Heritage, Valley View and Vista Del Lago Among Eleven Teams to Compete in County Academic Decathlon

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - Nearly a dozen teams from high schools throughout Riverside County will compete this weekend in the 41st annual Academic Decathlon, working to gain points in multiple subjects for a chance at representing the county in the statewide contest.

This year's theme is "Technology & Humanity," and in that vein, the first day of the competition will be all-virtual, according to the county Office of Education.

The decathlon involves essays, speeches, videotaped interviews and related presentations, culminating in a Super Quiz, officials said.

"The Super Quiz is a team event held before a live audience," according to an Office of Education statement. "Each team is composed of nine students, three from each grade point category, and includes three honor, three scholastic and three varsity students."

Year in Review: CALIFORNIA TACKLES MENTAL HEALTH, FENTANYL

By Ana B. Ibarra, CalMatters

When it comes to health and wellness, perhaps few things weigh heavier on the minds of Californians than the mental health crisis and the fentanyl epidemic.

California is undertaking ambitious — and at times controversial — efforts to provide some relief to those in mental health distress. For example, this year, Newsom proposed and lawmakers agreed to back a measure for the March 2024 ballot that would allow additional funds to be used toward housing for people with behavioral health issues.

Specifically, the proposal would authorize a $6.4 billion bond to fund housing for people with mental health illnesses and substance use disorders. The measure also asks voters to allow counties to use 30% of the funds collected from the Mental Health Services Act for housing purposes. This 20-year-old law funds mental health programs through a 1% tax on personal income over $1 million.

Opponents of this proposal have argued that redirecting funds from the millionaire's tax toward housing will result in cuts to current mental health programs and treatment options. In March, voters will have the final say.

Arrest made in Perris New Years Eve Killing

RIVERSIDE (CNS) - A convicted felon accused of gunning down a 36-year-old man during a New Year's Eve confrontation in Perris is slated to be arraigned next month on murder and other charges.

David Christopher Smit, 41, of Perris was arrested last week following a Riverside County Sheriff's Department investigation into the slaying of Leo Campos.

Smit is charged with murder, attempted murder, being a felon in possession of a firearm, and sentence-enhancing gun and great bodily injury allegations.

He made his initial court appearance Thursday before Superior Court Judge Walter Kubelun, who appointed him a public defender and scheduled his arraignment for Feb. 5 at the Riverside Hall of Justice.

Smit is being held without bail at the Byrd Detention Center in Murrieta.

According to sheriff's Investigator Lance Stoyer, shortly after 10 p.m. on Dec. 31, Smit and Campos were involved in an unspecified confrontation in the 1700 block of Glenview Drive, near Turquoise Drive.

During the encounter, the defendant allegedly pulled a handgun and shot Campos at close range, Stoyer said. He said witnesses called 911, and paramedics reached the location minutes later, attempting life-saving measures to no avail. The victim was pronounced dead at the scene.

Central Homicide Unit detectives quickly identified Smit as the alleged assailant, and he was taken into custody the following morning without incident near the location of the shooting.

According to court records, the defendant has prior convictions for grand theft and domestic violence.

Alaska Airlines Decision to Allow Ontario-Bound Jet to Fly, Under Scrutiny

By DAVID KOENIG,
TOM KRISHER
and CLAIRE RUSH
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The decision by Alaska Airlines to stop flying one of its planes over the Pacific Ocean to Hawaii due to warnings from a cabin-pressurization system — yet keep flying it over land — is raising questions about whether the jet should have been in the air at all.

The nation's top accident investigator says warning lights were triggered on three flights, including each of the two days before the brand-new Boeing 737 Max 9 suffered a terrifying fuselage blowout Friday night. A plug covering a spot left for an emergency door tore off the plane as it flew 16,000 feet (4,800 meters) above Oregon.

Jennifer Homendy, chair of the National Transportation Safety Board, said maintenance crews checked the plane and cleared it to fly — but the airline decided not to use it for the long route to Hawaii over water so that it “could return very quickly to an airport” if the warning light reappeared.

Friday's flight was headed from Oregon to Ontario International and made it back to Portland without serious injury to any of the 171 passengers and six crew members. But the decision to allow it to fly over land in the first place struck some aviation experts as illogical.

“If you are afraid to take the airplane far from land, what is the reason for that? That has to be answered by Alaska Airlines,” said

Steven Wallace, an air-safety consultant and commercial pilot who once headed accident investigations for the Federal Aviation Administration.

The FAA grounded all Max 9s operated by Alaska and United and some flown by foreign airlines for inspection after the Friday night flight. The inspections are focused on plugs used to seal an area set aside for extra emergency doors that are not required on United and Alaska Max 9s.

Monday afternoon, United Airlines said it found loose bolts and other “installation issues” on door plugs that were inspected after the Alaska Airlines incident.

“Since we began preliminary inspections on Saturday, we have found instances that appear to relate to installation issues in the door plug — for example, bolts that needed additional tightening,” Chicago-based United said.

Boeing, which has had its own share of problems with various planes over the years, pledged to “help address any and all findings” that airlines make during their inspections.

The FAA declined to comment on whether the Alaska Airlines plane in question should have been allowed to keep flying. The agency said “it would be premature” to comment while the NTSB is investigating the Friday night flight.

Seattle-based Alaska Airlines also declined to comment, saying it would

RivCo DA's Office Seeks Help Identifying Victim of 'Happy Face' Serial Killer

RIVERSIDE - The Riverside County District Attorney's office Monday sought help from the public in identifying a woman who was murdered by the “Happy Face” serial killer 31 years ago.

“Our goal is to identify this victim and provide closure to her family, wherever they may be,” Riverside County District Attorney Mike Hestrin said in a statement. “We are hopeful someone may remember anything that could help us reunite this woman with the family who may have been looking for her for over three decades.”

Keith Hunter Jespersen pleaded guilty Jan. 8, 2010, to the murder and was sentenced to 15 years to life in prison, according to a statement from Riverside County District Attorney's office spokesperson Brooke Beare. He referred to the woman as “Claudia,” and she was found about seven miles north of Blythe, along Highway 95, on Aug. 30, 1992.

Jespersen confessed the murder to a news reporter in Portland, Oregon following his arrest in a separate case, Beare said. He then admitted to Riverside County Sheriff's Department deputies about killing her and seven other women as well. He was dubbed the “Happy Face Killer” because he put smiley faces on letters he sent to the media detailing his murders.

More recently, Riverside County Regional Cold Case Homicide investigators interviewed Jespersen late last year at the Oregon State Penitentiary about ‘Claudia,’ according to Beare. He said he met her while he was working as a long-haul truck driver in August 1992.

He described her as an about 5 feet 6 inches to 5 feet 7 inches tall, 20- to 30-years old with a medium build, weighing about 140 to 150 pounds, with shaggy, wild blonde hair, and tight clothing, according to Beare. When found, she was wearing a t-shirt with a motorcycle print and had a tattoo of two small dots on the left side of her right thumb.

She's believed to have been familiar with the Los Angeles, San Bernardino, and Riverside County areas with ties to Las Vegas and southern Nevada, based on what Jespersen described in his encounter with the victim, Beare said. It's also believed that she smoked cigarettes and was a frequent hitchhiker.

Improvements in forensic science allowed investigators and genealogists to determine some relatives, including her biological but now deceased father of Cameron County, Texas, according to Beare. Several of the victim's half-siblings were also identified but they were not biological matches to her mother.

The victim's maternal side of the family is believed to have ties to the Louisiana and/or southeast Texas area, Brooke said.

Anyone with additional leads to ‘Claudia's’ identity was asked to call the Cold Case Hotline at 951-955-5567 or email cold-caseunit@rivcoda.org.

- 1 tbsp salt
- 1 tbsp sugar

In a small saucepan combine the apple cider and distilled vinegar with the salt and sugar. Bring to a simmer. While the vinegar is heating up slice your serrano's into 1/4-inch coins. Slice your onion and garlic as well and place into a 32-ounce mason jar. Once the vinegar has simmered for a minute and the salt and sugar are dissolved, pour hot vinegar over the serrano, onions, and garlic and cap. Let cool on the counter then place in your fridge. Eat immediately or over the course of a couple of weeks. ENJOY!

I am a huge fan of pickles. Picked cucumber, pickled onions, pickled cabbage. Put it all in my belly. So, when my wife came home from the store with materials to make salsa, and about 20 extra serrano peppers, my first thought was "omg that's a lot of serrano peppers." And my second thought was, "I should pickle them." And so, I did. I Made about a 32-ounce jar full of pickled serrano with a bit of red onion. The purple from the red onion adds a pretty splash of color. And everyone knows that if your food looks pretty it is going to taste better.

Plane

need permission from the NTSB to discuss the plane and its maintenance history. "We will provide information as soon as the NTSB permits us to do so," the airline said.

Alan Diehl, a former crash investigator for both the NTSB and the Federal Aviation Administration, said Alaska should have grounded the plane, period. However, he and other critics said the decision to stop flying the plane to Hawaii might have averted a disaster.

If the blowout had happened halfway to Hawaii, pilots would have been forced to fly low enough so passengers could breathe without oxygen masks, which burns more fuel. And the gaping hole in the fuselage would create drag. The plane might have run out of fuel before reaching land, experts said.

"As far as I'm concerned, there's an angel in Alaska," Diehl said.

"Whoever made the decision to do that probably saved a lot of lives."

Other aviation insiders saw nothing unusual in the airline's decision to limit but not ground the plane after the pressurization warnings on flights Dec. 7, Jan 3 and Jan. 4 — the day before the blowout.

"Whatever maintenance they performed on it, (they decided) 'Let's be conservative and not put this thing out over water,'" said John Cox, a former airline pilot and now a safety consultant. He said the intermittent nature of the pressurization warnings — three out of the plane's 145 flights — might have made them suspect a bad sensor or something else.

The NTSB said the lost door plug was found Sunday near Portland in the back yard of a home.

At a news conference Sunday night, Homendy said an explosive rush of air damaged several rows of seats and pulled insulation from the walls. The cockpit door flew open and banged into a lavatory door.

Two cellphones that appeared to have belonged to passengers on Friday's flight were found on the ground. One was discovered in a yard, the other on the side of a road. Both were turned over to the NTSB.

Alaska Airlines flight 1282 took off from Portland at 5:07 p.m. Friday for a two-hour trip to Ontario. About six minutes later, the chunk of fuselage blew out.

Videos posted online by passengers showed a gaping hole where the paneled-over door had been. They applauded when the plane landed safely about 13 minutes after the blowout. Firefighters came down the aisle, asking passengers to remain in their seats as they treated the injured.

It was extremely lucky that the airplane had not yet reached cruising altitude, when passengers and flight attendants might be walking around the cabin, Homendy said.

"Night Swim"

By Bob Garver

For the first time since the pandemic, January means the release of a terrible horror movie in "Night Swim." Actually, the pandemic only really affected January horror in 2021. It's just that with January 2022 bringing us that nifty "Scream" reboot and January 2023 giving the world the instantly-iconic "M3GAN," I can't say that the horror in those years was terrible. But now we're back to January being a dumping ground for pathetic leftovers that couldn't cut it at Halloween.

Following a perfunctory kid-gets-taken opening, we're introduced to the Waller family. Like many families at the openings of horror movies, they're looking for a new house. Father Ray (Wyatt Russell) had his baseball career cut short by a case of multiple sclerosis and the family needs a place where they can put down roots while he figures out the next chapter in his life. They decide against a house that suits his medical needs and instead pick one where he falls and injures himself in the backyard pool upon first visiting. I was ready to attack the believability of this decision, but then I re-movie for its brevity.

One of the film's few critical defenders (in that she gave it a somewhat positive two-and-a-half-star review) is Christy Lemire of RogerEbert.com, who says that the pool "eats" people. No wonder she halfway likes the movie, that's a pleasing justification: the pool needs to eat, that's why it's so malevolent. But no, that's not what the pool is doing. It's sucking people into an alternate dimension and they can never return home, but I'm not getting "eaten" from that. If the pool is meant to be eating people, then the movie is doing such a bad job of communicating this concept that I feel the need to argue with a professional critic saying that it is.

The problems with "Night Swim" go far beyond the pool itself. This is a bland, unoriginal horror movie with dull characters and even duller scares. There's a scene late in the film where a villain is stalking a protagonist and calls out, "Marco!" After a few forced moments of suspense, the villain pops out and yells, "You're supposed to say 'Polo!'" The film thinks that five-word, six-syllable phrase makes for an effective jump scare. That's this movie's sense of timing in a nutshell. Even though I don't think the pool of "Night Swim" eats its victims, I do invite the movie overall to eat me.

Grade: D

"Night Swim" is rated PG-13 for terror, some violent content and language. Its running time is 98 minutes.

of haunted house movies, it doesn't matter that this one localizes things in the backyard. Plus, a pool has a size advantage on any human villain, as well as any beast smaller than a kaiju. But if the pool is to be considered a character, then it's a badly-written one. Its motivations and rules are murkier than the sludge stuck in its filter. We supposedly get some answers in a goofy, hurried scene of exposition late in the film, but it's so nonsensical that the entire sequence could have been cut and I would have respected the $10.2 million in its third week, followed by "Anyone But You" with $9.5 million in its third weekend.

Rounding out the top 10 domestic releases were "The Boys in the Boat" ($6 million), "The Color Purple" ($4.7 million), "The Iron Claw" ($4.5 million), "Ferarri" ($2.5 million) and "Poor Things" ($2 million).

This weekend's overall three-day box office haul was estimated at $87.3 million. The year-to-date total is $172.8 million -- down 8% from the figure at this time last year, according to Comscore.

FRIDAY January 12, 2024

Today in History:

Today is the 12th day of 2024.
There are 354 days left in the year.

By The Associated Press

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 12, 1959, Berry Gordy Jr. founded Motown Records (originally Tamla Records) in Detroit.

On this date:

In 1828, the United States and Mexico signed a Treaty of Limits defining the boundary between the two countries to be the same as the one established by an 1819 treaty between the U.S. and Spain.

In 1910, at a White House dinner hosted by President William Howard Taft, Baroness Rosen, wife of the Russian ambassador, caused a stir by requesting and smoking a cigarette. It was, apparently, the first time a woman had smoked openly during a public function in the executive mansion. (Some of the other women present who had brought their own cigarettes began lighting up in turn.)

In 1915, the U.S. House of Representatives rejected, 204-174, a proposed constitutional amendment to give women nationwide the right to vote.

In 1932, Hattie W. Caraway became the first woman elected to the U.S. Senate after initially being appointed to serve out the remainder of the term of her late husband, Thaddeus.

In 1945, during World War II, Soviet forces began a major, successful offensive against the Germans in Eastern Europe. Aircraft from U.S. Task Force 38 sank about 40 Japanese ships off Indochina.

In 1948, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Sipuel v. Board of Regents of University of Oklahoma, unanimously ruled that state law schools could not discriminate against applicants on the basis of race.

In 1966, President Lyndon B. Johnson said in his State of the Union address that the U.S. military should stay in Vietnam until Communist aggression there was stopped.

In 1969, the New York Jets of the American Football League upset the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League 16-7 in Super Bowl III, played at the Orange Bowl in Miami.

In 1971, the groundbreaking situation comedy "All in the Family" premiered on CBS television.

In 2000, in a 5-4 decision, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Illinois v. Wardlow, gave police broad authority to stop and question people who run at the sight of an officer.

In 2010, Haiti was struck by a magnitude-7 earthquake; the Haitian government said 316,000 people were killed, while a report prepared for the U.S. Agency for International Development suggested the death toll may have been between 46,000 and 85,000.

In 2013, the NHL's four-month lock-out finally ended as the league and the players' association completed signing a required memorandum of understanding.

In 2016, Iran detained 10 American sailors and their two small Navy boats after the boats drifted into Iranian waters; the sailors and their vessels were released the following day.

In 2018, sportscaster Keith Jackson, best known as the down-home voice of college football, died; he was 89.

In 2022, Ronnie Spector, who sang 1960s hits including "Be My Baby" as leader of the girl group The Ronettes, died at 78 after a brief battle with cancer.

In 2023, Lisa Marie Presley, the only child of Elvis Presley and a singer-songwriter dedicated to her father's legacy, died at age 54.

Year in Review

Another public health crisis, fentanyl overdoses, drove impassioned discussions in this year's legislative session as lawmakers tried to address this latest phase of the opioid epidemic. Last year, 6,959 people died from an opioid overdose — a 115% jump from 2019, according to the California Department of Public Health. Much of the growth has been linked to fentanyl, which is known to be 50 times stronger than heroin and 100 times stronger than morphine.

Lawmakers introduced a

slew of fentanyl-related bills. Republicans, some Democrats and law enforcement leaders pushed for harsher penalties for fentanyl possession and dealing, but many of those bills were watered down or killed in the legislative process. Among those set to become law is one that requires community colleges and California State University campuses to provide fentanyl test strips to students. Another requires amusement parks and concert venues to have overdose antidote naloxone on hand. In the spring, Newsom announced that the state would manufacture its own naloxone as part of its CalRx initiative.

Two other key decisions for lawmakers this year came down to money, with one centering on distressed hospitals and the other lifting up low-paid health care workers.

Following the closure of Madera County's only general hospital at the start of 2023, administrators at a handful of community hospitals began to sound the alarm, noting that they, too, were in financial distress. At least two other hospitals filed for bankruptcy; several cut services, including maternity wards, directly impacting patient care. Legislators responded by approving close to $300 million in loans that were divided among 17 hospitals. Madera, however, hasn't been able to use its loan yet.

And, in the last week of the legislative session, labor unions ironed a deal with hospitals and other providers to raise pay for health care workers to at least $25 an hour through a series of pay increases beginning in 2024. But as the plan's cost becomes clearer, and with the looming state budget deficit, Gov. Gavin Newsom is suggesting that revisions are needed.

Major issues for 2024: We'll continue to watch for how many people lose their Medi-Cal coverage as part of the renewal process that California and other states restarted this year for the first time since the pandemic. This process runs through next June and lapse of coverage for potentially millions is expected. The negotiations on the health care wage plan will play out during the legislative session as well. Meanwhile, voters will decide whether to restructure the Mental Health Services Act. And lawmakers are likely to revisit efforts to combat fentanyl. An attempt to authorize psychedelics for therapy will also be back.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 1-866-539-4173 or visit this internet website www.servicelinkauction.com, using the file number assigned to this case 23-65800. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 1-866-539-4173, or visit this internet website www.servicelinkauction.com, using the file number assigned to this case 23-65800 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. Year in Review: California Homelessness Worsens Even as Housing Bills Pass

Why did the homelessness crisis become more dire in 2023, even as the Legislature passed more affordable housing laws? Home prices and rents are still increasing.

By Ben Christopher, CalMatters

If there was ever any doubt, 2023 made two things very clear. First, California lawmakers are now fully committed to the idea that the state needs to build many more homes to tackle the state’s long-term housing crisis. Second, that crisis isn’t going away anytime soon.

California’s steady rise in home prices and rents is the primary reason behind the state’s homelessness crisis, which grew even more dire in many parts of the state this year. Housing costs are also the culprit behind California’s sky-high poverty rate and its steady decline in population, as middle- and working-class residents seek cheaper places to live.

For years, many lawmakers in Sacramento preferred to leave questions of what gets built, where and under what terms to local governments. No longer.

A throng of state legislation passed in 2023 designed to clear aside local restrictions on construction and to diminish the threat of anti-development lawsuits, all with the goal of supercharging development. Affordable housing set aside for lower income Californians was a particular beneficiary.

The pro-housing shift in the Legislature is largely thanks to the severity of the crisis, but it’s also the product of a new pro-development coalition in Sacramento that includes developers, “Yes in my backyard” activists and, perhaps most crucially, the state’s unionized carpenters.

The state’s executive branch wants to spur production too. The governor’s Department of Housing and Community Development spent much of the past year pressuring local governments to plan for enough housing to meet statewide production goals.

In some cases, enforcement has meant promoting an old, but never-before-used state law — the so-called Builder’s Remedy — that allows developers to ignore zoning restrictions in cities that don’t pass their housing plans on time. In other cases it’s meant auditing local approval processes and taking reluctant cities to court, something Attorney General Rob Bonta has done or threatened to do on numerous occasions.

Construction on Casa Sueños, an affordable housing complex in Oakland, on Aug 7, 2023.

Though 2023 was a (relative) roaring success for pro-building advocates, those concerned about renter protections saw more muted gains. The Legislature passed laws that make it harder for landlords to evict tenants and that limit the size of security deposits — relatively modest changes won over the fierce opposition of the state’s powerful landlord lobby. Now that pandemic-era eviction bans enacted by state and local governments during the pandemic have largely lifted, the number of renters being tossed from their homes has shot up, driven by eviction spikes in Los Angeles and the San Francisco Bay Area. Even so, tens of thousands of tenants who turned to the state for rental assistance during the pandemic are still awaiting that help.

The politics around homelessness also took a turn. Growing impatient with the slow pace of progress, Newsom and many progressive lawmakers began embracing policies like clearing encampments and penalizing local governments for inaction, while promoting “tiny homes” as a scalable solution.

Despite all the new pro-construction legislation, a boom probably isn’t in the cards for 2024. High interest rates have put a damper on new construction and those in the business of building affordable housing say insufficient public funding remains an obstacle. Even so, the Legislature isn’t likely to let up on the cause of trying to make it easier to build apartments, duplexes and ADUs.

Major issues for 2024: Housing will be on the ballot in 2024. In March, voters will weigh in on Gov. Newsom’s bond to fund treatment and shelter for homeless Californians with mental health problems. The November ballot will be more crowded with a series of state and local affordable housing bonds, a statewide constitutional amendment aimed at making it easier to pass those bonds, and a third attempt to repeal statewide restrictions on rent control ordinances. In the Legislature, lawmakers aren’t likely to let up on the cause of trying to make it easier to build apartments, duplexes and ADUs and the state’s housing department will have its hands full making sure that cities are sticking to their housing plans.
