids.

But don't let that dissuade you from planting them. The striking plants not only keep rodents away, but they attract pollinators and are exceptionally eye-catching in the spring garden. Just don't plant them near the front walk.

Alliums are related to onions, and their bulbs' scent makes no secret of it, so they're typically left undisturbed. Their flowers have a similar, although milder, fragrance. If rabbits are particularly hungry, they might attempt a nibble, but the bitter sulfur compounds in the bulbs, leaves and stems will send them running. The plants are also toxic.

Similarly, all types of daffodils — from demure jonquils to giant trumpet types — contain bitter, toxic properties that most critters know to avoid.

These bulbs aren't as offensive but they are off-putting

Although nicely scented to us humans, the strong, sweet perfume emanating from Dutch hyacinth flowers is off-putting to many animals, as is the fruity scent of the unrelated grape hyacinth, which deer and rabbits perceive as musky. Neither is as offensive as pungent alliums, but both hyacinths also contain toxic compounds that cause mouth irritation and stomach upset if bitten or ingested.

Spanish bluebells contain sapo n i n s , which smell and taste like soap, as well as poisonous cardiac glycosides.

Snowdrops, Siberian squill, anemone, glory of the snow, winter aconite and star of Bethlehem are smaller, so-called "minor" bulbs with flowers that bloom earlier than the larger bulbs above. But they pack a punch in deterring wildlife browsing, thanks to their unpalatable smell, bitter taste and/or toxic compounds.

Because they have strong defenses, multiply readily and are not kept under control by animals, some of these plants, particularly Siberian squill, Spanish bluebells and star of Bethlehem, can quickly become invasive, so plant with caution.

Mix the offensive bulbs with other bulbs that animals love

Take Cheap to Chic This Fall with Only Paint and Baking Soda

By MIA ROTELL and LAUREN ROTELL

Before you spend $30 on a fall decoration, check your craft closet! Did you know you can take any small plastic Halloween or fall decoration, slather on a paint-and-baking-soda mixture to give it a new look? Simple decorations become something straight out of a home magazine! The texture, color, and finish is what transforms it into a showstopping piece that costs about seven dollars and a crisp autumnal afternoon — so, grab your coffee, your plastic decoration and get to mixing!

What You Need

- Acrylic paint
- A paintbrush that can be thrown away afterward
- A plastic Halloween or fall decoration
- Baking soda
- A small bowl to mix the paint and baking soda together
- Parchment paper or something to place the object on while it dries

How to Make It

Step 1: Place a sheet of parchment paper on your work surface.

Step 2: Grab your mixing bowl and squeeze in enough paint to cover the surface of your decoration.

Step 3: Sprinkle baking soda into the paint mixture a little bit at a time. A thick texture is desirable, but avoid creating clumps. Mix until the baking soda is evenly incorporated and there are no clumps.

Step 4: You'll know the paint mixture is ready when it is thick from the baking soda but still wet like regular paint.

Step 5: Heavily brush the mixture onto your decoration, making sure to cover the surface evenly.

Step 6: Let it dry for about 30 minutes, then come back and brush on another coat if you want a thicker heavier finish or if your object is bigger.

Step 7: Let it dry for another 30 minutes and add another coat if desired.

Step 8: Let the decoration dry completely, and you're done!

Tip: Take an eyeshadow brush, dip it into a dark color of eyeshadow, and accentuate the shadows on your decoration to give it more dimension. This works especially well with skulls, pumpkins, ghosts, and more! While the layer is drying, lightly brush your paintbrush over it to give it some extra texture.

"Resilient consumer demand, early holiday shipments and a broad mix of cargo have all contributed to that strength."

Seroka noted the port has good momentum as it heads into the final months of the year.

"September is shaping up to be another strong month, and Los Angeles is well positioned to respond as global trade patterns generations using their natural defenses to avoid being eaten, and you can take advantage of that, too.

If you'd like to plant bulbs that animals love to eat, such as tulips or crocuses, try surrounding them with unpalatable ones. As they exude odors and chemicals to protect themselves, some of those defenses will extend to their bedmates.

continue to evolve," he said.

Loaded imports reached 500,302 TEUs in August, which came in nearly even compared to last year and 7% above the five-year August average. Loaded exports totaled 115,561 TEUs, representing a 9% decrease compared to August 2025.

Empty containers totaled 340,044 TEUs, a year-over-year 4% increase. During the first eight months of 2026, the port handled a little more than 7 million TEUs, 1.5% ahead of the same period last year and 5% above its five-year pace.

During the briefing, Seroka said trans-Pacific freight rates to the West Coast favor East Coast routings, while the speed of moving cargo through Los Angeles and onto rail can make the overall economics attractive for importers serving markets across the country.

Seroka was joined by Brian Dodge, president and CEO of the Retail Industry Leaders Association. Dodge explained that retailers remain optimistic about the holiday shopping season despite higher fuel costs, tariffs and other economic pressures.

"We've had an incredibly resilient consumer over the course of the last several years through a variety of different disruptions, and the same seems to be the case right now as we head into the holiday shopping season," Dodge said.

He noted that a large share of holiday merchandise is already in the United States after retailers moved goods earlier this year amid uncertainty over fuel prices and other supply chain disruptions, while additional shipments will continue as retailers replenish inventories to meet consumer demand.

WHEN LUNCH IS THE MAIN EVENT, HERE'S A 'GREEK OUT' TAKE ON HALIBUT AND HALLOUMI SKEWERS

By MARIA KOUTSOGI-ANNIS Voracious

The chapter on main dishes in my cookbook, "Greek Out," starts with an explanation of what "main dish" means to me.

Most people, understandably, immediately think of dinner. Because in many places that's the biggest meal of the day, and it's usually meat plus starch plus vegetable.

But the way I grew up thinking about meals, a main dish is more of a feeling than a set formula, and it's definitely not just about dinner. First of all, when I was growing up, the biggest meal of the day was usually lunch.

For this main dish, the idea is simple: Rub the halibut with sumac and cinnamon and a little drizzle of olive oil, grill until caramelized and charred, then hit it with some honey. Chewy, creamy, cheesy, sweet, salty — they're all in attendance in one fun handheld barbecue dish. Halloumi isn't as Greek as graviera as far as firm, salty cheeses go, but it holds its shape so nicely and goes toe to toe with the tender, juicy halibut.

Halibut and Halloumi Skewers with Dates and Figs

Serves 4 as a main or 10 as an appetizer

Ingredients

2 teaspoons grated lemon zest (from 1 to 2 lemons)

1 ½ teaspoons ground

1 teaspoon garlic powder

1 teaspoon onion powder

1 teaspoon Diamond Crystal kosher salt

½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon

1 pound skinless wild halibut, cut into 1-inch cubes

3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

3 cups 1-inch chunks sourdough bread

10 fresh figs, halved

9 ounces halloumi, cut into 1-inch cubes

10 Medjool dates, pitted

Hot honey or regular honey, for serving

Fresh mint leaves, for serving

Store-bought toum (garlic spread), for serving (optional)

Directions

Prep the halibut: If using wooden skewers, soak them in water for 20 minutes.

In a small bowl, stir together the lemon zest, sumac, garlic powder, onion powder, salt, pepper and cinnamon. Use paper towels to pat the halibut cubes dry, then transfer to a medium bowl. Sprinkle with the seasoning mixture and 1 tablespoon of the olive oil and gently toss to coat the fish.

Assemble the skewers: In a second medium bowl, combine the bread, figs and halloumi with the remaining 2 tablespoons olive oil and toss to coat.

Thread each skewer with a piece of bread, halloumi, halibut and fig, plus a date. Repeat until you've run out of ingredients and have made 10 skewers.

Grill: Heat the grill to medium heat — about 400 F or 200 C — and brush or spray with olive oil.

Add the skewers and grill until char marks form on the first side, 2 to 3 minutes. Flip and repeat on the remaining three sides, until the halibut is cooked through and flakes easily with a fork, 8 to 12 minutes total.

Serve: Transfer the skewers to a plate or platter, hit 'em with a drizzle of honey and lemon and a sprinkle of mint, then serve with toum, if desired.

Pesto originates from Genoa, Italy and was first published in La Cuciniera Genovese by Giovanni Battista Ratto. A form of pesto, Moretum, using different herbs dates to Ancient Rome. It came to America as a canned paste in 1944, and a recipe was published in America for the first time in Sunset Magazine by Angela Pellegrini in 1946.

So, when you eat pesto, you are eating history. Dang, history is delicious.

You can use pesto in pasta, as a marinade, on top of meats and veggies, in sandwiches, on pizza, or any other way you want. It's incredibly tasty and very versatile.

Makes about 2 cups

Ingredients

- 4 oz Basil
- 10 cloves garlic
- ½ cup Olive Oil

- ¼ Cup Pine Nuts*
- ¼ Parmesan
- 1 tsp Salt

To Make

The traditional way is to crush all the ingredients together in a wooden pestle. But if you don't have a mortar and pestle, or molcajete, throw all the ingredients together and blend until smooth. EAT!

*Pine Nuts are expensive; you can sub them out for cashews or peanuts for a more affordable option.

"BY ANY MEANS"

By BOB GARVER

"By Any Means" is a movie about two disparate FBI employees that can't decide if it wants to be a "Buddy Cop" movie or not. The pair are mismatched, but are they "comically" mismatched? The pair banter, is there enough banter to qualify for the "Buddy Cop" label? There's action, but is the action too violent and intense for a term as casual as "Buddy Cop"? The result is an uneven tone that makes the movie too dark for matinee action fans and too ridiculous for true-crime aficionados.

The movie takes place in 1966, primarily in Mississippi. Local agent Wayne Strider (Yahya Abdul Mateen II) is eager to prove that he, as a Black man, can handle more than a desk job. He also wants to help in the investigation into the murder of civil rights activist and personal friend Vernon Dahmer (Giancarlo Esposito). His boss (David Strathairn) notices that Black neighbors of Dahmer are unwilling to talk to white agents, but maybe they'll cooperate with Strider. The agent is given a special off-the-books assignment that requires some investigating, though he is mostly in the service of informant Gregory Scarpa (Mark Wahlberg), a New York mobster known for uncondoned methods of getting answers. For different reasons, neither Strider nor Scarpa is particularly welcome in Klan-infested 1960's Mississippi, though it's not like they're conducting the investigation to make friends.

Scarpa has certainly shown up to be one half of a pair of Buddy Cops. Everything from his hair to his sunglasses to his drinking and womanizing, indicates that he is the "wild" one of the team. And that's just his first impression. He's also got a mean mouth, a short fuse, and an itchy trigger finger. The man starts putting up a body count much earlier than Strider expected. He's not much more merciful in his interrogations, with the investigation rarely moving forward without information soaked in blood. Then again, at least he's getting the information, which Strider would never be able to get going by the book.

Strider and Scarpa settle into a rapport, though Scarpa is casually racist and says he doesn't care about the investigation outside of his specific assignment. Strider eventually learns to give verbal abuse as good as he gets. He even teaches Scarpa an epithet for white people that he doesn't already know. I found it hard to believe that Scarpa wasn't familiar with the term, or at least be able to easily guess its meaning from context. His ignorance in this scene is about as embarrassing for the movie as Dr. Don in "Green Book" being befuddled by fried chicken.

When it comes to the investigation, there's no learning from each other, Scarpa 100% brings Strider over to his side of using violence to get what he wants. And there is a lot of violence. Interrogation scenes see suspects begging Scarpa to kill them, but he won't end their suffering that easily. Granted, these men are always perpetrators of horrific violence themselves, which just means that all "action" sequences in this movie are a rough watch.

I get the point of making the violence in "By Any Means" so ugly, there are no winners in a hate-based war. I also get the point of making the character of Scarpa so unlikeable (provided it does the real-life Scarpa justice), sometimes assets to justice have to come from the dregs of society. But did this movie have to take so many cues from lighter Buddy Cop movies, as if it couldn't sell itself as something heavier? And did it have to whiff so badly on its few attempts at levity? The film takes itself both too seriously and not seriously enough, working occasionally, but not consistently. It never quite finds the means to elicit laughs "or" screams.

Grade: C

"By Any Means" is rated R for violence/bloody images and pervasive language. Its running time is 107 minutes.

'Spider-Man: Brand New Day,' 'The Odyssey' Lead Weekend Box Office

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - The biggest blockbusters of the late summer continue to rule the box office, with "Spider-Man: Brand New Day" grossing $18 million this weekend in its sixth week in North American theaters, according to industry estimates released Sunday.

"The Odyssey" was second with $13 million Friday through Sunday in its eighth weekend in theaters, Rentrak reported.

"Spider-Man: Brand New Day" crossed the $2.4 billion mark in worldwide grosses and is now the third highest-grossing film of all time.

"The Odyssey" has grossed over $1.6 billion worldwide.

"Coyote vs. Acme" was third with $11.3 million in its second weekend.

Fourth place went to the crime drama "By Any Means," which opened with $7.4 million, followed by "Insidious: Out of the Further," which grossed $6.5 million in its third weekend.

A 20th anniversary re-release of Pixar's "Cars" claimed sixth place with $6.1 million.

Rounding out the top 10 releases were "Buddy" ($5.7 million), "PAW Patrol: The Dino Movie" ($3.3 million), "The End of Oak Street"

($2.9 million) and "The Dog Stars" ($2.7 million).

This weekend's overall three-day box office haul was estimated at $90.4 million. The year-to-date total is $7.357 billion -- up 20.4% from the figure at this time last year, according to Rentrak.

Condo Construction

Senate.”

“We put hundreds of hours, months of negotiations, and endless stakeholders engagement and coalition building,” she said. “Ultimately I had a bill Friday morning that I truly believe would have unlocked condo construction to serve our working class families desperate for homeownership opportunities.”

A spokesperson for Senate President Pro Tem Monique Limón, a Santa Barbara Democrat, did not respond to a request for comment.

The bill was closely watched by pro-development advocates, who championed it as a key to unlocking the type of naturally affordable for-sale construction that the state so desperately needs.

But the bill had been opposed throughout the year by the politically powerful Consumer Attorneys of California, a lobbying group representing civil trial lawyers, along with many homeowners associations. Both argued that the bill would make it unduly hard for homeowners to take irresponsible builders to court over legitimately defective construction.

Those groups stopped fighting the bill when Wicks agreed to water it down over the weekend. Stripping out language that would have specified the types of defects ripe for litigation and placed new restrictions on how defects can be identified, the final bill simply required homeowners to clearly document the defects before filing suit, to give the builder a chance to repair them first and, if those repairs were made complete, to absolve the builder of future liability.

But it was too late. Wicks, in her statement, said she was confident the backers of the bill could “bring back something even stronger” in future sessions.

A spokesperson for the Consumer Attorneys of California did not respond to an interview request before this story was published.

When a bill dies at midnight

The final hours of August 31 in even years are always frantic in the Capitol.

State law requires the Legislature to dispense with most bills by the end of August at the end of each two-year legislative session. The rules also require any given bill to be in print for 72 hours before they can get a vote. “There are always a handful of bills that don’t make it across the finish line,” said Chris Micheli, a seasoned Sacramento lobbyist.

One of the most notable examples in recent memory was SB 1120 from 2020, another high profile and contentious housing bill. Incidentally, it was Wicks who went viral after taking to the Assembly floor, masked and holding her newborn daughter, to unsuccessfully plead with her colleagues to pass the bill on time. (Another version of the same policy to allow for duplex construction in neighborhoods zoned just for single-family homes passed the following year).

Another bill from this year, SB 1013 by Riverside Democratic Sen. Sabrina Cervantes, which would have put new restrictions on automated license plate readers, was unceremoniously held in the Assembly and did not receive a final vote. That was the victim of “an inter-house hostage situation,” Politico reported Tuesday.

When a bill dies this way it can be hard to tell whether that’s the result of simple time mismanagement or malign political intent — either directed at the bill itself or born of a general political beef between the two often quarrelsome chambers.

“I suspect the answer to your question is ‘yes,’” said Dan Dunmoyer, president of the California Building Industry Association, a trade group that was pushing the bill. “It appears this bill was slow walked — or not walked at all. But I can’t tell if this is truly hostage taking or things just got jammed up.”

The final amendments to the construction defect bill were negotiated between Wicks and an apparently skeptical Sen. Tom Umberg, a Santa Ana Democrat and chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee, who shared the concerns of trial attorneys and HOAs. Those discussions dragged out until virtually the last possible moment on Friday evening, just over 72 hours before the end of session.

“The chair was moving the goal posts and running out the clock,” said Michael Lane, a lobbyist with SPUR, a Bay Area-based urban planning think tank and advocacy group. “There’s probably lots of blame to go around, but I think he was being very sly.”

Umberg’s office also did not respond to a request for comment.

Much ado about condos

Builders, but also pro-housing advocates, have argued for years that current state law incentivizes construction defect lawsuits against condominium projects. That’s because condos are stacked together, making shared defects more likely across homeowners. The close cohabitation and the existence of homeowners associations make it easier for many litigants to organize against a single builder.

In California, where new residential construction is largely bifurcated between pricey single homes built for buyers and apartment buildings constructed for renters, condos represent a more affordable sweet spot. But developers have been more reluctant to build condos over the last two decades. Supporters of the bill blame litigation.

Comprehensive data on construction defect lawsuits does not exist. Reliable estimates on condominium production are also sparse. But developers claim that such lawsuits are a near certainty for condo projects.

“One hundred percent of our condos are sued for defect,” said Dunmoyer in an earlier interview. “If the trial lawyers convince the legislature that it’s okay to file a defect claim when there’s no defect, then we just don’t build condos. It’s not complicated.”

One recent analysis conducted by the consulting firm Economic & Planning Systems estimated that the threat of litigation increased construction costs on condos by roughly 1.9% to 4.4%. That may not be a massive cost increase, but supporters of the bill argue that it’s enough to steer multifamily developers toward rental projects.

defense?”

Cervantes’ Senate Bill 1013 would have restricted state law enforcement agencies to using license plate data only for locating criminal suspects or missing people, would have made police take privacy and cybersecurity training, would have restricted sharing with national databases by default, and would have required the attorney general’s office carry out random audits of license plate reader activity for misuse.

Had the bill come up for a vote, it still might have died, given support for the readers as tools of law and order. Nearly 40 law enforcement agencies and police unions opposed the bill.

Regulations in the measure had already been weakened, trading a requirement that police delete license plate data after 30 days for one that they “archive” it after 60 days, at which point they would need to obtain a warrant to search the data, unless it was connected to an active investigation or vehicle hunt. Police argued that old license plate data had helped solve cold cases and missing people investigations, and some, like the California State Sheriff’s Association, opposed the bill even after it was watered down. Newsom vetoed last year’s bill in part because it would have ordered police to delete license plate data after 60 days.

CalMatters reporting last year and this year found that local law enforcement agencies across Southern California repeatedly shared information with federal immigration agencies, a violation of a state law. A 2020 state audit and investigation by Attorney General Rob Bonta found similar violations of state law that prohibits sharing license plate reader data with out-of-state or federal law enforcement agencies. Since June 2024 the California Attorney General’s Office has contacted 18 law enforcement agencies about possible or known violations of Senate Bill 34 and filed a lawsuit against the city of El Cajon near San Diego to stop the practice.

There are roughly 70 documented instances nationwide where police officers misused automated license plate readers to do things like track their wives, stalk former partners or pursue love interests, according to the Washington Post, including former Riverside County sheriff’s deputy Alexander Vanny, who used Flock to stalk his former fiancée and was sentenced to six years in prison in February.

The technology can also inaccurately label some drivers as criminal suspects, leading to potentially violent confrontations. A Los Angeles Police Department audit released in July found that one out of three vehicles identified as stolen by Flock cameras were inaccurately identified.

The street Address or other common designation of real property is purported to be: 2360 MCNEIL CIRCLE, CORONA, CA 92882 Legal Description: As more fully described on said Deed of Trust. A.P.N.: 112-061-015 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address or other common designation, if any, shown above. If no street address or other common designation is shown, directions to the location of the property may be obtained by sending a written request to the beneficiary within 10 days of the date of first publication of this Notice of Sale. The beneficiary under said Deed of Trust heretofore executed and delivered to the undersigned a written Declaration of Default and Demand for Sale, and a written Notice of Default and Election to Sell. The undersigned caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located and more than three months have elapsed since such recordation. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 1-844-477-7869 or visit this Internet Web site <http://www.stoxposting.com/salescalendar>, using the file number assigned to this case 2026-05119. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer" you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 1-844-477-7869 or visit this internet website site <http://www.stoxposting.com/salescalendar>, using the file number assigned to this case 2026-05119 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. Effective March 1, 2026, the U. S. Department of Treasury's Financial Crimes Enforcement Network ("FinCEN") requires that a Real Estate Report ("FinCEN Report") be filed with FinCEN for certain residential real estate transfers, including purchases with all cash or without institutional lender financing, where at least one buyer or transferee is a legal entity, limited liability company, corporation, partnership, trust, trustee or other nonnatural person. If the proposed transaction involves a reportable transfer, the 3rd party purchaser, prior to receiving the Trustees Deed, must provide all information and documentation necessary to complete and file the FinCEN Report. If this is a reportable transfer, the 3rd party purchaser will be receiving an email from our FinCEN Report vender and will be required to provide the information being requested. . Additional information regarding FinCEN's reporting requirements is available at <https://www.fincen.gov/rrel>. NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF:

MARIO RICARDO LEIVA
CASE NO. PRR12602301
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the WILL or estate, or both of MARIO RICARDO LEIVA.
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by MICHELLE LYNN LEIVA in the Superior Court of California, County of RIVERSIDE.
THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that MICHELLE LYNN LEIVA be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 10/16/26 at 8:30AM in Dept. 11 located at 4050 MAIN STREET, RIVERSIDE, CA 92501
IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE T.S. No. 26-30200-BACA Title No. 3975321 A.P.N. 135-374-020 ATTENTION RECORDER: THE FOLLOWING REFERENCE TO AN ATTACHED SUMMARY IS APPLICABLE TO THE NOTICE PROVIDED TO THE TRUSTOR ONLY PURSUANT TO CIVIL CODE 2923.3 NOTE: THERE IS A SUMMARY OF THE INFORMATION IN THIS DOCUMENT ATTACHED YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED 02/21/2020. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER. A public auction sale to the highest bidder for cash, cashier's check(s) drawn on a state or national bank must be made payable to National Default Servicing Corporation, a check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state; will be held by the duly appointed trustee as shown below, of all right, title, and interest conveyed to and now held by the trustee in the hereinafter described property under and pursuant to a Deed of Trust described below. The sale will be made in an "as is" condition, but without covenant or warranty, expressed or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note(s) secured by the Deed of Trust, with interest and late charges thereon, as provided in the note(s), advances, under the terms of the Deed of Trust, interest thereon, fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee for the total amount (at the time of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale) reasonably estimated to be set forth below. The amount may be greater on the day of sale. Trustor: Vickie E. HayesReid Duly Appointed Trustee: National Default Servicing Corporation Recorded 07/13/2020 as Instrument No. 2020-0305195 (or Book, Page) of the Official Records of Riverside County, California. Date of Sale: : 10/06/2026 at 9:00 AM Place of Sale: (Historic) Corona Civic Center 815 W Sixth St. Corona CA 92882 Estimated amount of unpaid balance and other charges: $113,342.23 Street Address or other common designation of real property: 13376 March Way, Corona, CA 92879 A.P.N.: 135-374-020 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address or other common designation, if any, shown above. If no street address or other common designation is shown, directions to the location of the property may be obtained by sending a written request to the beneficiary within 10 days of the date of first publication of this Notice of Sale. If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee, and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. The requirements of California Civil Code Section 2923.5(b)/2923.55(c) were fulfilled when the Notice of Default was recorded. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 714-730-2727 or visit this internet website www.ndscorp.com/sales, using the file number assigned to this case 26-30200-BACA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT*: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are a "representative of all eligible tenant buyers" you may be able to purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 888-264-4010, or visit this internet website www.ndscorp.com, using the file number assigned to this case 26-30200-BACA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as a "representative of all eligible tenant buyers" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. NOTICE: To the extent that the sale is subject to Financial Crimes Enforcement Network's Residential Real Estate Reporting Rule (31 C.F.R. Part 1031), purchaser agrees to provide all required information and further agrees to reimburse trustee for any costs, expenses or fees incurred as a result of the collection of such information *Pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code, the potential rights described herein shall apply only to public auctions taking place on or after January 1, 2021, through December 31, 2025, unless later extended. NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF FRANCINE MUNOZ

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of FRANCINE MUNOZ
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Dana Roybal in the Superior Court of California, County of RIVERSIDE.
THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Dana Roybal be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on Oct. 9, 2026 at 8:30 AM in Dept. No. 8 located at 4050 Main St., Riverside, CA 92501.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

The street address and other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 8803 SOOTHING COURT, CORONA, CA 92883 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. Said sale will be held, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession, condition, or encumbrances, including fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust, to pay the remaining principal sums of the note(s) secured by said Deed of Trust. The total amount of the unpaid balance of the obligation secured by the property to be sold and reasonable estimated costs, expenses and advances at the time of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale is: $819,776.45 If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee, and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. The beneficiary under said Deed of Trust heretofore executed and delivered to the undersigned a written Declaration of Default and Demand for Sale, and a written Notice of Default and Election to Sell. The undersigned or its predecessor caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (855) 313-3319 or visit this Internet website www.clearreconcorp.com, using the file number assigned to this case 132732-CA.

Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: Effective January 1, 2021, you may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (855) 313-3319, or visit this internet website www.clearreconcorp.com, using the file number assigned to this case 132732-CA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF:
PATRICK BALL
CASE NO. PRR12602411
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the WILL or estate, or both of PATRICK BALL.
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by PARRIS COMBS in the Superior Court of California, County of RIVERSIDE. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that PARRIS COMBS be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 10/16/26 at 8:30AM in Dept. 8 located at 4050 MAIN STREET, RIVERSIDE, CA 92501
IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE T.S.No. 25-03275-CECA Title No. 250650246-CA-VOI A.P.N. 144-802-002 ATTENTION RECORDER: THE FOLLOWING REFERENCE TO AN ATTACHED SUMMARY IS APPLICABLE TO THE NOTICE PROVIDED TO THE TRUSTOR ONLY PURSUANT TO CIVIL CODE 2923.3 NOTE: THERE IS A SUMMARY OF THE INFORMATION IN THIS DOCUMENT ATTACHED YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED 11/22/2021. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION

OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER. A public auction sale to the highest bidder for cash, cashier's check(s) drawn on a state or national bank must be made payable to National Default Servicing Corporation, a check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state; will be held by the duly appointed trustee as shown below, of all right, title, and interest conveyed to and now held by the trustee in the hereinafter described property under and pursuant to a Deed of Trust described below. The sale will be made in an "as is" condition, but without covenant or warranty, expressed or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note(s) secured by the Deed of Trust, with interest and late charges thereon, as provided in the note(s), advances, under the terms of the Deed of Trust, interest thereon, fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee for the total amount (at the time of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale) reasonably estimated to be set forth below. The amount may be greater on the day of sale. Trustor: Paulo Tabora, a single man Duly Appointed Trustee: National Default Servicing Corporation Recorded 11/30/2021 as Instrument No. 2021-0708338 (or Book, Page) of the Official Records of Riverside County, California. Date of Sale: 10/14/2026 at 9:00 AM Place of Sale: In the courtyard, of the Historic Corona Civic Center of the 815 W Sixth St, Corona, CA 92882 Estimated amount of unpaid balance and other charges: $584,978.49 Street Address or other common designation of real property: 7023 Leighton Drive, Eastvale, CA 92880 A.P.N.: 144-802-002 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address or other common designation, if any, shown above. If no street address or other common designation is shown, directions to the location of the property may be obtained by sending a written request to the beneficiary within 10 days of the date of first publication of this Notice of Sale. If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee, and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. The requirements of California Civil Code Section 2923.5(b)/2923.55(c) were fulfilled when the Notice of Default was recorded. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 800-280-2832 or visit this internet website www.ndscorp.com/sales, using the file number assigned to this case 25-03275-CECA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are a "representative of all eligible tenant buyers" you may be able to purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 888-264-4010, or visit this internet website www.ndscorp.com, using the file number assigned to this case

25-03275-CECA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as a "representative of all eligible tenant buyers" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. NOTICE: To the extent that the sale is subject to Financial Crimes Enforcement Network's Residential Real Estate Reporting Rule (31 C.F.R. Part 1031), purchaser agrees to provide all required information and further agrees to reimburse trustee for any costs, expenses or fees incurred as a result of the collection of such information *Pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code, the potential rights described herein shall apply only to public auctions taking place on or after January 1, 2021, through December 31, 2025, unless later extended. PUBLIC NOTICE

This is a public notice that the City of Corona's Planning and Housing Commission will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers at 400 S. Vicentia Ave., on Monday, September 21, 2026, at 6:00 p.m. or thereafter upon the following:

CUP2026-0003: Conditional Use Permit for a proposed nineunit residential condominium development on 0.42 acres located at the northeast corner of River Road and Cota Street within the R-3 (Multiple Family Residential) zone.

TTM 37805: Tentative Tract Map to create one lot on 0.42 acres for residential condominium purposes located at the northeast corner of River Road and Cota Street within the R-3 (Multiple Family Residential) zone.

California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) – Pursuant to State CEQA Guidelines and Section 3.16 of the City's Local CEQA Guidelines, the project is categorically exempted pursuant to Sections 15303(b) (Class 3 – New Construction of Conversion of Small Structures) and 15332 (Class 32 – InFill Development Projects) of the State CEQA Guidelines. The project consists of the construction of nine residential condominium units within an urbanized area and is consistent with the applicable General Plan and zoning requirements. The project would not result in any significant effects related to traffic, noise, air quality, or water quality. Furthermore, none of the exceptions to the use of a categorical exemption identified in the State CEQA Guidelines Section 15300.2 apply.

(Applicant: Aurangzeb Mirza)

This is a public hearing, and you are invited to attend and comment on the applications described above. If you challenge any portion of this project in court, you may be limited to raising only those issues you or someone else raised at the public hearing described in this notice, or in written correspondence delivered at, or prior to, the public hearing. If you have written comments that you wish to be included in the staff report, please deliver them to the Planning and Housing Commission Secretary, on or before the Wednesday prior to the meeting. If you have questions about this notice or the application to be heard, please call Rocío Lopez, Senior Planner in the Planning and Development Department at (951) 736-2262 or via email at rocio.lopez@coronaca.gov.
